The Seniuks

The Clarkes

The New Year came in with a rush for Belleville General Hospital's maternity ward. For Trenton Memorial Hospital it also brought a surprise package. Before the morning was out at BGH, seven New Year babies had been born. At Trenton, one woman gave birth to twins.

First newcomer in the Quinte district was born to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Seniuk, 87 Cannifton Road (above left). At 12:55 a.m. a baby girl weighing 6 lbs. 13¾ oz., was delivered to the Seniuks. They're going to call her Susan Lee and she'll be a sister for five-year-old John Hubert Seniuk.

Proudest mother of 'em all undoubtedly was Mrs. George Clarke, 282 Front Street, Trenton. Admitted to Trenton Memorial Hospital, she gave birth to the first of twin boys at 11:20 a.m. He weighed 6 lbs. 6 oz. Just 40 minutes later, clocked at 12:01 p.m., the second boy arrived — weighing 6 lbs.

There was one other New Year's baby at Trenton, a girl for LAC and Mrs. Kirk Van Kerckhov, at 6 p.m.

Storms Follow Floods

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Winter's cold hand dealt another blow today to the five western states still reeling under Christmas week's floods that caused an estimated $1,000,000,000 damage.

Gale force winds carrying more rain and snow swept into Washington, Oregon, northern California, Idaho and Nevada Friday night, and the weather bureau expected the storm would go on through tonight.

California's flood death toll since Dec. 22 rose to 21 Friday when a nine-year-old girl was struck and killed by a dump truck working on flood relief, and a Red Cross official was fatally injured by a helicopter blade.

In Washington state, winds gusting to 84 miles an hour toppled a water tower at Tacoma Friday, tore up several roofs, and knocked down power and telephone lines.

The world's fair hotel ship Catalia filled with water and sank off the coast of Washington state, 125 miles southwest of Seattle, where it was being used as a base for sport fishing.

Headless Torso Found At Point Petre

PICTON — Police today are seeking clues to the identity of a headless torso, believed to be that of a female, found Thursday on the Point Petre shoreline of Lake Ontario.

The grim discovery sees police starting a probe completely in the dark.

The torso was badly decomposed, coroner Dr. C. R. Richmond estimating it had been in the water at least a year. The arms and legs, below the knees, also are missing from the trunk.

The discovery was made by Fred Frost, 23 Bridge Street, Picton, about 3 p.m. Thursday.

Police say the body might have been washed ashore from any point on the lake in Ontario or New York State.

The torso today was despatched to the provincial police crime laboratory in Toronto.

Nigeria's Chief Threatens Resignation But Backs Off

From AP-Reuters

LAGOS (CP)—Political leaders of Africa's most populous nation are trying to negotiate a solution to the government crisis triggered by Wednesday's controversial election.

Nigeria's President Nnamdi Azikiwe Friday cancelled a broadcast whose advance text said he would resign rather than form a new government on the basis of the election.

He met with Prime Minister Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa and other cabinet members at the state house. A government announcement said "efforts were being made to bring about a compromise."

The ruling Nigerian National alliance, backed mostly by supporters from the Moslem north and west, won a majority of seats in Parliament but opposition parties, which draw their support from the south, boycotted the balloting.

Incomplete returns gave the National Alliance 173 of the 312 seats in the House of Representatives. The United Progressive Grand Alliance, a union of opposition parties, won 32 seats. Despite the boycott the Progressive spokesmen have said their victorious candidates will resign.

More than 60 National Alliance candidates and 15 Progressive candidates were declared elected unopposed but the exact figures were in dispute.

The Progressives said they would not accept any government based on the election results. They had originally asked for the election to be postponed because of alleged irregularities.

In the text of his later withdrawn speech, Azikiwe denounced the violence that took place during the election.

The 61-year-old president mentioned curfews and refusals to allow open campaigning in certain areas, roadblocks to prevent the entry of political opponents into towns, mass arrests, intimidation and appeals to old tribal hatreds. Many polling booths were destroyed.

Winter Returns To Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—Snow and winds up to 40 miles an hour swept into central Ontario today making early-morning driving conditions hazardous.

The weather office said 3½ inches of snow had fallen on the area early today. The snow was expected to turn to freezing rain later today and precipitation was expected to end this evening.

Early - morning commuters said visibility was next to nil and drifting made driving conditions dangerous in the Metropolitan Toronto area, where the storm was concentrated.

However, provincial and Metropolitan Toronto police had no reports of accidents early today.

Winds were gusting to 41 miles an hour at suburban Scarborough and to 34 miles an hour at nearby Malton.

The storm was moving in an easterly direction and was expected to reach Ottawa tonight with snow and 20- to 25-mile-an-hour winds. Windsor, in western Ontario, received drizzle early today and winds were not heavy. Eight-mile-an-hour winds were reported at Hamilton.

Council Seat For Malaysia Behind Action

Would Be First Nation To Pull Out of Body

JAKARTA (Reuters)—A foreign ministry spokesman said today he knew nothing of a report that Indonesia had withdrawn from the United Nations.

(In New York a member of the Indonesian delegation to the UN said today his country had withdrawn and informed Secretary-General U Thant of the decision Thursday night.)

The spokesman, Ganis Harsano, confirmed the government had given instructions to its mission at the world body to withdraw if Malaysia becomes a member of the Security Council.

When it was suggested that Malaysia automatically became a member of the Security Council after midnight Dec. 31, he said he was not certain on this point.

Indonesia withdrew, it would become the first member to do so in the UN's 20-year history. The sudden move came during a grave crisis for the United Nations, caught in a deadlock over peacekeeping dues. The Soviet Union has threatened to quit if it loses its General Assembly vote because of failure to pay its share of the assessments.

Indonesian President Sukarno said Thursday night his country would quit the world body if Malaysia were voted in a Security Council spot vacated by Czechoslovakia. Malaysia was selected for the seat by the General Assembly Wednesday. There was no vote because of the truce agreed on to forestall a showdown between the U.S. and Russia.

RELAYED INTENTIONS

Sumarjo Sosowardojo, minister counsellor of the UN delegation, said Ambassador Lambertus Palar has communicated orally Indonesia's intention to withdraw to General Assembly President Alex Quaison-Sackey of Ghana and to the office of Secretary-General U Thant.

The Indonesian delegation will meet later today to figure out what steps, if any, could stop the organization, the Indonesian diplomat said.

The UN charter makes no provision for the resignation of a member. Presumably, written notification would have to be given.

Sukarno refuses to recognize Malaysia, a federation of former British colonies that borders on Indonesia, and has threatened to crush it.

ACTRESS DIES

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Gertrude Michael, 53, a film star of the 1930s and an actress for 30 years, died Thursday at her home, it was disclosed Friday.

JAKARTA (AP) — President Sukarno's critics call him a boastful playboy with a fondness for beautiful women, but he has ruled Indonesia with an iron grip for 20 years.

"The easy thing to do is call him an aging playboy who can be bought off with some plenes or tanks," a Western diplomat recently said, "but it's a lot more complicated than that."

Sukarno's sudden move to pull Indonesia out of the United Nations indicated that the diplomat knew Sukarno better than many of his critics."

"Bung Karno" or Brother Karno as he is known to Indonesia's more than 100,000,000 inhabitants, may be boastful, may like women and may be aging. At 63, however, he remains an unpredictable force on the international scene who poses increasing problems for the Western world.

"I will crush Malaysia before the cock crows on New Year's Day," Sukarno warned in 1964. Malaysia was far from crushed as the new year dawned Friday. Sukarno had ordered four invasions of the federation's mainland during 1964. All were repulsed.

I'M NO COMMUNIST

"I am no Communist," he once said, "but I am open minded. Don't be afraid of being leftist."

In 1964, Indonesia appeared to veer more sharply toward the Communist camp. Relations with the West, particularly the United States, reached a low point.

Sukarno signed an arms agreement with the Soviet Union, said "to hell with U.S. aid," and predicted that the United States would lose the war in South Viet Nam.

As Indonesia's first and only president—he was never elected but assumed the job—Sukarno has led a charmed life, escaping assassination attempts at not four times.

One of Asia's most colorful figures and a great orator, he can whip a crowd into tears, laughter or hysteria.

Once, on one of his many trips abroad, he lectured about a French magazine photographer after the publication called him a "great seducer." The photographer replied, "In Paris that is a compliment."

Sukarno's wife is the United States, officials in Detroit said he asked them to supply him with an assortment of women. Unbelieving, they refused.

Sukarno's days at the head of the world's largest archipelago may be numbered. He underwent a kidney operation last year and has been under treatment.

Viet Nam Battle Abates

BINH GIA (AP)—The battle for Binh Gia village apparently ended today in a fruitless search for the communists who wounded or killed nearly 500 government troops during the nearly week-long fight.

It was the biggest loss in a single action suffered by the government in the four - year guerrilla war against the Viet Cong.

Two battalions recovered the casualties, half of whom were marines. In one battlefield alone the bodies of 67 marines were stacked in a paddyfield. Dozens more dead were carried out from a rubber plantation.

Less than 10 Viet Cong bodies were found, but U.S. advisers believed many more enemy casualties were suffered. Some estimates placed the number of enemy dead at more than 100.

New intelligence reports that major Communist buildup 50 miles north of Saigon coupled with the heavy fighting at Binh Gia led some sources to predict that large - scale battles might become more common in the war.

Jumps From Plane Without Chute, Has It Handed to Him by Helper

ARVIN, Calif. (AP) — Sky diver Rod Pack says he leaped from a plane at 14,000 feet Friday without a parachute.

He rode safely to earth, he says, on a parachute handed to him by a fellow sky diver who followed him out of the plane and caught up with him 4,000 feet below.

Pack, 26-year-old movie stuntman, said it was a first in aerial dare-devilry.

"They claimed it couldn't be done, but we proved differently."

The pilot of the chartered plane confirmed Pack's account. So did two sky-diving aerial photographers who said they followed Pack's descent and took movies and still pictures of the feat.

Pack, a blonde former carpenter who took up sky diving because "floating around in the air has a thrill of its own," told how he thought up the stunt more than a year ago:

"You always hear somebody joking about jumping out of a plane without a parachute. Then I heard another boy. It would be the greatest stunt ever pulled and got to thinking, 'Why couldn't it be done?'"

He and his sky-diving buddy, carpenter Bob Allen, 25, made a few practice jumps, passing back and forth the lightweight reserve chute that saved Pack Friday.

They and the two photographers circled at 14,000 feet over a plowed field—a sky divers' drop zone—near this community 80 miles northwest of Hollywood.

Then, Pack said, he jumped out, wearing a parachute harness but no chute. It was his 534th jump as a sky diver.

"I flared out, lying on my stomach with my feet and arms out, grabbing as much air as possible to slow me down."

Allen followed him out of the plane immediately, wearing a regulation back chute and a reserve chest chute.

Pack, who weighs 187 pounds, wore a skin-diver belt with 30 pounds of weights to approximate the weight of the parachute-laden Allen. Otherwise, he said, Allen might have passed him up in the air "and I'd have

Mixed Weather and Rash of Deaths Mark Start of Year for Canadians

By The Canadian Press

While most Canadians were making resolutions or recovering from their celebrations the night before, an increasing number participated in the ancient tradition of New Year's Day levees across Canada Friday.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Pearson led more than 1,000 dignitaries, diplomats, soldiers and citizens who called to pay their respects to Governor-General Georges Vanier in the Senate chamber.

In Quebec City, where the weather was crisp and clear, an estimated 3,500 men turned up to greet Lieutenant-Governor Paul Comptois.

New Year's Day weather in Ontario and Quebec was generally cold, a storm off Newfoundland sent winds up to 60 miles an hour blowing across the Atlantic provinces, blizzards and below - zero temperatures were moving into Alberta and Saskatchewan and British Columbia faced many snow and freezing temperatures.

Polar bear clubs, which make a tradition of a New Year's Day swim, had varying luck in Burlington, Ont., and Vancouver.

Sixteen men and a woman plunged before a crowd of 1,500, five at 51 air temperature, in addition to see who could stay in the longest, but all went out together after five minutes and four seconds.

In Vancouver, the water was 42 degrees and the air was 37 degrees—a break in the recent cold spell that has been plaguing the Pacific Coast. Fifty-five swimmers turned up for a dive into English Bay.

Ontario weather turned colder after a mild spell. In Ottawa the traditional New Year's Day Frost Bowl football game between teams from the upper and lower parts of Ontario was played on a field largely covered by ice. The temperature was 15 degrees.

Quebec weather was a boon to skiers, but in Ontario only five at 51 ski areas reported adequate snow conditions and in four of these artificial snowmaking equipment was used.

Most Canadian cities reported a New Year's Eve and New Year's Day traffic accidents had been reported in Canada.

The first baby born in Canada in 1965 was a son for Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fritz of Bell Island, Nfld. He arrived at one second after midnight.

New Year's births included triplets born to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Gravelle in Cornwall, Ont., and three sets of twins—boys to Mr. and Mrs. John Peak in Toronto and girls to Mr. and Mrs. Murray Gouk of Alsask, Sask., and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pruden of Lac la Biche, Alta.

Roderick Campbell, Trenton, One of 107 New Queen's Counsels

TORONTO (CP)—A Liberal member of Parliament, Ian Wahn of Perth, P.Q., is included in the list of 107 new Queen's Counsel named today by Ontario Attorney-General.

The list also includes twins and the first Japanese - Canadian to be named Queen's Counsel.

Mr. Wahn was one of a sprinkling of prominent Liberals approved by Ontario's Progressive Conservative cabinet for the honor. In recent years the naming of QCs has come under fire by opposition members who said it was being used as a reward for political favors.

Attorney - General Arthur Wishart said at his home in Sault Ste. Marie that party politics were not a factor in the selection. "We tried to choose those who thought distinction to their profession and the community," he said.

Lindsay Crawford, twin brother of the Toronto suburb of Swansea, was in 1948 the first Japanese-Canadian to be called to the bar in Ontario.

The twins in the list were James A. Crawford, 54, Twp. M. Neither is active in politics.

The new QCs include:

Waterloo — Harvey Edwards, Clifford Whitney.

Newmarket — Joseph Dales, William Errington.

Brampton — James Beatty.

Trenton — Roderick Campbell.

Lindsay — Melvin Cunningham.

Preston — George Davies.

Renfrew — Kenneth Dawe.

Parents Given Opportunity To Interview H. S. Teachers

During the next two weeks the parents of students in Bellville's three secondary schools will have an opportunity to learn at first hand how their youngsters are progressing.

At Bellevilla Collegiate Institute parents of students in Grades 9 and 11 are invited to attend the lessons on Wednesday evening, January 6, and students in the Grade 10, 12 and 13 will have a similar opportunity on Monday, January 11.

At Moira Secondary School teachers of Grades 11, 12 and 13 will be available for interviews on Tuesday evening, January 5, and teachers of Grades 9 and 10 will be in their classrooms on Tuesday, January 12.

Quinte Secondary School will observe Open House on Thursday evening, January 7, for Grades 9 and 13 and on Monday, January 11, for Grades 10, 11 and 12.

All schools will be open at 7.00 p.m. on the evenings indicated and teachers will be in their rooms from 7.30 to 9.30 p.m. for interviews.

Mr. E. A. Orr, supervising principal, says the interviews will necessary have to be brief but points out that they do serve a very useful purpose in discovering causes for insufficient progress and in providing of profitable solutions of problems.

As result of such conferences, pupils' achievement has, in many cases in the past, been improved.

Parents of students who have failed in one or more of the fall terms were especially urged to avail themselves of this opportunity to talk with teachers.

THREE WAY PROCESS

Education is a three-way process involving student, teacher and parent, said Mr. Orr, "and maximum accomplishment can only come when there is complete co-operation among all three participants. Our teachers are conscientiously endeavoring to lead their charges to the full realization of their capabilities. By spending one or two hours at school on one of these evenings we parents can demonstrate our interest in the education welfare of our children and our willingness to share with the teachers the responsibility of preparing these young people to meet life's situations, said.

Invitational letters outlining the specific procedures to be followed in the various schools have been sent to all the parents. In order that teachers may meet as many parents as possible in the time allotted, interviews will be by appointment and will be limited to five minutes with each teacher. If more time is required arrangements for further consultation at a later date may be made.

Bill Hurst Skates Through Ice on Bay

Seventeen-year-old Bill Hurst, Dundas Street, West, is little the worse for his experience today after falling through the ice on the Bay of Quinte on New Year's Day, while he was skating west of Bessemer with a friend.

About 200 feet from shore Bill broke through thin ice and had to be hauled to safety by fellow skater Ted Bovay, aged 19, who was able to throw him a coat.

The thin ice which the Hurst boy broke through was little more than a half inch thick and covered a current in the bay which had opened because of the mild weather during Christmas week.

"The water was well over my head," Bill told The Ontario Intelligencer today.

5 Merchants in Shopping Plaza Charged Under Closing Bylaw

Belleville's store-closing bylaw is heading for its first test.

City police have charged five merchants at the Belleville Shopping Plaza with infringing the city's store-closing by-law.

The charges followed a complaint laid to the department, source of which police did not identify.

One report said the Downtown Businessmen's Association had filed the complaint, but an association official today denied knowledge of it.

Police said following the complaint they visited the Plaza Wednesday and warned store operators against staying open that night beyond the hour regulated by the by-law.

Despite this, police claim, five stores remained open for sales which against the ordinance's prohibition.

Summonses are now being sent to operators of Burke's Men's Wear, Cherney's, Maher's Shoes, Shalimar and Agnew Surpass.

Allen "doubled up tight" to cut air resistance and overtake Pack.

They manoeuvered their hands and arms until they were side by side, 4,000 feet below the plane. Allen handed Pack the reserve chute.

"He wouldn't let go of it until I gave him the word," Allen said.

He got the parachute package under him, so that wind pressure pushed it up against his horizontal body, and fastened the chute's hooks to the two D rings at abdomen level—six his harness. This manoeuvre ate up another 1,000 feet, he said.

CAMERAS ON HELMETS

Meanwhile, freelance photographers Doyle Fields, 30, and Bob Burpee, 24, falling free from the plane, were taking pictures with cameras strapped to their helmets.

Pack, white-clad against the blue sky, said he "looked around to see where everybody was."

"I smiled up at them—I could see a couple of feet but couldn't tell whose they were because of the suits, my eyes—and pulled the ripcord.

"The sensation is terrible, I tell you. With the parachute hooked to your stomach you come to a screeching halt from 120 miles an hour. Nothing to go one way and your head another tilt they about bit each other. But it was a good feeling at the time."

IN MEMORIAM

CARTER — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Carter who died Dec. 31, 1963 at Belleville, 1964.

Lonely and kind in all his ways, Upright and just to the end of his days.

Sincere and kind in heart and mind.

Beautiful memories he left behind.

Those memories are treasured and cherished by mother, sisters Lois and Margaret, brothers Ken and Ronald.

MORAN — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Mary Moran who passed away Jan. 2nd, 1963.

I little knew when I woke that day

The sorrow the day would bring.

That I would lose a loved one dear

To part with one I loved so dear,

Her memory is sweet and sacred,

Why some things have to be,

God in mercy took and gave,

But a token of affection,

And a heartache still for me.

More each day we miss you,

Though not a word we say,

You will never be forgotten

Until we meet some day.

Little sad, know the sorrow,

That is within our hearts concealed,

—Always remembered by husband Bert.

ASSELSTINE — In ever loving memory of our dear grandson Bradley, who passed away January 2nd, 1963.

I sigh sometimes to see thy face,

And hear thine accents sweet,

I'll leave thee to the care of Him,

Who watches all we meet.

—Lovingly remembered by Grandma Hilton.

Union Asks to Meet Council To Negotiate New Contract

PUC Wants Breakdown Of 'Extra' Bill

TRENTON — Trenton council and the Public Utilities Commission won't find out how much "extras" in connection with the Raynar Construction Company's installation of watermains on Dufferin and Sidney Streets this summer will be until consulting engineer Jack Tomlinson meets with Rayner in the new year.

The PUC, billed for approximately $4,800 of the tentative "extra" bill for $48,000, wants a breakdown on the bill and has suggested to the town that not more hold-back payments be made to Rayner until all "defects" have been corrected. The town has undertaken to do nothing up operations and Rayner will foot the bill for these.

Meanwhile, the commission has asked for direction to move a hydrant from in front of a Dufferin Ave. home — a normal directive from town council—as part of the "corrective" work to be undertaken.

LOST THREE FINGERS, THUMB

Ray Fairman, a Trenton insurance broker, whose left hand was severely injured in a hunting accident last Tuesday, lost three fingers and his thumb from his hand as a result of the accident. Mr. Fairman was hunting in the Dug Hill district when he stumbled and fell, discharging his gun.

Checkerboard Sign on Dock Is Requested

TRENTON — The Trenton Traffic and Parking Committee (chairman Councillor C. V. Graham), recommended to town council Wednesday night that a school guard be placed in the vicinity of Grace United Church Sunday services. Church officials feel the upsurge in traffic on Dundas Street East warrants this. Members of the Friday Sighters' Club at the Church have been acting as guards, but now feel they have no official sanction to do this and are concerned about the personal liability should an accident occur.

Councillor Graham said the guard would have to be paid $ . . . possibly a dollar an hour.

Councillor Gerald Weaver suggested, and the rest of council concurred, that once Grace Church received this special attention, every other church in town would want the same thing.

Councillor Joseph Gould came up with the suggestion a portable crossing sign might be placed on the highway on Sundays and council agreed to this suggestion. Town engineer Eric Aldersey will arrange for the sign.

Proper school crossing signs will be placed on South Street, adjacent to College Street School and the zone will be marked 25 mph zone.

Traffic signals in front of Prince Charles School on Dufferin Ave. will be discontinued.

A letter will be sent to the federal government asking that a checkerboard sign be placed on the government dock at the east end of Albert Street. The sign and a barrier, will serve as a deterrent to motorists plunging into the bay at this point.

"No Parking" will be permitted on the north side of Quinte Street, between Dundas Street West and the L. and P. parking lot. Bell Telephone officials will be asked to relocate a telephone booth at the intersection of Dundas and Quinte, as cars parking there are creating a problem.

"No Parking" will be permitted on the south side of Dundas Street East between the southwest corner of Byron Street to 100 feet easterly.

And proper floodlights for the protection of policemen on point duty will be installed at the intersection of Dundas Street West with King Street and Front Street and Dundas Street East and Ontario Street.

TRENTON — The Canadian Union of Public Employees has asked for an early meeting with Trenton council to negotiate the terms of a new contract for municipal office employees and the public works' department. The union has suggested that the office workers be considered as a separate unit, apart from the works' department employees. Sections of the Act covering such procedures were "interpreted" for council by town solicitor Stuart Campbell, as clerk comptroller O. W. Larry said at Wednesday night's council meeting that it "would have taken a better man" than he was to interpret the rulings in the Act. Council will arrange a meeting with the union in the new year, once the 1965 council has swung into action.

NO OBJECTIONS

Trenton council has no objection to a street names proposed for a new sub-division west of the town, councillors decided Wednesday night.

The proposed names, York, Cameron, Christelle, Walter and Rose Streets, do not "match" any names in town and this should prove a boon to mail carriers and taxi drivers, belaguered until last year with streets that were duplicated in the boundaries of the corporation itself. Last year, a number of such names were changed.

WILL NOT ADVERTISE

Trenton council decided Wednesday night not to advertise in a "World-Wide" special issue of the Financial Post. The special publication will be mailed out to 100 countries, but Canada is not on the list.

WILL CHANGE NAME

Trenton council passed a bylaw Wednesday night to have the section of Sidney Street, lying between Heber Street and the bay changed in name to "South Street."

This change in name must be approved by the county judge. A meeting will be held on Jan. 2 at which street residents may protest the change, and if no protestations are forthcoming, the change will take place automatically.

CHANGE PROCEDURE BY-LAW

Town council has approved by by-law a change in the town's order and proceedings of council.

From now on, no special meetings of council may be called unless within the previous notice to all members . . . except in cases of "dire emergency." In which event, notice for which the original meeting is called, may be discussed at these special meetings.

Town Treasurer Not Replaced, Will Change Ad

TRENTON — Trenton town council hasn't had much luck in its attempt to replace town treasurer, Douglas Jagger, who leaves Trenton the first of next week to take up duties as city treasurer at Barrie.

Six applicants have answered newspaper ads, calling for a man versed in municipal financing. Council doesn't want to pay for a chartered accountant but does want. Three of the applicants are local.

As the rider "versed in municipal financing," may have caused capable men or women to hold back from answering the advertisements, council has now decided to record the ad to the point where persons not skilled at municipal financing may apply.

INSTALL LATERALS

TRENTON — Town engineer Eric Aldersey reported to the town council Wednesday night that the sewer main on North Byron Street was in and laterals were being installed.

On Kidd Ave. it's a different story. Only about one-third of the work is done. An 18-foot cut has been made and workmen are having to blast their way through a particularly resistant kind of clay. It isn't rock—and certainly not the kind of clay one meets up with from day to day. The best way it can be described, says Mr. Aldersey, is by its newly-coined word, "clock."

APPROVED BY QUEEN — The red maple leaf in the centre of the new Canadian flag has a streamlined look, in the official design approved by the Queen on Christmas Eve. The new leaf has 11 sharp points with round "valleys" between, unlike the sharp valleys in versions issued earlier by the flag committee. The vertical bars match the red in the leaf. (CP Newsmap)

$97 Collected By Committee, $197 Paid Out

TRENTON — Harold S. Blakely, chairman of the Trenton Committee of Adjustment, reported to town council this week that his committee had heard eight applications for tolerance of minor infractions of the town's zoning by-laws. Six were approved; one was rejected and council was asked to re-zone one particular piece of property.

As applicants must pay a fee, the committee collected $97.80, and spent $197.50. Committee members receive a token fee and other expenses are for writing materials, stamps, etc.

BUY PART OF ISLAND

Council this week approved the sale of a part of Lecaves Island in North Trenton to T. C. Rogers for $300. A proviso to approval was that Mr. Rogers must erect a 10,000 foot square (minimum) building, as promised, within a year, or the property will revert to the town and Mr. Rogers will be refunded his purchase price.

Car Is Stolen, Runs Into Bridge

TRENTON — Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Frank Jesty on New Year's Eve left the family car parked outside their residence, 14 Hammond Street and took a cab to the Middleton Park home of a friend.

When they returned police were seeking the driver of their automobile which had crashed into the town bridge, causing extensive damage.

The car, taken from outside the Jesty home, smashed into the bridge about 4.55 a.m., striking it three times before it was abandoned.

Leg Amputated Well Above Cancer Area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sixteen-year-old Ronald Baker entered 1965 in the deep sleep of medication.

Beside him, through the night his brother-in-law sat beside Ronald's hospital bed in case he might awake and want someone to talk to — perhaps about his leg.

Thursday doctors amputated Ronald's left leg—the one he once vowed he'd rather die than lose.

The surgery went well and his condition is good, Said his surgeon: "We got it."

He was referring to the cancer below Ronald's left knee. The amputation was above the knee, and well above the cancerous area.

When Ronald learned doctors wanted to amputate, he ran away from home. At Flagstaff, Ariz., he stopped running, and came home Christmas Eve to face the possibility of losing his leg.

Doctors convinced him he'd die of cancer if they didn't go ahead with the operation.

It was performed New Year's Eve. It took less than two hours.

Britain Eats Deeply Into Massive Aid

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—Britain has eaten deeply into the massive financial aid provided by the United States, Canada and other countries and likely will be forced to seek a renewal of multi - billion - dollar standby credits next month.

While the treasury has declined to disclose full details, it is understood that virtually all of the $1,000,000,000 medium-term loan provided by the International Monetary Fund last month has been used up and that Britain has dipped extensively into the short - term $3,000,000,000 raised hurriedly from 12 countries, including Canada, in November.

Possibly one - third of that $2,000,000,000 has been used to support the exchange value of the pound. While it was originally announced that the unprecedented peacetime standby credit was for a period of three to six months, it is understood that at least a portion of the amount used falls due for repayment in three months and that some arrangements may be necessary to seek another three-month extension.

The pound ran into trouble when 1964 reports showed that Britain was piling up a huge foreign-trade deficit, caused by heavy imports outpacing exports, and that a drainage of investment capital increased after the Labor government took office.

Reports for the first nine months of 1964 now show that Britain had a balance-of-payments deficit of $2,200,000,000 ($897,000,000) in current-account transactions and a total of $2,503,000,000 on the export of long-term capital is added.

ESTIMATES PEAK

James Callaghan, chancellor of the exchequer, has estimated the over-all deficit in current and capital account for 1964 will reach a peak of $700,000,000 or $800,000,000.

The bank of England had hoped to draw investment funds back to Britain with a seven-per-cent central bank interest rate, announced Nov. 23, but so far the rate has not proved to be much of a magnet. The United States may have blunted the edge of this rate attraction by increasing its own rate.

However, central bank authorities anticipate there may be some "turn-around" within the next few months, increasing the likelihood of reducing Britain's foreign currency reserves.

The 15-per-cent extra import tariff, imposed in October, is expected to bite into the foreign-trade deficit by reducing imports while the government's drive to increase exports starts showing results. However, European exporters are still pressing Britain to reduce and then eliminate this extra tariff and the pressure may increase to a point where British action will prove unavoidable before spring.

Some British newspapers are already speculating that the first cut in the tariff will be announced before April.

New Year's Day Came in With Bang

New Year's came in with a bang in the Belleville area . . . a bang so loud it woke up half the district.

Source of the sound detonation — about 8.10 a.m. - - still is not known.

Conjectures still come down heavily on the side of a sonic boom caused by an aircraft crashing the sound barrier.

Farmers' Union Holds Meeting

BONARLAW — The December meeting of Local 171 Ontario Farmers' Union was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cosbey.

Jean Williamson gave an interesting talk on the "Outlook Conference" that was held in Ottawa. New business included a discussion of the march on Ottawa.

Brian Cosbey gave a musical selection. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Mumby on January 14.

ing gravity of the British financial structure is reflected by the huge debt Britain has incurred in protecting the pound against further devaluation. Aside from partial drawings of the $3,000,000,000 standby credits that must be repaid or renewed shortly, Britain has to build up reserves to repay the $1,000,000,000 International Monetary Fund loan in three years.

The debt to the U.S. includes about $500,000,000 as the lend-lease settlement.

Because of the financial crisis, Britain had to ask for deferment of the 1964 instalment payments.

Cameramen Taken for Ride By Prince

VADUZ, Liechtenstein (AP) — Prince Philip devised an elaborate stratagem Friday to prevent reporters and photographers from observing the skiing lessons of his children, Prince Charles and Princess Anne.

Charles, 16, heir to the British throne, and his sister Anne, 14, are on a skiing holiday here.

Early Friday the royal visitors and friends swept out of the castle as usual in a five-car motorcade and headed toward the Liechtenstein ski resort of Malbun, 10 miles to the east.

The photographers followed behind up the narrow winding road, unable to overtake the motorcade or to see what was happening at the front. The fourth car held them up.

At Malbun the photographers soled that the first three cars, containing Charles and Anne, had disappeared. Prince Philip, driving the fourth car, grinned broadly, did a turn and drove straight back to Vaduz Castle.

Charles and Anne spent the day skiing undisturbed with their instructor, Serge Ender, at the resort of Wildhaus, 30 miles away in Switzerland.

Duke of Windsor Out of Hospital After Surgery

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The Duke of Windsor has ended an 18-day hospital stay with assurances from his doctor he is well on the way to recovery from serious abdominal surgery.

The former British monarch, now 70, and his duchess left the Methodist Hospital Thursday for a short limousine ride to a nearby hotel.

The royal couple is expected to remain in a ninth - floor two-bedroom suite of the hotel about a week and then return to New York City by train.

Soccer Player Is Honored In Queen's New Year's List

LONDON (CP)—A Canadian-born pilot honored in the Queen's New Year's list celebrated in workaday fashion—by flying his jet to New York on New Year's Day.

Captain John Woodman, 50, who has flown both the Queen and Queen Mother Elizabeth on official journeys, was made a member of the Royal Victorian Order (RVO) in the annual honors list. The distinction is awarded for personal services to the sovereign. Woodman was also mentioned in the 1960 list.

A native of Cameron Lake, B.C., Woodman joined British Airways Corporation in 1936, rose to become chief pilot and is one of the most experienced jet pilots on Boeing 707s.

"He just left for New York," his wife said when a reporter called their Surrey home.

Chief feature of the Queen's list was a new citation, "for services to export," advised by Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson to help in curing Britain's economic ills.

BUSINESSMEN HONORED

Eleven businessmen were honored in this category, including Maurice Fiennes, member of a consortium developing oil in the North Sea, and Ronald Thornton, banker and member of the Export Council for Europe. Both became knights.

Soccer, the working man's game, was honored by three list gifts: a knighthood for the ever-young player Stanley Matthews, who is crowding 50. Three Olympic gold medalists got OBEs.

In line with Labor policy, no hereditary titles were awarded, but four peers got life titles. Science and technology received life peerages.

They included Sir Howard Florey, 66, Australian - born scientist who worked with Sir Alexander Fleming on the discovery of penicillin. Florey won the Nobel Prize in 1945, one year after he was awarded the Charles Mickle fellowship at the University of Toronto.

Other peerages went to: George Cole, chairman of Unilever Limited; Sir Christopher Hinton, pioneer in developing nuclear power statichs; Sir Christopher Hinton, pioneer in developing nuclear power stations; and Sir William Holford, professor of town planning.

While engineers, scientists and exporters featured the list of honors, the biggest publication was also followed of honoring both military and "brass hats" at the top of their professions, including servicemen around the world.

WINS CBE

Edward McMillan, 48, a Royal Air Force squadron leader stationed at Chatham, Ont., educated in England now stationed at Singapore, became an officer in the Order of the British Empire.

Sir Saville Garner, 56, now permanent under - secretary of state at the Commonwealth relations office and high commissioner to Canada in 1956-61, was promoted to knight grand cross in the Most Honorable Order of the Bath of St. Michael and St. George.

Alexander Cumrall, 47, senior British trade commissioner in Canada, was appointed companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

For Wood, the BOAC pilot, the award of an MVO, fourth class, was his second mention in a New Year's honors list. In 1960 he received the Queen's commendation for valuable services in the air.

"Big John" Woodman, who stands six-foot-three, flew the Queen mother to Montreal en route to New Zealand on her 1958 four and in 1961 he flew Queen Elizabeth to Ghana for her official visit to that African country. He has flown more than 2,000,000 miles.

His step-daughter, Mrs. A. D. Thornton, lives in Baie d'Urfe, Que., a suburb of Montreal.

Must Replace White Ensign With New Flag

HALIFAX (CP) — Defence headquarters at Ottawa Friday said the Navy by mid-year will drop the White Ensign when the new Canadian maple leaf flag is proclaimed for official use a few weeks and immediately stirred up a heated controversy here in Canada's largest naval base.

Navy ships now fly the White Ensign at the stern and, on certain occasions, the Blue Ensign at the bow and Red Ensign at the masthead. The White Ensign is identical with that flown by ships of the Royal Navy; Blue Ensign is reserved for civilian emblem. The blue and red ensigns carry the Canadian coat of arms in the fly.

Friday's signal from Ottawa said the new red-and-white maple leaf flag will replace the ensigns now in use on ships and shore establishments.

Rear-Admiral Hugh F. Pullen, 59, retired chief of the navy's Atlantic Command, said the order "is an arrangement made with everything the navy has stood for."

DEPLORES ORDER

"Who is responsible for saying that the White Ensign, under which so many Canadian have served, is to be scrapped in favor of a meaningless contenance such a thing!"

Admiral Pullen was also critical of an "arrangement" that a single distinctive flag for the integrated armed service should be substituted.

"The same objections apply," he said. "We wish to be known as sailors."

He would not approve adding the Canadian maple leaf to the White Ensign either.

The red maple leaf that Canadian ships carry on their Canadian ships carry on their Canadian ensigns is sufficient to distinguish them from other Commonwealth navies, he said.

Admiral Pullen, a native of Oakville, Ont., retired from the service in 1961. He lives in Halifax.

Teachers Take a Hand

Ontario high-school teachers have decided to play an active role in the improvement of the province's educational system, to clear up "the mess which exists . . . at the moment."

Good for them!

There may be some who regarded this as always part of a teacher's business. This, though, has not been so. Teachers, by and large, have been content to instruct their students as best they could within the framework of a system designed by the provincial Department of Education and local school boards.

Other citizens who are fully aware of this, and who approve the principles behind this division of responsibility in education, may feel that the teachers are preparing to interfere in an area in which they should not be concerned.

Their decision can be likened to the employees of an industry in financial difficulties deciding to tell the management what it should do to remedy the situation.

Some middle road between these extremes in interpreting the planned intervention of teachers appears desirable and we do not think it is difficult to find it.

Teachers obviously have a much more intimate knowledge of those things which are wrong with our schools than have average citizens. They also have professional training which will assist them in suggesting remedies. Their knowledge should be used.

At the same time, it will be the responsibility of the Department of Education to insist that the system of education, while it is the teachers' business, is not solely the business of the teachers.

Those professionally competent and dedicated people should be listened to with care and respect, but in the final analysis the objective of the educational system, what it is designed to achieve, cannot be determined solely by the teachers, but only by the people as a whole, through their elected representatives.

There are certain limitations, such as those of cost and the community's control over school plant and school staffs, once the objective has been determined we must entrust the choice of methods used to achieve it to those with professional training.

The Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation which has decided to create a five-man secondary education commission, appears to see its role in much this light.

Brantford, chairman of a committee which carried out early planning, is reported to have said that it is hoped the Federation will be able to put up such persuasive arguments that the Department of Education will have no alternative but to agree to changes advocated by the teachers.

Change by persuasion is certainly well within the right of the teachers, but the layman truly interested in his children and their future ought to establish his right to a watching brief and intervene in the event that he considers any proposed reforms likely to defeat the objective of education.

It would help, of course, if we laymen could reach a general agreement as to what this objective should be. Do we merely want our schools to teach our children how to make a living? Or how to be as happy as possible? Or do we want them stimulated to achieve the maximum within their mental powers?

One for Ripley

Truth is really stranger than fiction.

New proof of that cliché is provided by a news report from Toronto.

There a 19-year-old youth pleaded guilty to a charge of armed robbery.

A Quebec expert testified that the boy had been an alcoholic since the age of 11.

The accused's mother said she had had no time to spend with her son because she worked such long hours—as manager and director of an alcoholic treatment centre.

More than charity ought to begin at home.

I think that there is a very unfortunate tendency to believe in that which is popular. If many people believe in something, people who are unprepared to examine the question for themselves take the view that their own idea is perhaps best made to conform with that of the majority. This is, of course, a terribly dangerous thing for science. Science is made by the destruction of theories. It's made by changing ideas. And once one new generation of scientists is brought up with the idea of, so to speak, truth by popularity or truth by simplicity, I think that we will have gone a long way to destroy the basis for future science.—Professor Larry Commoner of St. Louis.

There Is Something to Be Said in Holding Your Own

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Making the rounds of the Capital's Christmas cocktail circuit you hear the story of how British Prime Minister Harold Wilson gave Prime Minister Pearson what must have been one of the very few laughs he enjoyed in the final politically painful fortnight at the recent marathon Session ground to its excruciating end.

A true story, drawn from his experiences just the day before in Washington, Mr. Wilson told it as a Pearson dinner guest at the Sussex Drive official residence.

President Johnston and he had finished their opening round of NATO-defence negotiations, and they hadn't been exactly easy, recounted Mr. Wilson, then had adjourned for lunch.

It was a White House affair, and even though it came at midday, there was a certain impressive formality about it, with State Secretary Rusk and Foreign Minister Patrick Gordon Walker and other such top-ranking presidential and prime ministerial aides in attendance.

Up popped the President to start things off with the opening toast.

The morning's defence negotiations with him, the President told Mr. Wilson, reminded him of Mark Twain's tale of walking along a strange New England road and coming to a farmer leaning on a fence how far it was to his friend's home.

STANDING STILL

"About a mile and a half," the farmer answered.

Twain kept walking and asking the same question of each farmer he passed.

He always got the same reply: "About a mile and a half."

Out of breath, Mark Twain finally asked:

"Thank God I am holding my own."

INSTANT NEWS

In the strange political quiet of the off - Session Christmas-New Year's holiday, the Commons holiday, beware of what has become well, if not-so-favorably known as the "instant story."

It is the result of a new reportorial technique of "instant news" which might well be known as the "nothing story."

Developed by what its members feel is the "free and responsible press," the technique is tailored to reach a particular and peculiar needs of viewers on the hour of the half hour."

MICROPHONE DIALOGUE

The technique, which happens on Parliament Hill, during or between Commons sessions, can be quite complicated, and unquestionably of considerable importance since it bears directly on the way the public pay, the way they are raised and spent, and their effect on the national economy.

So this kind of reportage can take research to assemble and space to be written, and the time required to read and fully comprehend it.

It can be done instantly, and so it is of little use as "instant news."

Inventive if nothing else, the "electronic press" has supmounted this little difficulty by creating, if not actually manufacturing their "instant news" for their hourly and half-hourly bulletins.

With microphone in hand and tape recorder on shoulder they accost the readily available Opposition spokesman — ideally conservative leader Diefenbaker — and thrust at him a leading question on any sort of provocative question. They then "edit" the tape, retaining only what they call the "guts of the guy," and broadcast it.

Those charge around to dig up a Government spokesman — preferably Prime Minister Pearson — and repeat, appropriately what Dief has just said, tape HIS reply, "edit" to the "guts" and broadcast it. Then can and has gone on and on through three or four responses and countless repeats as a sort of electronic dialogue.

Just the other day, the "nothing" story was made plain and clear when Mr. Diefenbaker, signed on the radio news to "say something" suggested — but being careful to note that he had — that there was an RCMP report on Mr. Pearson in the Mafia affair.

Informed of this rumor — which Mr. Diefenbaker had admitted was without foundation when he passed it on — Mr. Pearson fired back with an angry denial.

And so it went, like a ping-pong ball, a silly exchange, creating "instant news" over something that didn't exist.

One of the youngest incumbents of the Mayor's chair in this city for many years, took office today at the inaugural meeting of the City Council. After being proclaimed Mayor by the City Clerk, he was escorted to the dais by two new members of this year's council, and was adorned with his badge of office by ex-Mayor Harry Rollins, who wished for the new incumbent every success in his new office and assured him the support of the citizens and the council in carrying out his many tasks. The invocation was given by Rev. Grant Sparling, rector of Christ Church, and of which the Mayor is a member.

In addressing the council and those guests on the outside of the council rail, Mayor Folwell stated, "From the results of the election, I believe I have the full confidence of the electorate and I hope that this confidence is not misplaced and that the council and I will give you a year of useful service."

Nervous Tension Easy Cause of Headaches

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had headaches for 20 years and I've been through two clinics. The doctors diagnosed them as nervous tension headaches, which I refuse to believe because in the morning when I wake up my head aches the hardest. It seems to me that after a night of relaxation I should be at my best.

I have had drugs prescribed for nervous tension but three bottles didn't help. What do you advise? I ocnise 25 cents in coin and an unstamped, self-addressed envelope for your booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." — Mrs. C. R.

In some cases, the cause of headache is easy to spot: in others very difficult. More than one cause may be at work, and that can pose some riddles.

There are two main types of headaches, those originating in the head, and those originating outside.

Of the former, there are migraines, histamine headaches, headaches from elevated blood pressure, subnormal thyroid activity, those related to allergy, and some less common ones, such as a headache secondary to brain injury.

The second type includes headaches from abnormal or prolonged muscle tension, malocclusion of the teeth, focal infection, and chronic intoxication (whether from alcohol, tobacco, etc.). In some cases disorders of neck or jaw joints may be involved.

After your two examinations, evidently quite thorough, I am not about to try to pick a clue out of thin air as to your problem. But different types have different characteristics. Some are sharp, others dull or pounding. Some are short-lived, some prolonged. Migraine follows some disturbing emotional situation. Histamine headaches usually occur at night. Blood pressure and muscle tension headaches are more prominent in the morning.

I would not be too quick to reject the answer that both clinics have given you. Nervous tension can translate into muscle tension. Further, after 20 years of such headaches you may have a pattern too firmly established to be overcome entirely by tranquillizers.

Would a deliberate effort to relax help you? Why not try?

Do you have these headaches every morning? Or just occasionally? Does some family situation and frustration build up tension before one of those headaches occurs? Consider some clues.

As an example of the difficulty in tracing headaches (this one doubtless does not apply in your case) there was a man whose problem finally was traced to sensitivity to onions. He quit eating them. The headaches stopped — except on Mondays. It turned out that he always had onions with his wife's relative's house, and the food there was customarily seasoned with onions all!

Dear Dr. Molner: Would it be harmful for a woman to become pregnant while her husband is being treated for a prostate infection? Could it cause deformity in the baby? — G. B.

No to both questions. In fact, most men have, at one time or another, a mild degree of prostate infection. In this sense there is no more harm than if they had, say, a mild infection like a cold. There's no relation to any deformity.

Carmer was considerably tried when the title of his 1934 success, "Stars Fell on Alabama", provided much of the steam that carried some song-writer to a considerable bit of cash. On the theory that the title of his just published book, "The Tavern Lamps Are Burning", might also do something in Tin Pan Alley, Carmer has forewarned possible freeloaders. He has teamed up with a composer and a quartet to produce an already recorded lyric beginning, "The tavern lamps are burning/By the rippling river's shore." "Concentrated corn," he says of his lyric, but it can be copyrighted and thus protect his title from kidnapping by some words-and-music combo of which he is not a part.

So who says there is no way to establish property rights in a book title! Set it to music and there you are.

Separatism Deplored

Granby La Voix de l'Est—The former president of le Rassemblement Pour l'Independence Nationale surprised no one when he called for Quebec's separation as he spoke before the legislature committee on the Canadian constitution. Marcel Chaput rejects all other choices, even that of associate state. . . .

What he does not explain, however, is the reason why we should become independent and what it would give the Quebec people. In his opinion, the separatists want to give Quebec a country. . . .

But, has it been so? The separatists cannot make it stick because of its poverty or its economic impotence. It hardly breathe. Independence in this case becomes a big word without meaning. . . .

But, judging from Mr. Chaput's speeches up until now, he has not been his main preoccupation. The same goes for the rest of the separatists whose only ambition is to separate Quebec from the rest of the country. They do not consider the consequences. Fortunately only a few Quebecers lend a serious ear to the separatist demands. Despite all their complaints, they know this is not the road to freedom and true independence.

Tough Beaver Fight Drought

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

It is pretty hard for people to get along without water, but what about Canada's animal symbol the beaver? The beaver has the only animal to take up a form of drastic engineering and when the creeks and ponds go dry the beaver really suffer.

There are more beaver around the district than might be imagined, and the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests have a remarkable capacity for adapting themselves to changes in their surroundings.

For instance, a recent report cites a beaver colony which was apparently forced to adopt emergency measures. The whole swampy area occupied by them had dried up completely mid-summer and in desperation the beavers excavated a pond about 25 feet in diameter—about two-foot high earth dike around the outside of the pond. The whole pond was then covered with tree limbs and small branches, leaving two small openings for entrance, one at each end of the pond. This tiny pond is located over a mile from the nearest water and with winter coming on the beaver will do much of their pretty rough time in their cramped quarters.

Carmer says that many beaver colonies are forced to make long trips on dry land to reach their favored feeding areas. This, no doubt, exposes the animals to predators since they are somewhat clumsy on land. Losses of beaver to dogs, wolves and bobcats are probably fairly high this year.

However, the beaver is renowned for tenacity as well as adaptability and they will probably hold their own. In parts of Eastern Ontario strict protective measures have had to be taken in some places to prevent beaver colonies from flooding agricultural land and even roads. In one case "not far from Williamsburg" a road was flooded and trapping the beaver turned out to be a considerable job. So we infer the beaver are tough and likely to survive the drought.

Three Persons Found Shot To Death

WATERTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Three persons were found shot to death Thursday night at a rest area on Interstate Route 81 near Watertown in what state police termed a triple murder.

State police said Peter Egan, 32, his wife Barbara, 22, and his brother, Gerald Egan, 19, all of Watertown, had been shot in the head.

State police, who called the shootings a triple murder, said that two men were being held for questioning but said no charges had been lodged against them.

Officials said the bodies were discovered by Mr. and Mrs. William Jay of Norwood, at about 9:30 p.m. when the couple stopped to use the washbasin of their car at a roadside rest area, about two miles north of this northern New York state city.

The bodies of the men were found slumped over in the front seat of their station wagon. Mrs. Egan lay on the ground next to it.

Investigators found a shell casing from a small - calibre weapon, possibly a revolver, at the scene. The gun itself was missing, however, they said.

Missionary Refused to Leave Friend

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters) — British missionary Jack Scholes said Friday a compatriot, Jim Rodgers, was killed by Congo insurgents when he refused to leave the side of an ailing, condemned U.S. missionary.

Rodgers, a middle - aged Protestant from Dundee, Scotland, was killed with the American, William McChesney, and a group of Belgians at the town of Watsha Nov. 25, the day after Belgian paratroopers dropped on Stanleyville, Scholes said.

Scholes, 64, and his team of 10 British Commonwealth missionaries were evacuated from the northeast Congo Thursday.

He told reporters Friday Rodgers refused to leave Mr. Cheney when the time for the execution came.

"The rebels had lined up all white males in the town and began separating them by nationality — all Belgians and Americans to die, the others to live.

"Jim refused to say he was not American. He merely remained silent when he was asked his nationality. 'I must stick with Bill,' he told another missionary who told him to reveal his citizenship," Scholes said.

"Finally one father told the rebels that Rodgers was a Scot but then the rebel said it was too late, they knew all the same."

He said Rodgers had looked after McChesney, 37, for 11 days before the execution after the insurgents brought the American to Watsha from the Ibambi mission station, about 25 miles away.

BURTON-ON - TRENT, England (AP)—Diane Minham, a 15-year-old girl missing for a week, was found dead by searchers in the River Dove near this Midlands town Friday. The body was naked. Police had treated the case as a possible murder in the disappearance.

Police Link Slaying With Armed Robbery

TORONTO (CP) — Charges placed by police Friday linked a New Year's Eve slaying with an armed robbery in Toronto earlier in the evening.

William Henry Green, 22, of Toronto, who was charged early Friday with capital murder in the shooting of Thomas Anthony Quinones, 24, also of Toronto, has been charged with armed robbery.

An armed robbery charge was also laid against Robert Sevilles, 22, of Toronto, who was reported in critical condition in hospital after being wounded in the chest in the shooting incident in which Quinones was killed.

Quinones died on a lawn in suburban Scarborough about a block away from the house the shooting occurred during a New Year's Eve party.

Earlier in the evening three armed men forced their way into a Toronto apartment building and threatened building superintendent Harold Smith, 67, and his wife Cecilia, 56, with a gun and a knife.

The men took $520 in rent money which Mr. Smith had collected from tenants earlier in the day.

There were about 25 men and women at the Scarborough party where the slaying occurred, police said.

The shooting occurred in the bathroom of the home. Quinones and Sevilles were wounded and staggered downstairs. Quinones fled from the house and collapsed about a block away. He was dead on arrival at hospital.

Father of Six Drowns Near Sharbot Lake

SHARBOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Ronald Winkle, 32, drowned in Gull Creek at Ardoch, 18 miles northwest of here, Friday afternoon while going for a walk after a New Year's Eve party.

David Gee, at whose home the party was held, said the driver's current overcame the motion of thick ice at that point.

Some time after Mr. Winkle left the house, others heard him shout. They ran to the river 100 feet from the house and Henry Crain of Sharbot Lake responded waded into the river but could not reach him.

He had a wife and six children. Provincial police said an investigation would continue.

Sharbot Lake is 45 miles north of Kingston.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

Have you started your 1965 bird list yet? Sparrows, starlings, and pigeons are sure to be seen among your first 10, so try one of them attempting to get out of the cold by landing on your window-sill. All three make a living by picking up any little scrap that is edible, be it weed seeds or garbage. But the main reason why so many birds migrate in autumn is that their particular kind of food has run out. Flycatchers find no more flies, fish eaters have no more chance of catching fish.

Winter came to the far north in September, although we who live in the thick of civilization felt its touch only a few weeks ago, and so birds that breed in the Arctic started south before July was over or at least in early August. Certain of the shorebirds were seen in settled parts of Canada in mid-summer when they stopped over to rest and feed on our sandy shores. As long as there is open water some ducks and geese remain with us, and until snow covers up the weeds and seeds some of sparrows stay on. Berry eaters are happy with us until the store of fruit gives out.

CAN ENDURE COLD

However, there are other difficulties to be encountered besides the natural food question that make life in Canada quite unwelcome during the winter months. Although cold can be endured by birds almost beyond belief, rapid, icy snow storms, and ice storms play havoc with our feathered folk.

They, themselves have difficulty in battling a big wind. Birds find it practically impossible, so I am told, to fight "a storm that haven until the wind dies down. That means that there is no chance to eat, for every tiniest speck of food must be found by the bird itself, and the colder the weather the more food is necessary to keep alive.

COVERS FOOD

Heavy snow storms cover up food. Many of our small seed eaters live on the weeds that poke up above the surface of the snow; but when there is a ten or 12-inch snowfall the seeds lie undiscovered. the white cover-ing.

Worst of all is the ice storm. When a glaze of ice covers many of the perching birds are unable to cling to a branch, and all food, whether it be seeds, berries, or insects that live in bark, is sealed in by the ice. This condition lasts for several days even our hardy residents perish.

Smart Money Found Way To Mercury in Last Year

By RICHARD F. WHALEN

NEW YORK (AP) — The smart money moved from 7,135-to-1 liberty ships to mercury in 76-pound flasks last year.

So says Franz Pick, who keeps track of a hodge-podge of valuables traded around the world in a war which would have made the best hedge against inflation. Pick, a recognized authority on world currencies, is also noted for his gloomy appraisal of the value of paper money.

Tapestries were also up, he said Friday, but the great masters were sluggish, and impressionist paintings were mostly down.

Mercury was "fantastic," he said. If you'd bought a flask last Jan. 2 at $225, you could sell it today for about $425, an inflation hedge—or tidy profit—of more than 100 per cent.

Even Liberty ships didn't do that well in 1963, yielding only 40 per cent. And Liberty flasks are handier to store for a year.

Pick has no predictions for 1965. "I never make predictions," he said, "because I don't know what's going to happen."

He's head of Pick Publications, gives expensive advisements on money markets and calls himself a "travelling mid-wife to the world's currencies." He's been a financial adviser to several small nations.

Mercury, the liquid metal, was one of several metals other than iron and steel that leaped in price last year. "Nonferrous metals were a joy for all those who either owned or gambled in them in London and Paris," Pick said.

Antimony gained almost as much as mercury. Copper went up 21 per cent. Platinum, lead and zinc saw increases of more than 40 per cent.

TAPESTRIES UP

After metals came tapestries. One of four was bought by Brussels' Royal National Museum for $250,000, up 50 per cent from 1963, Pick said. Old watches and stocks also did well.

Beethoven were a disappointment, he said. They were No. 2 while No. 1 was best, just maintained their values in 1964.

Paintings by the great masters were up, but 19 per cent, Pick said, with Apostle by Rembrandt fetching $600,000 in a March sale in London.

"Impressionists," he said, "did not hold their own. Most paintings of the period sold at lower than 1963 prices."

Modern paintings did better, with Fernand Kandinsky going for highest-ever prices. Picasso and Chagall also sold well, he said.

Pick said he's been studying money for 30 years.

Where does he put his own money? "I gamble in the stock market," he said, "but I don't switch."

Most investment specialists would call that investing. "No," said Pick, "that's gambling. You never know what a company's going to do."

He said his other inflation hedge is inflation studies.

"I gave a seminar a few weeks ago and there were 70 registrants at $25 each," he said.

General Vanier Holds Levee New Year's Day

OTTAWA (CP) — H Governor-General Vanier succeeded Friday in setting a tone for the year, Canadians can expect Parliament Hill to continue through 1965 in complete grace and good humor.

It was the traditional New Year's Day levee with more than 1,000 dignitaries, diplomats, soldiers and citizens on hand to exchange good wishes with the Queen's representative.

Parliamentary halls that have not known much cheer lately were filled with color, chatter and music. The line moved forward to light martial music and tunes like Love Makes the World Go 'Round.

Prime Minister Pearson and most of his cabinet led the long line-up which started at one end of the Centre Block and snaked through corridors to the red-carpeted Senate where Gen. Vanier sat relaxed to shake hands with each person.

The line continued out of the Senate and on to the large railway committee room where lunch and a hot rum and brandy punch waited on a long table decorated with pots of cyclamen from the vice-regal greenhouse.

Music drifting through the whole building came from the 40-piece band of Gen. General's Foot Guards in the Senate rotunda.

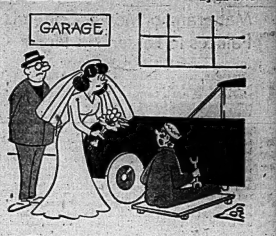
The handshaking took about 1½ hours. Officials counted 532 in the civilian group received at 11 a.m. EST and 611 in the military group received at noon.

The levee is traditionally an all-male function except for those in official positions.

Seven Killed In Head-on Car Collision

EAST ANGUS, Que. (CP) — Seven persons were killed Friday when two cars collided head-on near this Eastern Townships community.

Six of the victims were said to be from related families. Three children survived the collision but were in serious condition.



Identified among the badly-shattered victims were Mrs. Moise Palardy, 79, and her son, Guy Palardy, both of Weedon, Que.

Also killed were another of Mrs. Palardy's sons, Guy, and his wife Monique, both about 30, of Jacques Cartier, near Montreal.

A boy aged about five and a girl, about three, also were killed and were believed to be members of the Guy Palardy family.

The seventh victim, Armand Lefeux, about 21, of St-Adolphe-de Dudswell, Que., was alone in one of the cars involved in the crash.

The injured children also were believed to be members can earn $2,050 in one day!" of the Guy Palardy family.

Field Marshal 'Jumbo' Wilson Dies in London

LONDON (AP) —Field Marshal Lord (Jumbo) Wilson, 83, whose "Army of the Nile" hurled back the Italian push into Egypt in the Second World War, died Thursday.

Henry Maitland Wilson, nicknamed Jumbo because of his 250-pound bulk, climaxed his career as Britain's top representative with the Allied chiefs of staff in Washington late in the war.

Born in Suffolk County, England, of a long line of soldiers, Wilson went from Eton into military service and saw his first action as an infantry lieutenant in South Africa during the Boer War.

Serving as a major in the First World War, he was decorated several times for gallantry in France.

At the outbreak of the Second World War, he was a lieutenant - general under Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell in Egypt, commanding forces that guarded the Suez Canal.

DROVE BACK ITALIANS

When the Italians thrust into Egypt, Wilson's outnumbered troops drove them back 450 miles in 57 days.

Wilson, acclaimed by Sir Winston Churchill as "one of our finest tacticians," took part in the Syrian campaign against the Vichy French in 1941 and later commanded the British 9th Army in Palestine and Syria.

He took over as supreme commander of the Mediterranean theatre in January, 1944, when American Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was recalled to England to prepare for the invasion of Europe.

When Sir Gen. John Dill, British military representative on the combined chiefs of staff in Washington died in November, 1944, Wilson, who had been promoted to field marshal, succeeded him.

Lawyer Argues Sarnia Should Pay Judgment

SARNIA (CP) — A lawyer argued before a police commission hearing Thursday that the city of Sarnia should pay Supreme Court judgment against a former city policeman who left the country without making payment on the judgment.

Hugh D. Garrett, lawyer for William Williams, 39, who was seriously injured while being arrested by former corporal Richard Gunn, said the municipality should pay such a judgment for a member of its police department.

The $88,891 judgment against Gunn was awarded by a Supreme Court civil jury to Williams last February. The jury found that Williams suffered "severe and irreparable brain damage" when he was struck on the head by a police nightstick wielded by Gunn.

The jury found that Gunn used excessive force in arresting Williams during a scuffle in a downtown apartment building.

Mr. Garrett argued that under section 26 of the Police Act of Ontario a municipality may pay such a judgment for a member of its police department, provided such payment is certified as proper by the police commission.

The commission said it will make a decision on Mr. Garrett's proposal Jan. 26.

Maharana of Mewar Converts Palaces to Lessen His Plight

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

UDAIPUR, India — Consider, please, the plight of the Maharana of Mewar, 32rd in the thousand-year-old ruling dynasty of Udaipur.

The trouble is the Maharana owns 14 white marble palaces here. (Even the chief of his household owns a white marble palace.) At least one is complete with elephant and horse stables, hundreds of them. What with taxes, the help problem, and the generally low official regard in which hereditary rulers are held these days, what is one to do?

Simple. One converts one's palaces into hotels, and serves instead of being served.

Few visitors will be prepared for what they find in this breathtilly country southwest of New Delhi. The airport is some distance from town, and the ride bumps through tableaux of village life compounded of pastel turbans, lumbering bullock carts, camels grazing, mudbrick shanties with thatched roofs, and shapeless women hidden hiding in burgundy muslin robes.

Suddenly, like an oasis out of the Arabian Nights, a white medieval mirage rises on the horizon. Towers. Turrets. Balconies. Fretwork and lattice work and scalloped arches of cupolas piled one on the other. White on white on white.

RAREST OF RARE

Then the road descends beneath the majestic facade of the City Palace and ends at the rarest of the rare for northern India, a lake. This is Lake Pichola, one of three artificial bodies of water dammed by an earlier Maharana.

In this idyllic setting, squarely in the middle of the lake, lies the Maharana's summer — surely a mirage except for the launch approaching from it — the maharana's summer — an opalescent gem now known as the Lake Palace Hotel.

There is no mistaking that this was a royal residence. Trumpeting stone elephants guard the launch landing. Regal lounges with pillow-rolls line the marble-floored lobby. There are courts and terraces, pools and fountains and gardens, walls paved with white marble inlaid with semi-precious stones. And facing it all from the centre of the lake lies a view of the maharana's domain, the tiers of the white palaces rising one upon the other, their pinnacles tipped orange by the afternoon sun, like a hand painted illumination in a medieval book.

"It is possible," wrote the Roman Marcus Aurelius, "to be happy, even in a palace." I can essay the matter in the suite ($45 a day) known as Khush Mahal, or Happy Palace.

It is enough to gladden the heart of the most decadent eastern potentate. Stained glass windows play with the day's sunlight. Wrought-iron chairs rest on the tiled floor amid wooden tables inlaid with brass, rare Himalayan rugs, scattered cushions and maharaja-sized beds resting on the floor in the Oriental manner.

In the ceiling are silver hooks for the bell-draped swings and fans favored by royalty, and a vast crystal chandelier reflects the glass-stained sunlight. In a private court outside is a Chinese orange trees. Ah, a loaf of bread, a jug of wine . . .

LUXURY SUITE

Yet another suite has tile walls inlaid with colored glass, has relief friezes of scenes from the Ramayana, frescoes of glowering maharajahs and peacocks and voluptuous maidens, and a mirror in the ceiling above the bed. From a window there is a view of the hilltop Monsoon Palace, high enough to be above the creeping rain clouds. In these days, a maharana could even afford his own weather. Take this suite, its yours, for $31 per day.

Besides luxuriating, there are two things to do in Udaipur. One is to take the launch across to the city and poke about the hilly streets of Udaipur, where the wedding murals decorate the sides of white stone houses. At the waterside ghats, overhead trees drop flowers into the lake where the pounding of clothes echoes in the afternoon stillness. Boys swim, some drink, and everyone dumps trash.

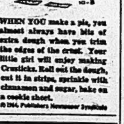
Like a carved wedding cake, the 1652 Vishnu Temple's tiers and towers are decorated with convoluted stone figures.

Only one ceremonial elephant still lives in solitary grandeur in the City Palace's stables, but there are other reminders of the days that were, such as the solid gold sun disk in the royal dining room and glass peacocks in the maharana's private audience and gardens.

Another palace built for the maharani is now a library, but its splendid Garden of Fountains still spew forth water from marble lotuses, tigers and the beaks of pelicans housed in black marble cupolas. In the nearby Vilas Vihar and the private guest villa of the maharana, overlooking the lake, tiger heads rage fiercely but silently from disembodied skins on the walls, hunting trophies of the maharana.

REWARDING RIDE

Most rewarding of all is a sunset turn about the lake in the hotel launch. Spotted deer may be spotted, along with wild boar and even a panther, not far from where tiger and panther roam. White storks flit gracefully, egrets flights of green parakeets on an island, while crocodiles laze in the waters below.



On Jagmandir Island, the legendary Shah Jahan was a guest of an earlier maharana. It is said the setting inspired him to plan the Taj Mahal. The island, now abandoned, was a guest palace. Its courts and cupolas and pools and walled towers have been given over to the parakeets, but plans are afoot to restore it into still another guest island for the hotel. Anchored in the water nearby still is the marble pleasure barge of the maharana, ready for a return to glory.

But things being what they are today, whatever future glory the gods hold in store for the maharana probably will come from the hotel business.

PRANKSTER AT WORK

DUBLIN (AP) — Fluttering from the tower of Irish television's 360-foot transmitter in Dublin Friday morning was a Union Jack, a symbol of British rule that ended for Ireland in 1922. Police said it was the work of a New Year's prankster, officials had the flag removed.

Christmas Concerts

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

RAWDON — On December 22 the Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Church hall was filled to capacity with parents, relatives and friends for the annual Christmas concert provided by the two schools; S.S. 2, Allan School with 37 pupils and teacher, Mrs. Grace L. Morton; and S.S. 4, Williams School, with 13 pupils and teacher, Mrs. Joyce Parr.

The hall and stage were decorated with Yuletide streamers and gilt and silver letters while a lighted tree stood in one corner and underneath were dozens of gifts.

Rev. W. G. Fletcher was the master of ceremonies while Robert Merrick manipulated the curtain throughout the program. Miss Barbara Williams was the piano accompanist for the Allan School and Mrs. Tom Thompson for the Williams school.

At the close of the program thanks were extended to teachers, pupils and piano accompanists and all the children in both school sections received a bag of treats.

The various numbers were well received by the audience and were most generous with their applause.

The program ran as follows: Opening chorus, both schools; "Good Evening! Hallo!"; recitations, Margaret Heard, Glen Merrick, Dorothea Major, Byron Hubble; dialogue, Williams school, "Mail Order Hat"; chorus, grades 1 to 4, Allan school; "I Don't Want a Lot For Christmas"; recitation, "Frustration," Frank Hubble; junior number, Williams' school, "Christmas Tree"; star drill, Allan's school; solo, Judy McAdam, "Christmas in My Heart"; recitation, "No Choice," Donald Campbell.

ST. MARK'S W.A.

BONARLAW — Mrs. W. J. Barlow, president, opened her home for the November meeting of St. Mark's W.A. The opening exercises and meditations were conducted by Mr. Stewart, the rector.

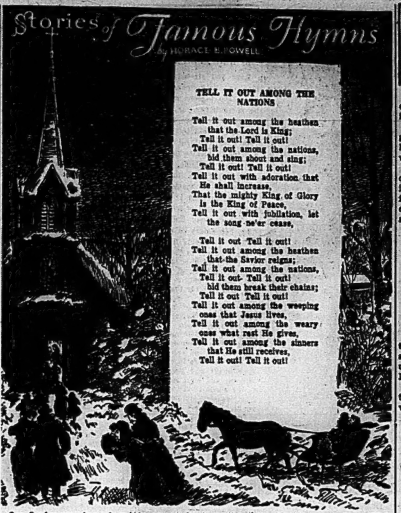
Mrs. Wm. Cubs, treasurer, reported the financial results from the baseball banquet, turkey supper and bazaar, which were most satisfactory.

Mrs. E. Heath has received acknowledgements from the babes and money sent to missions. There was also a letter asking for donations for clergy in Battleford, Sask., also an extra donation was asked for needy clergy elsewhere. The W.A. approved of these donations.

Mrs. Eggett reported having sent a goodly sum of money to the Kingston Diocese office. Letters were read concerning the world's day of prayer and one from Mrs. MacPherson, an Interested Girls' Auxiliary worker and the wife of the clergyman of Maynooth. She wrote trying to solicit interest in the work.

Business had to do with the purchase of 25 new chairs for the Sunday School rooms.

Mr. Cracknell is presenting the Cubs with their new charter.



Mrs. Barlow, president of the W.A., sponsor of the Cubs, is invited to the meeting, also the parents of the Cubs.

Mr. Stewart, before closing the meeting, asked for one minute of silence for the late Mrs. Wellman.

An interesting letter from a missionary in Sierra Leone, in Africa, was read by Mr. Stewart. She was a native of this part of the country. Her home had been in Frankford. She was well known in Brighton. Following this letter Mrs. Burkitt gave a reading and Mrs. Brown also read a paper.

According to a story told in later years by her sister, the following conversation then ensued:

"Why, Frances, I thought you were upstairs!" "Yes, but I had my prayer book and in the hymns for today I read: 'Tell it out among the heathen that the Lord is King.' I thought: 'What a splendid first line!' And then words and music came rushing in to me. There, it's all written out!"

One Sunday morning when Frances R. Havergal, popular English woman hymnist, was too ill to go to church she crept from her sick bed to find her Bible.

Thumbing through her favorite verses of Scripture, she was attracted by a line in the ninety-sixth Psalm:

"Say among the heathen that the Lord reigneth."

She read the passage over several times and suddenly the idea came to her to use it as the opening line of a hymn. Taking up paper and pencil she began to write and, in an amazingly short time, she had finished the hymn-poem just as it appears above.

While she was writing she heard church bells ringing and managed to put some of their music into her song. When the family returned from worship, she was at the piano trying to tap out a tune for her verses.

"I don't think that was a bit funny! Asking him for his adding machine to total up my score!"

Successful Living

Should Beat Storming Husband to the Punch

DEAR DORIS — My husband always starts a big row as an excuse to storm off alone. My son says to ignore him but it is impossible to know what he is going to get angry about.

He can really dig deep. A television program. Something I cook. Today he said the house was full of smoke from the stove. There was no smoke.

Our friends give us the brush-off because of my husband's drinking. (He denies drinking.) A widow living alone has more true friends than a woman in my position. I could commit suicide, I sure do get blue to be alone so much. — BLUE AND ALONE.

DEAR BLUE — Storming off has DORIS CLARK worked so far. Now his rages are so well rationalized that he believes them himself.

Could you bring yourself to storm off first, once? Then make it known that you have absorbing spare-time interests of your own — and get some?

Your committing suicide might sober him up with a bang, but where would it get you?

DEAR DORIS — It is my greatest desire to work as a correction officer. My grade XII teacher claims that I have the necessary qualifications. I have written to a nearby institution but unfortunately they do not consider me mature for such a position. I am 18.

As I have no intention of going to university, I would like the addresses of other corrections institutions in Canada to write to. — AMBITIOUS.

DEAR AMBITIOUS — A list is on its way to you. I'd suggest you try for a post in one of the institutions for juvenile delinquents. I just can't see a prison for women taking you at that age. Keep in your young faith.

You'll probably discover for yourself that you could go farther and do better work with more education and some specialized studies.

Confidential to LONELY — You dreams, you hope, you think you are in love. Take it from me: You are too young to be in despair over anything; and in all probability have yet to meet the love of your life. Get ready for him, whoever he is, by plunging into a happy social life, thus learning poise and the art of getting along with people.

Confidential to LINDA — Your doubts about your feelings are a sign you are past the first flush of rosy infatuation and growing up. Tell your steady how you feel.

You like him, you tell him for a friend; but you need to go out with others too; for quite a while yet.

To STUDENT OF INDIANS — The skills of social work are being asked for in the expanding programs with Canadian Indians — "designed to further the social, economic and cultural development of Indian people." The Federal Department of Citizenship and Immigration, Indian Affairs Branch, requires graduation as a Bachelor of Social Work (a one-year course after an arts degree); or a Master of Social Work (the two-year postgraduate course.)

ALBERT COLLEGE

(A Story of a Church School)

"But what the people of the world want and need, is leadership of mind and spirit. They want to find the path toward kindness and the brotherhood of men, and peace. And where can it be found if not in the institutions that have sought the truth since the days of Socrates and Plato?" — Dr. Whitley, Penfield.

Back in the early 1900's attendance was high. There were about 240 students, "the highest it has ever been", states Dr. Smith in his book "Albert College, 1857-1907.".

No one could foretell that the next quarter of a century and a decade would bring:

World War 1.

A college fire.

The Great Depression

World War 11.

How did this affect Albert College?

Let us ask Dr. Smith in question -and-answer interview:

Q. — Did the war of 1914-18 affect Albert College in any way?

A. — Yes, indeed. For one thing there were fewer students. The boys went to war. Twelve former women students became army nurses. Two hundred and sixty-eight men students and ex-students joined the armed forces. Awards: Distinguished Service Order, 1; Military Cross, 6; Military Medal 7. Twenty-four gave their lives".

Q. — When was it decided that the school must have more modern buildings?

A. — As early as January 1914. At a board meeting it was planned to raise $100,000 for endowment and expansion by the familiar method of conditional subscription: subscribers asked to pay until the whole was promised."

Q. — Was the objective met?

A. — Yes, by May, 1917 the amount was complete. Bill-got before the college fire broke out.

Q. — When did that occur?

A. — In April, 1917, just one month before.

Q. — Did this cancel out the plans made?

A. — On the contrary. Plans for the new school went ahead after the war. Subscriptions came in, and Belleville citizens gave $142,000. The city council asked to help and gave a grant of $35,000 to help buy and prepare the present site.

Q. Was this not rather generous?

A. — Indeed and greatly appreciated. A special by-law to this end was given a good majority at the polls. Soon the foundations were made and from the excavations seventy per cent of the building stone for the walls was quarried. In 1923 the walls began to go up. The alumni undertook to raise $465,000 to pay for the assembly room (chapel). It had been hoped that the new school would be ready by September, 1923.

Q. — And wasn't it?

A. — No. The reason being lack of funds. More time was needed to raise the money and the building operations had to be kept in pace with revenue.

Q. — When did it open then?

A. — A year later in September 1926. The residence and classrooms were ready and we moved in. Dr. Baker had the satisfaction of making his last report as Principal of the old school in the board room of the new.

Q. — It must have been an exciting experience moving into a brand new school.

A. — It was. In many ways it was a new Albert College.

Q. — In what way?

A. — Well, we had to find ourselves as a team and school family. The staff and students were 75% new. In fact there were only fifty students. All men. The girl students were excluded.

Q. — But why?

A. — Four inexperienced young men on the teaching staff thought the school was better for being for boys only. They thought life would be simpler.

Q. — And was it?

A.—Not really. The old teachers united the change believing that classwork and manners were better under coeducation. All in all, the 1926-27 had the character of an experiment. Even the commercial department was discontinued.

Q.—By removing the girls and the commercial department would not this diminish revenue?

A.—Yes, but it was soon evident that a school built for 250 students could not operate on fees from fifty. It was hoped that more students and funds might be forthcoming. In fact year by year the attendance did grow. By 1929 there were 100 registrations. This gave more athletic material. Albert Colleges won the championship of the Bay of Quinte League in rugby, basketball and hockey.

Q.—How strange to think of Albert College as just for boys.

A.—Yet continuity prevailed itself in various ways. In the college or in city churches. They gave leadership.

Q.—What about the veneer, the pretensions?

A.—Oh, that gave place to a dance, cautiously announced as an "at home". There were also experiments made in academic work, student government and publications. A predecessor council was established that gave some good results. The candidate for the ministry formed into a tutorial group in which the principal helped them to face the ministerial problems.

Q.—Then the school was rasily succeeding as a boys' academy?

A.—It seemed so. It was reported that the quality of school life was steadily improving. There was a sense of achievement and confidence in finer things. Then — then — the sky clouded.

Q.—But why?

A.—Perhaps you have forgotten. But by 1930, the depression had come! And the sky grew darker.

A Lift for Living

What Will Your 'Address' Be As You Move Into New Year?

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

As we enter the gateway of a new year we are confronted by countless uncertainties. What new excitement of great joy will we experience? What new burdens must we assume and carry? What will be our successes, disappointments and failures in work, business, health and character? What new knowledge and wisdom will we gain in store? What troubled seasons will stir the world's anxiety? What world events will change our lives? We do not know.

But we can be sure of one thing: we will change.

In this universe all things change in time. The scientists tell us that their observations are not recordings of everlasting facts. Instead, they are merely snapshots of a rapidly changing universe, caught at a certain instant. For example, I burn today's newspaper in the fireplace. What is that burning newspaper? It is matter in transition. Telescoping its long history into a few hours, I observe that last week it was a stock, then a tree; yesterday a roll of wood pulp in a paper factory; this morning it was a rapidly whirling sheet running through a rotary press. This moment the printed sheet is being reduced to ashes. Tomorrow the ashes will be dumped, and they will mix with the soil where lie more seeds from which more trees will grow. So the circling change continues.

YOUR CHOICE

And what is true of paper is true of the distant stars and the entire universe. And it is true of you. An essential difference between you and all other parts of the universe is that you can determine the direction of change. Unlike a scrap of charred newspaper, blown by the wind wherever the wind "wills" it, you can set your destination. You can determine to be better rather than worse. You can choose to be more considerate of others next year than you have been in the past, more efficient in your business, more faithful to your church, more dedicated to God.

God has so fashioned us that we cannot stand still. We go forward, or we slip backward. It is sometimes said of a likeable person "He's a good egg!" But no one can be a good egg for long. An egg either hatches into something other than an egg or it rots. It changes from egg to chick or it spoils. "Spoiled" people are those who have not moved from one stage to another as they ought. They are the adults with infantile emotions. When frustrated they become childishly irresponsible, sulking, or indulging in tempestuous temper tantrums. Or they may be the perennial teen-agers immersed in romantic fantasies who never know a mature love and loyalty, and throughout all their lives they go from one flirtation to another, from one mate to another. They were once good eggs, but now rotten eggs because they never hatched into maturity. They failed to move onward.

Well, where are you going? In what direction are you moving?

If you have ever moved from one town to another, and perhaps went to the post office and arranged to have your mail forwarded to your new address. A clerk gave you a form to fill out, and you wrote your old address and the address to which you were moving. Now, with an old year closed and a new year beginning, it is a good exercise of mind and spirit to determine what your forwarding address will be. Where will you be spiritually at the end of January, in the middle of June, when December of this year reaches its close?

ROOM FOR TRUTH

We can decide now the kind of conversations we will move into. At our new address let us have more spacious minds. Let them be rooms for new truth, no matter how offensive it may be to our old prejudices; room for disagreement without bitterness or rancor; a place for leisurely reflection, for reading the best books, for listening to the best music, for enjoying and absorbing the most beautiful sights. Provide room for recollections of the towering heroes of the past and the saints who have blessed the world; room for contemplation of God's works and His great goodness.

Let us move into roomier spiritual abodes. May there be capacity for all kinds of people in our lives and prayers, room for giant beliefs and greater compassions; a capacity for loving the children and for visits with the lonely and the aged. Let there be a bigger place for reverence and frequent worship. Make room for God.

One of life's most exciting events is making an advantageous move to a new address. What will your new address be?

May God go with you.

Happy New Year!

Ann Landers

Another Boss-Secretary Affair Happily Concluded

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I just wanted you to know. The dozens of boss-secretary affair letters which have appeared in your column have not gone unheeded. One such letter changed my life.

ANN LANDERS

I worked many years for a man I found inordinately attractive. It was actually painful when his wife called. My ambivalent feelings drove me mad when I made travel plans and attended to personal matters which involved them both.

Several weeks ago I read a letter in your column from a secretary whose situation was a carbon copy of my own. Your advice was "Quit torturing yourself — unless you enjoy it, that is. Look in the classified section of this newspaper and find another job." That's precisely what I did.

The boss was shocked. My family was stunned. No one could understand why I would arbitrarily abandon such a fine position. Strangely enough my recovery was rapid and complete.

You'll never know how I hated you when I read your advice. You'll never know how much I respect you now that I have taken it. —THANKFUL.

DEAR THANKFUL — Congratulations. The toughest dictation to take is the kind you get from your conscience.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Which one of your "experts" did you consult for your reply to the woman whose husband was "Out of things to say?" It must have been the milkman.

Church work, club work, Great Books groups and political action are not satisfactory substitutes for a husband's attention.

My heart aches. I have tried to find something my husband and I could do together. I attempted to interest him in the activities I enjoyed. It was hopeless, so I became interested in his activities. There he lost interest. He doesn't want a companion. He wants a body without a mind.

I have no words of advice for the woman who wrote.

If I knew the answer I wouldn't be writing to your corny newspaper column instead, I'd write a book and make a million dollars.

Rather than trying to please my husband if I had invested my time and energy in business or higher education, I'd be a tycoon or the president of a university by this time. But I didn't want that. I wanted a home. And that's what I have. But it's empty, empty, empty. — VETERAN OF DOMESTIC WARS.

DEAR VET. — You wear your bitterness and hostility like a sign which says, "I dare you to kick me." When you get kicked you moan, "He's a louse. Look how hard I tried."

The writer of this corny newspaper column hopes you will get psychiatric help. When you are able to like yourself a little perhaps your husband will learn to like you too.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — French is ruining my life. It's not the language I hate, it's the teacher. Right now I have a splitting headache from worry and tension.

I'm scared stiff I will flunk. I am short-tempered and ugly to my friends and family. Please tell me what to do. — THE FRENCH REVOLUTIONIST.

DEAR REVOLUTIONIST — Stop thinking of French as a matter of life and death and try to figure out why you hate the teacher. If you feel the teacher has it in for you, ask why — and what you can do to improve the relationship.

ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Date Bait," gives sound and solid rules for teen-age dating. To receive a copy, enclose with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Reader's Saturday Column

By MARY MOORE

As I start this note to you (after many years of intending to do so) I find it difficult to restrain myself from listing the many instances when your wonderful recipes and hints have helped me and added to the ure to both my cooking and my family and guests' eating! Suffice it to say, perhaps, that during the six years of my marriage which were spent in the Yukon (I missed you very much, and so was tickled to "meet up with you" again over here. The following cake recipe was in a small cook-book put out by the Army Sergeants' Wives Club in Whitehorse, Yukon in 1957. I was given a copy as my husband, a member of the RCMP was an associate member of the Mess. Most large cakes such as this take at least half a dozen eggs and so I feel that many readers might enjoy having this more economical recipe for occasions when eggs are scarce or expensive, if you feel the recipe suitable to pass on.

ANSWER

What a lovely way to be greeted in the New Year. Thank you, Margaret. I made the cake and served it at an after-the theatre party, as you suggested, with lemon filling and whipped cream topping. Guests raved. Mrs. Too. Readers should note Margaret's remarks about the simplicity of the cake without the lemon filling and cream topping. Clip this for your cake file.

When I made it, I sliced into 3 layers and filled it with Lemon Filling: Mix together in heavy saucepan 1 cup sugar, 3 tablespoon cornstarch, 1½ tablespoons flour, grated rind 1 lemon, ½ cup lemon juice and 1 egg. Mix and stir over medium heat until thickened. Remove from heat, add 2 tablespoons butter and cool. Spread between layers of cake. Frost and sides with ½ pint whipping cream, whipped until stiff.

The Golden Years

Know Pitfalls Before Moving To Your Chic Retirement Spot

By THOMAS COLLINS

You are planning to move away when you retire. Maybe this year, maybe next. You've spotted the ideal spot. Your friends say it sounds very glamorous.

You may have chosen one of the four U.S. retirement spots now considered quite glamorous by people with an eye for chic: Arizona, Florida, Nevada or the Southern Mountains.

An inland waterway in Southern Florida;

Mountainside in Arizona.

If you plan to move to one of these spots, or to any other similar place, you may find it better to change your mind now instead of a year after you move, a lot cheaper, too.

Out of one of the above glamor spots last week rumbled a moving van carrying the household possessions of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Brown. Behind the van, in a glamorous car, rode the bewhiskered Brown.

"Why didn't somebody warn us about this?" Mr. Brown demanded later that afternoon as the van was unloaded in furniture at a house on an ordinary street, in an ordinary town, about 10 miles from his glamor home.

So here is a warning, based largely on the experience of the Browns.

LOOK CLOSELY

Most city people, in choosing a retirement community, make unusually choose a place that looks glamorous in the city where they now live. Its native in the locality where they're going to be living, and in the sunbathing, waiting to be unloaded on the next newcomer who comes to it, are often quite impractical for everyday living. But the city people don't look at things that way. Instead, they want a spot that looks good to their friends in the city. They want a place at which all of their friends will be fading away in about a year. But they don't realize they are breaking ties by moving. They want to live in the town that has a good image from the city.

The Browns bought a secluded, pretty house, on 15 acres of land. There were trees and some water. It fairly well fit the picture they had in mind of the land. We'd go for three days not seeing a soul except for maybe a couple of boys fishing and can't even carry on a conversation with them.

The Browns had made the town 10 miles away the centre of their activities. They joined civic groups and clubs there, did their banking and shopping there, made friends. "But were they coming 10 miles to see us? Most of them won't go two blocks to visit a stranger. That's the way our society has become."

"Also," Mr. Brown continued "the town people left us out of things because they wanted to be nice — they didn't think they should ask us to drive 10 miles to a meeting or a party."

NO VISITORS

The old friends back in the city were the major disappointment. They just didn't come visiting. "I think," said Mr. Brown, "that we could have lived in a sort of superhighway between New York and Miami, between Chicago and Denver, and few old friends passing through would have stopped. Not because anything is wrong with us — except that we're retired. It's just the way things are nowadays."

It is the Browns' firm opinion, as it is the conviction of others who have tried it, that any couple who moves in retirement should pick a general area they like, and then pick a spot in that area that has a good image to the natives. Not to the friends in the old home city. The natives not only know what is best but it is the natives in the end that you're going to live with and be calling your friends.

Sunday School Lesson

More Than Bulldozers

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

These are days when superhighways thread their way across our land, great ribbons of asphalt are built as straight as it possible, even for those who have to go by travel at the speed of a mile a minute. Each of the smooth concrete is the labor of a bulldozer. One of the credible power, bulldozers push tons of dirt, rocks, and trees out of the way in a mile of building of the highways possible. To use Isaiah's phrase, they literally make it possible for valleys to be "lifted up" and mountains and hills to be "made low." (Isaiah 40) Vast changes have come to our land because highways link us together, but it is the bulldozers can push down physical barriers to make such travel possible, they cannot push prejudice and hate out of the human heart to make new understanding possible.

The basic problem is still the highway of the heart. Jeremiah lamented, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" (Jeremiah 17:9RSV) The Apostle Paul confessed that "the carnal mind is enmity" with all kinds of covetousness." (Romans 7:7RV) And Jesus declared, "out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, thefts, adulteries, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness." (Mark 7:21) It was the Gospel, the "good news," of God's abundant mercy He has sent to proclaim and heal.

John instinctively recognized Jesus' spiritual superiority. He showed his own humility by his reluctance to baptize Jesus. But Jesus wanted this public witness of his commitment to the ways of God.

Such a public witness can be extremely important to one's influence on others. Amos Kendall, postmaster-general in Andrew Jackson's cabinet, gave time and money to a Washington church for the erection of its first building. He objected to baptism and full membership because of a great weakness, but Kendall, the publicity professed his faith by baptism, and became a leader in great religious causes, as well as political influence.

Some things bulldozers can't do. They can clear the land, but nature must heal the ugly scars. Jesus' preaching sought to push back the sins of the people. This was important. But in addition there is needed to have a message of healing and love, to encourage to declare such a message. He did and created John's warning of judgment. God cannot treat sin as if it did not matter. But God's justice is tempered with mercy. John's preaching served as the perfect background. God's mercy and the fatherhood of God cast a brilliant rainbow of promise and hope.

Lighting The Way

By Walter S. Crone

The story is told of a guide who was taking some tourists through Mammoth Cave, in Kentucky, the largest known cavern in the world. When they reached "The Cathedral", the guide mounted a rock called "The Pulpit" and said he would preach a sermon. It was short. All he said was, "Keep close to your guide."

The tourists soon found it was an excellent sermon. As the tour progressed, it became obvious to them that if they should become separated from their guide, they would quickly be lost in the midst of pits, precipices, and deities. It is most difficult . . . it may be impossible, to find one's way through Mammoth Cave without a guide. The world in which we live has many snares and pitfalls. The Bible describes it as a world of spiritual darkness. No wonder that some people lose their sense of direction; they become lost. The Bible was given to man that he may be helped to find God's meaning and purpose for his. By it, he should be able to find his way through this world, fulfilling God's purpose for his life, and arrive in his glorious destiny. The Bible is a dependable guide. "Keep close to your guide" is a good sermon for us.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Some day, say about ten years from now, someone will ask Bobby Hull to open his warehouse and show him some of his scrapbooks.

Assuming that Hull or some member of the family uses the scissors and gluebrush systematically, the Point Anne blonde bomber should have a highly interesting collection by the time he decides to hang up his gear, write his memoirs or take on a coaching job.

Some interesting stories have crossed this sports desk about Hull with those originating from American sources providing at times, some amusing reading.

One story some years ago had it that Hull was discovered playing on a small open-air rink in the wilds of Northern Ontario. The scout who allegedly discovered him kept him under wraps so other scouts would be left looking.

A recent issue of Time Magazine under the heading of "The Well-Mannered Mesomorph" (whatever that means) carries the information that Hull is "a prodigy from the backwoods of Ontario."

The story says Hull signed his first pro contract at 16 "for a bonus so small I'm afraid to mention it." It goes on to say that the "marks of his trade show on his face. It is criss-crossed with scars and his two front teeth are gone."

However I do not imagine Hull pays much attention to such stories. He is too busy concentrating on racking up a couple of new National Hockey League records this season.

In his headlong gallop to a new goal-scoring mark, he is playing no favorites around the National League in his quest for a second 50-goal season or as his phenomenal pace indicates a record-smashing 60-goal campaign.

At this writing his record to date is 31 goals in 34 games. All goalies look alike to him as his record shows he has scored seven goals against the Bruins; five against Detroit; six against the Canadiens; seven against the Rangers and six against Toronto Maple Leafs.

According to the Hockey News, Hull has shared his 31 goals at home and away. He has fired 15 on home ice, four each against Detroit, Boston and Toronto, two against New York and one against Montreal.

On "foreign ice" he has accounted for five each against New York and Montreal; three against Boston, two against Toronto and one against Detroit.

On the road his best success has been at Montreal Forum where in four games he fired home five goals. This is somewhat ironical because in Hull's first four and one-half seasons in the National League, he failed to score a goal at the Forum in 38 games.

Of Hull's 31 goals to date five have been game-winners; six off the power-play; two each in six games; three in each of two games and two with the Hawks shorthanded.

And this neck of the Ontario backwoods may produce another Hull who seems destined for the big time.

With more ice time Bobby's younger brother Dennis is shedding his rookie hesitancy and beginning to emerge with some of his potential showing.

The Hawks nearly lost him when they sent him to St. Louis and the wily Leafs' Coach Punch Imlac picked up his waiver. Hawks Coach Billy Reay yanked Dennis back so fast he never had time to wear a St. Louis uniform.

Dennis got his chance in a game with Canadiens when he played on a line with Nesterenko and Stanfield. Early in the game with the Habs leading 1-0, Nesterenko stole the puck deep in Montreal ice and fed it to Dennis cruising near the Habs goal. The youngster grabbed it and let fire with a 10-footer on which Hodge never had a chance. It was his "maiden".

Overtime Mark Set By Canucks

By The Canadian Press

With their fourth tie in their fourth try, Vancouver Canucks Friday night set a Western Hockey League record for consecutive overtime games.

Their 3-3 home-ice sawoff with Seattle Totems was their fourth consecutive tie in a week of play, eclipsing the previous record of three straight established by several teams in the early 1950s.

Yet another tie in Portland, was the' Buckaroos' third in a row. Victoria Maple Leafs held them 1-1, which kept the Leafs unbeaten over five games.

Last - place San Francisco Seals came alive with an 8-1 home victory over Los Angeles Blades in the night's third game.

Hawks Unbeaten In 13, Take Over Top

By The Canadian Press

In Boston's topsy - turvy hockey world, the unusual usually becomes usual.

Winger Reg Fleming is a case in point.

His two goals and one assist paced the Bruins to a 3-0 shutout over Toronto Maple Leafs in one of two New Year's Night games in the National Hockey League. Chicago's streaking Black Hawks edged New York Rangers 3-1 in the other encounter - a game that extended the Hawks' unbeaten string to 13 but failed to produce a scoring point for the second night in a row for Bobby Hull.

Hull, who has smassed 31 goals in 34 games, failed to hit the scoresheet in the Hawks' 1-1 tie against Detroit Red Wings Thursday night.

The Bruins have been last-place finishers the last four campaigns but continue to attract sellout crowds at home. The fifth full house of 13,000 at Boston this season enjoyed the New Year's treat of a victory, the Bruins' eighth of the season and third in their last 12 games.

SHUFFLES LINES

Boston coach Milt Schmidt did some tricky line shuffling and came up with the combination of Fleming on right wing, rookie Bill Kelly at centre and Ed Westfall, a defenceman, on the left side. The line accounted for all three Boston goals.

Fleming's usual position is left wing. When Boston acquired him after Montreal Canadiens had given up on him, he was used as a forward this season he wasn't supposed to score many goals.

In Chicago, where he played the last four seasons, he was primarily a penalty-killer and penalty-collector (140 minutes last season), a tough guy with a chip on his shoulder.

One of his team-mates in Chicago, Ab McDonald, also went to Boston in the same trade. It was McDonald—56 goals in four years with Chicago—who was supposed to provide the scoring punch the Bruins so badly need. But McDonald has scored only three times as a Bruin.

Fleming's goals Friday were his ninth and 10th of the season and his fifth and sixth against Toronto. He got a total of only 21 goals during his four years with the Hawks.

Westfall was the other Boston goal-getter. Bruins scored twice in the second period and once in the third. Goaltender Eddie Johnston was spectacular in the Boston cause, making 38 saves compared with 21 for Toronto's Johnny Bower for his second shutout of the season.

The Leafs, defending Stanley Cup champions, haven't won a game since Dec. 19 when they defeated the Rangers 6-3 in Toronto. They have logged four ties, a loss and a tie in their last five games.

The Leafs ran into big trouble in the second period when Ron Ellis, sensational rookie right winger, was knocked out when he collided with Bruin defenceman Leo Boivin and sat out the rest of the game with a mild concussion. It was the second time in the last three Leaf games that Ellis had been knocked out. He was kayoed last Saturday by a wayward elbow belonging to Chicago rearguard Al MacNeil.

Ellis, 19, is a doubtful starter for the Leafs' game tonight.

In Chicago, Dennis Hull, rookie brother of Bobby Hull, fired the winning goal in the third period as the Hawks won a tight game and moved into sole possession of first place over the idle Montreal Canadiens by one point.

Hull's goal was the softest shot of the night by any player. He was stationed near Ranger goalie Jacques Plante when a pass from Ken Wharram got to him.

Plante went down and nudged the puck a few feet in front of the net. Hull managed to get his stick on the puck as he was falling and scooped it into the cage.

Rod Gilbert gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the first period, converting passes from linemates Camille Henry and Phil Goyette while Chicago's Doug Mohns was in the penalty box.

Hawks tied the score late in the second frame, also on a power-play goal, with defenceman Pierre Pilote doing the scoring.

Plante made 28 stops, 15 in the final period including several against Bobby Hull. Denis DeJordy made 29 stops in the Chicago net.

DeJordy was sensational Thursday night making 39 stops for Detroit netminder Roger Crozier.

The Hawks and Wings wrapped up their scoring in the first 4½ minutes of play, then battled on even terms the rest of the way. Norm Ullman got Detroit's goal and Eric Nesterenko scored for Chicago.

The Hawks have 42 points on 19 victories and four ties. Canadiens are next with 41, followed by Detroit with 36, Toronto with 32, New York with 27 and Boston with 20.

Two games are set for tonight, Boston at Montreal and Detroit at Toronto. On Sunday, Montreal is at Chicago, Toronto at New York and Boston at Detroit.

Marlies, Canadiens Win

Generals Nip Rangers 6-4

By The Canadian Press

If 1965 continues as well as it started in Oshawa, Ontario can be quite a year for the Oshawa General forward.

Buchanan scored two of any goals Friday night as the Generals nipped Kitchener Rangers 6-4 in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series action, but he did manage two assists. It brought his scoring streak to 12 points-scoring streak to 12.

Oshawa's win left them in fourth place in the eight-team league with 32 points, but they pulled to within five of Peterborough Petes, 3-1 losers to second - place Niagara Falls Flyers at Niagara Falls.

In other league action Friday, Montreal Junior Canadiens edged St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-3 in St. Catharines and league - leading Toronto Marlboros drowned Hamilton Red Wings 7-3 in Toronto.

At Oshawa, Oshawa Generals needed Wayne Cashman's third goal of the night into an empty net with 25 seconds remaining. Other Oshawa scorers were Jim Booth, Bob Marshall and Bill Hicke.

The Rangers got goals from Bob Jones with two, Sandy Fitzpatrick and Ron Ellis. They stayed within rangs throughout the game until Cashman's goal put the Gens in reach.

Niagara Falls remained four points behind the Marlboros by scoring all three goals in the second period against Peterborough. Jean Pronovost, Brian Bradley and Bud Debrody were the Flyers' goal-getters.

Dan Grant got the Peterborough goal in the third period, too late to help Niagara Falls' eighth-victory without a defeat.

At St. Catharines, montreal let the Black Hawks run to a 3-1 first-period lead before tying the game in the second period and winning it on a goal by Norm Ferguson in the third.

COMPLAINT ISSUED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A has been issued against Jim Da vid, defensive halfback coach of San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League in connection with injuries suffered by a woman and child who were run down by a car. The complaint, issued Thursday, names David, 37, as the driver of the car that hit Mrs. Lois Gordon, 32, and John Gordon Jr., 10, both of San Francisco, two days before Christmas.

Indians Nudge Clippers

By The Canadian Press

Springfield Indians took the most direct route Friday night in their bid to climb into third place in the American Hockey League's Eastern Division.

They beat third - place Baltimore Clippers 4-3 with the help of a two - goal performance by Brian Smith, and now have 28 points on the same 36 games.

Providence Reds, cellar-dwellers in the Eastern Division, scored a goal in each period to dump Cleveland Barons 3-1. Cleveland is in last place in the Western Division.

All teams see action at least once during the weekend, with Buffalo and Quebec the only home - and - home doubleheaders. Rochester and Hershey are involved in another. Quebec plays in Pittsburgh tonight and in Baltimore Sunday. Providence is at Springfield tonight and at home to Pittsburgh Sunday.

In Friday night's action at Baltimore, the Indians and Clippers battled to 2-2 half way through the game, but Springfield went ahead 4-2 by the end of the period. Bruce Rivers, Rodger Cote and Jerry Foley added goals to Smith's pair for the Indians. Ted Taylor scored twice for Baltimore and Ray Brunet once.

In Providence, the Barons got the first goal, by Doug Senior, but the Reds scored two goals and a single by Eddie Kachur gave Providence the game. Cleveland's goal came too late, short for five minutes in the second period after Sighis Arvidsons' Warren Park's and Larry McNabb, and Ronnie Atwell and Butch Barber.

STEALS SHOW

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Grady Smith, a powerful sprinter from Florida A and M College, stole the show in the Orange Bowl track meet Friday by smashing an old U.S. record in the 300-yard dash. Smith knocked two-tenths of a second off the record for this seldom - run event by hitting the tape in 30 seconds flat. Charlie Paddock set the record at 30.2 in 1920.

Toronto Tournament

Sweep Dreams For Curling Stars

TORONTO (CP)—Eight of the finest rinks in Canada and the United States will compete in the $10,000 Tournament of Champions bonspiel at Maple Leaf Gardens here Jan. 5-8. It is a round-robin affair with semi-finals and final set for the final day.

Heading the list is the Lyall Dagg rink from Vancouver, 1964 Canadian and world champion. Others from Western Canada are the Ernie Richardson rink from Regina, four-time Canadian and world champion; Hec Gervais of Edmonton, the 1962 Canadian and world title-holder, and a young Winnipeg skipped by Herah Larner.

Bob Ate's U.S. men champions from Duluth, Minn., provide an international flavor and Bob Ash and Hal Klaudt, schoolboy championship rink from Kirkland Lake, Ont., add a David and Goliath touch to the tournament.

A Unionville rink skipped by Murray Roberts qualified in a special eight-rink Ontario playoff held Doug Converse of Charlottetown, P.E.I., represents the Atlantic provinces.

The tournament has been sanctioned by the Ontario Curling Association with the stipulation that any OCA rink qualifying for a prize exceeding the limit of $150 will be placed under Ontario rules, accept an alternate prize which conforms to the regulations.

The Roberts rink is the only entry from the OCA but it will be joined by the Bob Ash rink some from the Northern Ontario Association in abiding by the OCA ruling.

If the situation arises, the difference in value between the prize offered and the prize accepted will go to a recognized charity acceptable to the rink and the OCA committee.

First prize value is $5,000, second $2,500, third $1,000 and fourth $600. Prizes are based on hold appliances. In addition every contestant will receive a watch as a souvenir.

The first round starts Tuesday. The opening draw has Dagg meeting Gervais, Richardson taking on Lerner, Canavan playing Magle and Ash vs. Roberts. There are three draws each on Wednesday and Thursday.

Skaters to Compete In Norway

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian speed skaters will compete in world championships in Norway and Finland in February, it was announced Thursday.

Nationals Salvage Point In Tourney

Tie Czechs 3-3

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP) — Canada's national hockey team salvaged a point in the international tournament with a three Thursday night, tying Czechoslovakia 3-3 on a pair of third - period goals by two Winnipeg natives, former NHL forwards Gary Aldcorn and Aggie Kukulowicz.

Kukulowicz, 30 - year - old centre who played with New York Rangers and Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League and six minor pro clubs for a total of nine years before joining Winnipeg Maroons last year, got the tying goal with just 39 seconds of play remaining.

The six-foot-two, 185-pounder scored from a frantic scramble in front of the goal with Aldcorn getting an assist.

The Canadians put on a tremendous last - ditch effort to keep from going goalless in the tournament after three straight defeats, and, outshot the Czechs in the final session 19 to 4.

Russia's world and Olympic champions won the tournament, a double round - robin affair played over a span of six nights, with three victories and one loss for six points. Czechoslovakia, which handed the Russians their only loss, finished second with two wins, one tie and one loss for five points. Canada was last with three losses and a tie for one point. The Czechs, who had beaten

Razorbacks Sharp; Syracuse Beaten

Stars Fell On Alabama; Roses For Mich.

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Arkansas' red Razorbacks capped a perfect football season with a Cotton Bowl victory over Nebraska and Texas Stars fell hard on national champion Alabama 21-17 in the Orange Bowl Friday in two of four post-season U.S. college football games.

Runners-up to Alabama in season - end polls, Arkansas stormed 80 yards in the closing minutes for the touchdown that beat Nebraska 10-7 at Dallas.

And Ernie Koy's 76 - yard scoring bolt and a 66-yard jim Hudson - George Saner touchdown pass keyed fifth-ranked Texas to an upset over previously unbeaten, untied Alabama at Miami despite a phenomenal passing performance by Alabama quarterback Joe Namath.

Michigan's awesome ground attack, led by fullback Mel Anthony, carried the fourth-ranked Wolverines to a 34-7 Rose Bowl runaway over Oregon State and Doug Moreau's pass - catching and place-kicking gave Louisiana State a 13-10 Sugar Bowl decision over Syracuse in Friday's other post-season spectaculars.

Arkansas' victory made them the only remaining undefeated, untied major college team in the nation.

And the loss by Alabama was doubly disappointing to coach Paul Bryant, who has never managed a victory against Texas coach Darrell Royal.

GATOR BOWL TODAY

To be played today is the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., between Florida State and Oklahoma, whose coach Thursday was forced to disqualify a tackle, two backs and an end who had signed undated professional contracts.

It took a series of last-ditch passes by quarterback Fred Marshall and Bobby Burnett's three-yard scoring run with 4:41 on the Cotton Bowl clock to give Arkansas the victory. Marshall passed for 16 yards and ran for 10 in the winning drive.

Sophomore quarterback Bob Churchich set up Nebraska's touchdown with a 36-yard pass to sophomore Harry Wilson and Wilson slammed the final yard. Arkansas scored first on a 31-yard field goal by Tom McKnelly.

Texas built a 21-7 halftime lead on the two long scoring strikes and Koy's one-yard run 38 seconds before intermission but headed a fourth - quarter goal line stand to hold off Namath and the resurgent red raiders.

Playing on a damaged right knee, Namath set an Orange Bowl mark of 18 pass completions, fired two touchdown passes and set up David Ray's 10-yard field goal before directing a final drive that died on the Texas half-yard line. Alabama had a first down on the Longhorn six but four shots failed to cross the Steers' goal.

Michigan's Anthony scored three touchdowns, including an 84-yard run from scrimmage that broke the Rose Bowl record, and gained 123 of the Wolverines' 332 rushing yards. The Big Ten champs, unbeaten in four Pasadena appearances, trailed 7-0 when the 201-pound Anthony broke loose on his long scoring jaunt.

Halfback Carl Ward seared 45 yards to give Michigan a 12-7 halftime edge and two third-period touchdowns by Anthony and a 24-yard scoring run by all-America quarterback Bob Timberlake completed the rout.

Moreau, whose third-quarter reception of Billy Exell's 57-yard scoring pass erased a 10-3 Syracuse lead, booted the winning field goal from 28 yards with 2:31 to play. Pat Screen's 29-yard bootleg run and 35-yard pass to Joe Labruzzo set up the winning three-pointer.

Syracuse, which never has beaten a Southeastern Conference team, built its halftime edge on end Brad Clarke's 28-yard ramble with a blocked LSU punt and Roger Smith's 23-yard field goal.

Namath To Sign For $400,000?

Leagues Have Contracts Woes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The bitterly competitive pro football leagues found themselves in more contract trouble today following disclosure of premature signings that have put the status of a number of players in jeopardy with college officials.

At the same time, quarterback Joe Namath of Alabama's national champions was expected to sign a $400,000 contract that epitomizes the contest to which the National and American leagues are prepared to go to sign college players.

Coach Homer Jones Friday declared four of his Oklahoma football players ineligible for today's Gator Bowl game with Florida State.

Tackle Ralph Neely and three teammates were dropped from the squad when it was learned they already had signed contracts with teams in both leagues.

K. S. Adams, owner of the AFL Houston Oilers, disclosed that Neely had signed a four-year contract with Houston Dec. 1. Signing with Minnesota Vikings of the NFL were full-back Jim Grimsham, flanker Lance Rentzel and end West Skidgel.

SITUATION COMPOUNDED

Neely's situation was compounded later in the day when he signed with Dallas Cowboys of the NFL, contending his pact with Houston was not binding.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the NFL said he was investigating the signings, but AFL commissioner Joe Foss was not available for comment.

The Oklahoma incident added to the earlier case of all-American tackle Jim Wilson of Georgia, who signed with the AFL Boston Patriots and the NFL San Francisco 49ers.

Namath, who passed brilliantly in Alabama's 21-17 Orange Bowl loss to Texas, was expected to sign with New York Jets of the AFL today for terms previously unheard of in football history.

He is reported to be getting $100,000 a year for three years plus bonuses adding to another $100,000 and $5,000 a year for life after he retires from football.

Want To Redeem Pride

Green Bay 'Up' For Cardinals

MIAMI (AP) — Green Bay Packers are full of fire and fight for their Playoff Bowl game with St. Louis Cardinals here Sunday involving the divisional runners-up of the National Football League.

The reason: They are anxious to redeem the divisional pride Cleveland Browns dealt a season ago.

Coach Vince Lombardi, who last year finished second to the Colts in the western race while St. Louis was barely beaten out by the Browns, what kind of football we play in the Western Division."

the Canadians' 4-3 earlier in the tournament, seemed headed for an easy win when they scored three goals in the first period, two of them while the Canadians were short-handed.

Jiri Hajik, Josef Gerny and Leonik gave the Czechs a 3-0 lead after more than eight minutes of scoreless play. Hollik broke the scoring ice at 8:31 with an assist from his brother, Josef, and Cerny and Leonik added goals in the last five minutes of the period while defenceman Terry O'Malley of Toronto and right winger Elliott Chorley of Winnipeg were serving minors.

Forward Jim McKenzie of Winnipeg scored Canada's first goal mid-way in the second period on a 50-foot slap shot from just inside the blue line. Defenceman Barry MacKenzie of Toronto got an assist on the goal.

The Canadians broke loose in the final period and swarmed all over Czech goalie Vladimir Dzurilla, who had a game total of 34 saves to 23 for Canadian goalie Ken Broderick of Toronto.

KNOCKS IN REBOUND

Aldcorn, 30-year-old veteran who played with Toronto, Boston and Detroit in the NHL, knocked in his own rebound from about eight feet at 18:45 to close the gap to 3-2 and then helped set up the tying goal a few final seconds with tricking away.

The winning Russians received the Walter Brown Memorial Trophy, named after the well known Boston hockey official who was one of the leaders in the amateur hockey movement.

The Canadians were beaten by the Russians twice, 5-3 and 7-5.

The Russians and Czechs split their pair of games, Russia winning the first 8-3 but losing the second 5-3.

DANCE3 STRANGLED

TORONTO (CP)—John James Charles Wright, 27, of Toronto was charged Friday with noncapital murder in the death of Carole Ann Lavergne, a 26-year-old Toronto dancer. The body of Miss Lavergne was found on the kitchen roof of a downtown house earlier Friday. An autopsy indicated death was due to asphyxiation caused by strangulation and inhalation of vomit.

Ratings Show Alan Hale Has Picked a New Winner

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For Alan Hale it looks as if the third time makes the charm.

The belly, extroverted actor, who fitted really into his father's footsteps as a jolly, capable character actor, has been at bat three times in the television game. The first venture was Biff Baker, which pioneered the MCA TV dynasty. "We were Revue's second series; Bill Williams started Rin Can on a few days before us."

That lasted a season. Later came Casey Jones for Screen Gems. "There was a lapse of a year between the pilot and the series," Alan recalls, "so I saw the producer once during that time—and it was the only time I ever saw him."

Again, a season's run.

Alan joined Dan Dennes, Jim Backus, Tina Louise and other castaways on Gilligan's Island and this time the ratings indicate he has picked a winner. "I think people enjoy it," Alan said as we began to appreciate a show that has no problems to just fun." He's not at all disclosed that some folks have been comparing him and Bob Denver to Laurel and Hardy.

It has been a half - dozen years since Alan dropped the banner of his billing. He did so not to escape the image of his father, famed as the jolly side-kick of Errol Flynn in numerous adventure films. Unlike some second-generation actors, young Hale welcomed the comparison with his father.

"I always remember what my grandfather told me one day," he recalled. "We were sitting in the backyard of our Hollywood house and he said, 'what's that?' I asked him, 'what's it to you?' he said, 'what's behind you,' he said. I said, oh, that's my shadow,' and he replied, 'don't ever lose it.' In other words: Find my own place in the sun."

'Scots Wha Hae' Battle New Year's Day

GLASGOW, Scotland (Reuters)—Rangers scored a 1-0 victory over Celtic Friday in the traditional New Year's Day league game between the Glasgow rivals—a match marred by roughness and crowd scenes.

More than 50 arrests were made and about the same number of spectators were given first aid after being hit by bottles and beer cans thrown by others among the crowd of 60,000. Jimmy Johnstone of Celtic was sent off the pitch in the first half.

Celtic, which has not won a New Year's Day game against Rangers for 10 years, was rather unlucky to lose. Murdoch missed on a penalty by six minutes from the end.

The only goal was scored by Forrest in the 3rd minute with a great driving shot.

Kilmarnock went to the top of the league with a 4-0 win over St. Mirren. Hamilton scored twice, once in each half, and the other goals came from Sneddon and Murray.

A second-half goal by William Hamilton gave Hibernian a 1-0 win which ended Hearts' unbeaten home record for this season.

McCraw and J. Sorensen each scored twice in Morton's 4-0 win over Third Lanark. Motherwell beat with a 2-1 victory over Airdrieonians, which had won only one previous match this season.

GLASGOW (Reuters) — Police arrested more than 50 supporters of Glasgow's two rival soccer teams, Rangers and Celtic, after traditional violences in their New Year's Day clash Friday.

Seven persons, including a policeman, were injured in a barrage of whisky and beer bottles hurled on to the field by angry spectators after a Celtic player was ordered off by the referee.

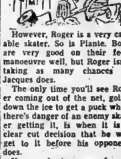
Another 40 spectators received minor treatment.

Some 60,000 spectators watched Rangers contribute their 1-0 victory in the Scottish League's first division with a 1-0 victory.

The meetings between the Glasgow teams have a long history of violence triggered by religious overtones — Protestant support for Rangers and Catholic support for Celtic.

Five hundred police, including all the city's mounted police and dog-handlers, were on duty at Ibrox Park following a warning of trouble action against violence.

They swung into action after Celtic player Jim Johnston was given marching orders by the referee following an incident with a Rangers player.



Six spectators and a police officer, his head badly gashed, were knocked to the ground as a hail of bottles and tins were hurled from one section of the crowd on the terrace.

Gordie Howe's Hockey

By GORDIE HOWE

Young Roger Crozier has been doing quite a job as the Detroit Red Wing goalie this season. There have been those who were worried about his going out of the net, but there's really little need to worry on that score.

Like Jacques Plante, he goes out of the net to stop shots back of it for defencemen, but he wouldn't say Roger is the wandering type.

However, Roger is a very capable skater. So is Plante. Both are very good on their feet, manoeuvre well, but Roger isn't taking as many chances as Jacques does.

The only time you'll see Roger coming out of the net, going down the ice to get a puck when there's danger of an enemy skater getting it, is when it is a clear cut decision that he will get to it before his opponent does.

He was having some fun in practice the other day. He'd come out of the net and say something like, "Give it to me, I'll make sure of it". He was clowning.

We were trying to get another man on the ice. We had a delayed penalty. We were laughing at Roger because he tried to shoot the puck over the glass. He never did get it over.

He finally shot the puck over the glass in practice the other day for the first time and we all gave him a big hand. It is a penalty to deliberately shoot the puck out of the playing area. It is also a penalty against the team for his net too often.

Johnny Bucyk hit him in Boston. And Eddie Shack creamed him once the last time we were in Toronto. Roger was smart enough to get right back to the play. He went down with it and didn't get hurt to any great extent.

But when he leaves the net, you should hear Sid Abel yell for him to get back. Having played with Sid, I know Sid has a very good carrying voice.

Regals Line Tops Senior Points Race

GALT (CP)—Guelph's No. 1 line is keeping the Regals atop the Ontario Senior Association senior standings, and not even an injury to the loop's top goal scorer is preventing them from continuing their scoring spree.

Dave Luciuk and Don McGregor are tied in the lead with 40 points each — Luciuk with 14 goals and 26 assists while McGregor has compiled 12 goals and a league - leading 28 assists.

Joe Mata, their injured left-winger, has been on the sidelines for the last three weeks and has seen his linemates pass him in the scoring derby. However, he has 36 points, made up of 17 goals—tops in the league—and 19 assists, is still good enough for third spot.

Galt Hornet veteran Joe Hodges is two points back while Vance Millar, Welland Blacks' slick play - making centre, is in fifth place with 31 points, three ahead of Earl Balfour, a former National Hockey League player now with Galt, and playing - coach Ted Power of Woodstock Athletics.

Boat Burley, veteran Regal netminder, continued to lead the loop's goaltenders despite a recent challenge from rookie Dave Dryden of Galt.

Hurley posted his second shutout of the season in blanking the Hornets 4-0 in a crucial game last week and shaved his goals - against average to 2.62.

ANNOUNCER DIES

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Pete Byron, 54, radio address announcer for the Philadelphia Phillies baseball team since 1951, died Thursday at his home. Byron was a well-known sports figure in baseball, soccer and basketball in Philadelphia before he became the public address announcer for the old Philadelphia Athletics in 1949 and then the Phillies.

Kingston Jrs. Win Over Apple Kings

TRENTON (Special)—Kingston Frontenacs, leaders of the Eastern Ontario Junior "B" division, romped to an easy 13-2 victory over Trenton Apple Kings, junior "C" leaguers in an exhibition game here last night.

A New Year's Night crowd of some 500 fans saw the winners grab a 3-0 first period lead; increase it to 5-1 in the second frame and tuck the win away with a five-goal final period splurge.

The Trenton youngsters put up a plucky fight against their heavier, more experienced opponents and were deserving of a better fate.

Ron Earl, Kingston ace, had a field night scoring four of the winners goals. Leo Colligan, D. Smith and Guy White each tallied a pair with R. Smith, John Mercier and Dennis Kearns contributing singles.

Dale Lewis and Glover scored the Trenton markers.

Kingston outshot the Apple Kings 35-19.

Thirteen penalties, seven to Kingston, were handed out by the officials. All were minors.

Your Car

Always Add Same Kind of Anti-Freeze

When you must add anti-freeze to assure continued protection, don't mix one kind or brand with another. First of all, you have no sure way of knowing the compatibility of different anti-freeze solutions and the freezing protection they provide. Thus, you could be risking a freeze-up when the temperature hits bottom. A mixture of different anti-freeze products can also cause sludge or foaming. In the latter case, a good part of the coolant may be lost through the radiator overflow. There are other possible dangers to consider, too. When rust and corrosion inhibitors in one brand are used, a freeze mix with those of another, you could bring about a chemical reaction which would be harmful rather than helpful to the cooling system.

C. S. writes: "When you stated a weak battery can affect gas mileage, you did not tell how much."

A weak battery wastes gas by causing cold engine starting periods to last missing at idle and low speeds.

From O. M.: "What's the cause of a light coming on flapping noise which always occurs when the engine is first started, but soon seems to disappear when it's warmed up?"

Usually a piston rocking in its cylinder because of excess clearance between piston and cylinder reducing this clearan ce to .and full oil circulation further causes the piston side motion.

S.D. asks: "My '61 sedan has always been economical to run. Now after 37,000 miles, it's suddenly using twice as much oil. Would this point to the valves or to piston trouble, or both?"

Is your engine still thoroughly for leakage? This is usually the reason when there's a sudden increase in oil or gas consumption.

F. B. writes: "The cigarette lighter on my '59 does not work. How do I fix it?"

The lighter socket coat be at fault, but the usual cause of this is the coil element . . . which you can easily replace. Your auto supply store or service dealer has the part.

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

A taxpayer who purchases bonds or other revenue producing assets in his wife's name with the mistaken idea that he will not be subject to income tax will get quite a shock when he finds he is taxable on this as long as the assets are held by his wife.

One of the first questions asked by the income tax assessor in such cases is "Who supplied the capital to purchase the asset?" The person who supplies the capital to purchase revenue producing assets is the one that is responsible for the tax on the income earned by the invested capital. In short, you cannot use your capital this way to escape income tax.

A taxpayer in business where he employs his wife may not deduct as a business expense the salary he pays her unless on the other hand the wife need not file a return if her only income is the salary she receives from her husband. If a son or daughter is employed by the father, their wages are deductible as a business expense. The taxpayer who is having employment to enter into business, should check on all these points before he has to file his income tax return. My advice to such persons is to engage the services of a practising accountant to set up the bookkeeping system and prepare the first income tax return. In having done the accountant will save the employer hundreds more in the future taxes than the fee charged for his services.

If the taxpayer is in partnership on an equal basis with another person and the taxpayers wife is employed by the firm, the wife needs to report only one-half of her salary. The other half must be added to her husband's return.

QUESTION: I read replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self-addressed and stamped envelope and send 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

QUESTION: I buy bonds in my wife's name through the payroll deduction plan. I am told I have to pay the tax on the interest. Why?

ANSWER: The person supplying the capital to purchase the bonds must report the interest on his income tax return as provided in Section 21 (1) of the Income Tax Act.

QUESTION: I am thinking of buying a business and employing my wife and two sons. Can I deduct their wages as a business expense?

ANSWER: The only deductible amount is the wages paid to your sons.

QUESTION: I have been told that we will have to pay property I have to pay tax on all the improvements I have claimed. Is this correct?

ANSWER: Yes. The recapture is on any amount claimed since 1949.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Cubans aboard a refugee boats to reach Florida in the last day discontent is growing on the Communist island. Buddhists Renew Campaign, Battle Police, Troops

New All-Out Drive To Oust Premier Huong

From Reuters-AP

SAIGON (CP) — A mob of 1,000 Buddhists and students today surged through the streets of Saigon shouting anti-American and anti-government slogans.

The demonstration was the first step in a new all-out drive by Buddhists to oust the regime of Premier Tran Van Huong. Riots and widespread unrest accompanied an earlier such campaign in November.

The latest political disarray followed a major military defeat last week for government forces and their American advisers by the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas at the town of Binh Gia, 40 miles southeast of the capital.

In the six-day battle—longest single battle of the war—the guerrillas inflicted heavy losses on the government side, captured a large amount of weapons and ammunition and proved their ability to stand and fight in conventional military engagement.

Guerrillas ambushed another South Vietnamese ranger battalion near Binh Gia and killed 119 rangers. Another seven rangers were killed and 30 or 40 are missing.

SIX AMERICANS KILLED

So far six Americans have been killed in the fighting around Binh Gia, which started last Tuesday. Another two are missing and presumed captured. Government casualties are estimated at about 500.

The losses brought American casualties in Viet Nam since the beginning of 1961 to nearly 2,000—347 killed in action, 107 died in other incidents, 23 missing and 1,524 wounded.

In Saigon, steel - helmeted troops followed the demonstrators closely in an attempt to forestall violence.

Squads of armed marines made no attempt to stop the demonstrators, but the rioters manhandled photographers and any police who got in the way. Fights broke out repeatedly as the crowd charged about the city.

At one point, the mob unfurled a banner denouncing "involvement of the American government and Ambassador Henry Cabot Taylor in Vietnamese affairs."

SCORE INJURED

No large casualties were believed to have been injured and 30 were arrested. Among those injured was Associated Press Photographer Huynh Cong La.

The demonstrators first assembled at the pagoda and then marched three miles to the barricaded national Buddhist headquarters. Opposition by an hour at the central market.

Police Guard Margaret

DUBLIN (AP)—Police threw a strong guard around Princess Margaret today after threats against her by the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Two big trees were felled across the route which the princess and her husband, Lord Snowdon, normally would have taken Sunday night from Dublin to Birr Castle, their Irish holiday home.

Five others were partly sawn through. But the Royal motorcade took another route, ostensibly to avoid icy roads.

Heavy security was clamped down as the couple arrived at Dublin Airport to stay at Birr as guests of the Earl and Countess of Rosse. The countess is Snowdon's mother.

The felled trees brought down power lines and blacked out villages along the 80-mile route to Birr.

Police said young IRA extremists had launched a campaign against the princess' visit with leaflets urging Birr's townspeople to "show your hostility."

Despite the leaflets a crowd of about 200 cheered as the royal limousine entered the castle gates. The car's interior lights were on, and the princess waved cheerfully.

At the airport, police tore down posters saying "Maggie go home" and "Down with the Queen." Scores of security men stood every 100 yards along her route through Dublin.

Two Babies Perish in Kingston Fire

KINGSTON (CP)—Two babies died in a fire Saturday that burned out their parents' home here.

Dead are Susan Cheetham, 1, and her sister Catharine, 3, children of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cheetham.

The father told police he was watching television when he noticed the flames and rushed upstairs to save the babies, but he was forced back by smoke and flames.

Mrs. Cheetham was at work when the fire occurred. Five other children survive.

Fire officials said a faulty chimney caused the blaze.

Serenity In House Not Seen

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson's wish for parliamentary supporters was a happy, peaceful and "serene" new year.

But close examination of the contents of the prime minister's final press conference in 1964 left small hope of much serenity on Parliament Hill.

Mr. Pearson apparently recognized this himself. In wishing serenity for the reporters in 1965, he said:

"That, it seems to me, is infinitely desirable, if unobtainable."

Parliamentary reporters aren't much inclined to patrol House of Commons corridors seeking serenity.

They have found after many years experience that serenity is a scarce commodity when Parliament is in session.

PROSPECTS MORE WORK

Mr. Pearson's year-end press conference indicated last Thursday that there are prospects Parliament will be in session again for a good part of 1965. If it isn't, then it's almost certain the law-makers and would-be law-makers will be engaged in a rousing election campaign.

Serenity will then exist on Parliament Hill, but only because the politicians will be on the election trail and the reporters will be following them

State of Union Message To Deal in Generalities

WASHINGTON (CP) — The American political show is back on the road today with the convening of the 89th Congress. President Johnson will report on the state of the union tonight. The election last Nov. 3 gave the Democrats the whip hand in Congress, with 68 of the 100 Senate seats and 295 of the 435 seats in the House of Representatives.

But Johnson's address tonight —which corresponds roughly to the speech from the throne in Canada in which legislative plans are hinted at or sketched lightly — is expected to play down the one-sided state of Congress.

Nor is Johnson expected to ask for anything revolutionary in the way of legislation to bring about his Great Society.

Congress will have a lot of work to do this year, it is agreed. But it will be in expansion of four main areas—federal aid for education, the war against poverty, a medical care program for the elderly and conservation.

Johnson's half-hour address, to be televised nationally, is just one of several departures the president has planned for today and his formal inauguration Jan. 20.

Normally, the report on the state of the union would be given several days after Congress convenes.

In Congress itself, there has been more scuffling within the Democratic and Republican parties than between the two of them.

The Republicans, still smarting from a crushing election defeat, are quarrelling about retaining Senator Barry Goldwater's appointees in the party hierarchy.

There is a campaign to wrest the House of Representatives floor leadership from Charles Halleck, Indiana. The challenger is a younger man, Gerald Ford of Michigan, little different from Halleck in his politics and conservatism, which tend to the right.

And three Democrats are after the job of assistant Senate leader. One will replace Vice-President-elect Hubert Humphrey.

Initially, at least, Johnson is expected to have all the congressional support he needs and one of his main objectives will be to keep it that way.

He has been recollecting the events of 1937 when Franklin Roosevelt had a big majority but split that support with a controversial bill to expand the membership of the Supreme Court.

That is why Johnson is expected to make haste slowly with Congress and to deliver today a state of the union address much richer in generalities than in details or striking legislation.

'Record Profits' in Past Year for Corporations

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the happiest times in the opening days and weeks of the new year will be entitled "record profits."

Many corporations already have reported notable gains over their previous year's figures. This week the leading banks of the United States are expected to announce increased earnings for the year just ended. The 425 leading industrial firms should reach full volume by the end of the month and early February.

Largest reporting to date is American Telephone and Telegraph Bell system, which had 12-month record earnings of $1,700,000,000, up from $1,500,000,000 in the 1963 period.

When all are reported some weeks hence, before-tax profits for U.S. corporations in 1964 should total around $58,000,000,000 or more. With income taxes taking about $26,000,000,000 of this, the after-tax net would be around $32,000,000,000, a record, and compares with $26,700,000,000 in 1963.

Corporations with fiscal years ending before the calendar one, including the majority in some industries, already have shown how the profit tide is rising. Only a handful have reported decreased earnings, and usually these individual companies are going against the trend of their own industries.

Firestone Tire and Rubber netted $79,000,000 in fiscal 1964, against $63,000,000 the previous year. International Harvester made almost $89,000,000, against $68,000,000. Carrier rose by nearly $2,870,000 to $10,850,000.

Traffic Death Records Beaten Over Holiday

CHICAGO (AP)—The United States ended its three-day observance of the New Year at midnight Sunday night, breaking all previous traffic death records for the holiday and surpassing the worst fears of traffic experts.

Highway accidents during the 78 - hour period claimed 453 lives, passing the New Year's high mark set during a four-day holiday in 1955-56 when 450 persons died. The previous three-day record was 374 in 1963-64.

Mayor J. R. Ellis Suggests Using 'Pay As You Go' Plan For Smaller Expenditures

Re-paving Pinnacle St. Will Be One of First of Works Projects

Re-paving of Pinnacle Street following the removal of the railway tracks, further anaylsis of the city's traffic report of four years ago, together with close attention to city financing, with the view of adopting a "pay as you go" policy for smaller items of expenditures which previously have been debentured, were among the items promised by Mayor J. R. Ellis at the inaugural meeting of city council today.

Mayor Ellis agreed that the actual removal of the railway tracks from Pinnacle Street were "long overdue" and said that the completion of re-paving would be one of the more important works for the city works department this year.

RECONSIDER REPORT

He said also that a new look would have to be made before the first phase of recommendations contained in the city traffic report were put into effect.

Construction of two shopping plazas, one on the west and the other in the west, had materially changed the city's traffic problem and this and other matters should be taken into consideration before big roads and bridges improvements were made.

The mayor complimented city hall officials for their co-operation last year and said the city had ended 1964 with a budget surplus of approximately $40,000.

Alderman Jack Deacon expressed thanks to the mayor for his inaugural address noting that (the mayor) had done his homework well." Alderman Deacon congratulated Mayor Ellis on his year-end report.

WILL CUT COUNCIL

Included on the agenda at today's inaugural council meeting were recommendations from the Mayor J. R. Ellis directing the city solicitor to make application to the Ontario Legislature for a private bill authorizing a reduction in the number of aldermen from 14 to 10 effective January 1st, 1966, and also providing for all of council to be elected in December, 1965, for a two-year term.

To allow council to thoroughly discuss the matter, however, council agreed to hold a special meeting late this afternoon.

The inaugural meeting was called to order by City Manager J. A. Deacon, and alderman-elect within the bar, where they received the oath of office from City Clerk Adam Stalker.

Re-elected to council were: Aldermen Jack Allin, Jack Arvid, Jack Deacon and Frank Murray. Taking seats on the council for the first time were Aldermen Thomas Carruthers, Tom Lally and Kenneth Soden.

Invocation was pronounced by Canon Robert Wright, Christ Church, while Divine Blessing was given by Rev. Monsignor J. B. Sullivan of St. Michael's Church.

PRESENTS PLAQUES

One of the highlights of the morning's inaugural session was the presentation by Mayor Ellis of service plaques to four former aldermen: George Wishart, Ross C. Bailey, George

58 Perish As Church Roof Falls

By AP-Reuters

MEXICO CITY (CP)—Fifty-eight Mexicans were killed and 54 were injured when the roof of a new Roman Catholic church collapsed during Sunday mass at Rijo, 76 miles southeast of Mexico City.

About 300 worshippers were seated in their pews when the concrete roof suddenly collapsed with a roar.

Officials said a preliminary investigation pointed to defective construction as the cause of the tragedy.

Among those killed was the priest officiating at the mass, Rev. Reinaldi Arellano Orfers, whose brother, a mason, was said to be the designer and builder of the church.

Police said they were seeking the mason for interrogation.

Rijo is a village of 3,000 inhabitants, mostly workers of wood nearby. Atencingo sugar mill.

"I heard a roaring noise and looked up and saw the centre part of the roof coming down," said one survivor, Alfonso Escamilla, 25.

Escamilla was in hospital in Puebla, capital of the state in which Rijo is located. He was the only one of four persons in

American Liner Brought to Standstill For Forty Hours by Smashing Waves

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Liner Independence I arrived Sunday after battling through a violent North Atlantic storm which brought it to a standstill off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland for 40 hours. Sixteen persons were injured amid some terrifying incidents.

The 26,000-ton passenger ship was slammed with 60 - foot waves which smashed windows on upper decks and ripped open a 50 - foot hole in a lower deck.

Passengers were flung about as the liner wallowed in the mountainous waves. Many were gripped by seasickness.

Some became apprehensive and took to napping fully clothed in the public lounges after hearing of an incident in which a gigantic wave smashed a window of an upper - deck cabin and hurled a half-ton of icy water upon a couple asleep.

Capt. Charles Reilly, skipper of the Independence, described the rough water as the worst he had encountered in more than 40 years at sea.

"The waves rose to a height of 60 feet and spilled over the bridge deck," he related. "It was like riding a roller coaster."

The liner was returning from a 22-day Mediterranean cruise with 807 passengers. Passengers and crew were preparing for a New Year's Eve celebration when the storm struck about 10 p.m.

Reilly said nothing could be done, to avoid it, because the storm stretched out over a distance of about 1,100 miles.

The best that could be done was to reduce speed radically, he said, from the 22-knot cruising speed to a 2½ knots.

Independence held virtually the same position in the ocean until 2 p.m. Saturday, when it got a day late arriving here. One crew member suffered a broken ankle and 15 passengers were treated for bruises during the storm.

The most harrowing experience of all befell Lt.-Col. Hugh K. Rhodes of the U.S. Air Force and his wife, Opal.

They were asleep in their cabin on the starboard side of the promenade deck, 40 to 50 feet above the water line, when a wave thundered upward and shattered the heavy glass in their square window.

Suddenly frigid ocean water deluged the couple and shocked them awake.

Mrs. Rhodes said she and her husband were buried about the cabin and finally struggled out.

Mrs. Rhodes was treated by a ship's doctor but apparently suffered no serious injury.

Sukarno May Try to Organize Young Nations Into Rival to UN

From AP-Reuters

JAKARTA (CP)—Indonesian President Sukarno is reported to try to form an organization of young nations as a rival to the United Nations.

It is believed here that Indonesia's opposition to the seating of Malaysia on the UN Security Council was only a pretext for quitting the world organization, which the Indonesians claim has "degenerated into a mere tool" of the United States and Britain.

Sukarno is thought to envision Indonesia taking the lead in a new organization of what he calls the NEFOS—New Emerging Forces as against the OLDFOS. — Old Established Forces.

Sukarno got little support when he withdrew the entire Indonesian team from the 1964 Tokyo Olympics after the Olympic committee barred his country's swimming and track personnel from the games because they had competed earlier in GANEFO — the Games of the New Emerging Forces, a Sukarno brainchild. Only North Korea, placed under the same conditions by international officials, joined Indonesia in the boycott.

Nor did he draw much support last October at the second conference of non-aligned nations in Cairo when he said their approach was outdated and should be replaced by his concept of the New Emerging Forces.

However, Sukarno might pro-

Around the Tee

Congratulations are in order today to the junior curlers of the Curling Club. A rink of students from Moira Secondary School will compete in the finals at Oshawa on January 16th after winning the division title at Peterborough on Saturday. The rink is composed of Jim Smith, lead, Mac Ward, second, Steve Beare, vice and Gary Lowe, skip. All these boys are sons of members and former members of the club and their victory in all the more remarkable in that they have not been playing together for any length of time.

The finals at Peterborough were between the winners in the Kwartha and Bay of Quinte districts and it included rinks from Bancroft, runners-up for the title last year, Lakefield Peterborough and the local club. In the first game the local defeated Bancroft 8-7 in the second game Peterborough by 9-4 and Lakefield by 12-6. The games were ten-enders.

These boys are curling under the direction of Goldie Livingston and Dr. Finley McCorquodale who are the junior curlers and there are some fine curling prospects among the boys. The winning rink has about 20 years experience, simply love the game, curl at every opportunity and will no doubt give a good account of themselves in the spiel.

Records Show That Last Year Was Driest in Past 30 Years

The year 1964 will go down in history as being a dry year.—the driest in fact in more than 30 years.

Records at the city pump house in west Belleville show the rainfall last year was 21.56 inches with a snowfall of 37.8 inches making a total precipitation of 25.30 inches for the Belleville area.

This is approximately eight inches less rainfall than the average over the past 30 years, given as 33.07 inches.

"It's the lowest annual rainfall since 1934 which is as far as our records go back," stated pump house manager James Scriven. Earlier records at the pump house were lost as result of a fire.

Total precipitation in 1963 was 29.58 inches.

But the new year got off to a good start insofar as snowfall was concerned.

A total of seven inches of snow fell in the area on Saturday, the heavy snowstorm descending vehicular traffic and causing numerous accidents on the Bay of Quinte area.

championship round at Oshawa in the 16th of the month.

A rink of Dr. Finley McCorquodale, Jim Bann, Bill Lewis of Trenton RCAF with Mac White as skip is representing the Quinte Curling Club at the three-day spiel being held this weekend at the Oshawa Curling Club and starting today. In the first game — for the McLaughlin Trophy, the premier event of the spiel, the local rink was defeated 13-10 in an extra end, by a rink of Alvin Parker, lead, Art Bradley, second, Bob Taylor, vice and skipped by Bud Armstrong of Whitby. The boys at one time had a seven-point lead in the game but Armstrong scored a big five-ender to cut the margin considerably. The Quintes had a chance to win in the tenth end but unfortunately Mac White was a little heavy with his draw and went through the house which left the game a tie. In the extra end the winning rink scored two shots to win the contest.

At the conclusion of the game the rinks were invited to the home of a member of the Oshawa club for entertainment and a full course dinner and another game will be played this afternoon. In the second game the White rink will meet Harvey of Acton in the Fixings and will, no doubt, give a good account of themselves in the spiel.

Two Social Insurance Numbers Can Bring Canadians Problems

The Unemployment Insurance Commission says more than 2,000,000 Canadians have registered for social insurance numbers; the number that provides identity for unemployment insurance purposes and that will become even more important to the individual when the Canada Pension Plan comes into effect. It was also noted that applications for social insurance numbers are still being received at a rate of about 5,000 per day. Commissioner Bryce Stewart that many of these are from people who already have a social insurance number.

The UIC emphasizes that, for their own good, Canadians must not have more than one social insurance number. Multiple registration can become a serious problem for the insured person, and could even lead to his being considered, at least temporarily ineligible for unemployment insurance benefits. Having only one social insurance number assures that unemployment insurance contributions are correctly credited to the individual having that number. Having two or more numbers means that contributions may be split into two or more accounts, all for the same person. Thus, when the insured makes a claim for benefits, only partial credits are entered under one of the social insurance numbers may be considered.

The commissioner says that, while such problems can and will be cleared up, time lost in extensive checking of accounts also records will result in a delay in handling claims for the benefits.

MOVING IS CAUSE

The most common cause of multiple registrations appears to be the frequent moving of persons from one job to another. Widely scattered employers change employment several times in one year and neglect to produce their social insurance number card each time, he could become the owner of more than one social insurance number. The resulting problem is involved if he makes a claim for unemployment insurance benefit are obvious.

The UIC also points out that there is a heavy penalty for persons knowingly registering for a social insurance number more than once.

The numbering system was instituted following recommendations of the Glassco Commission report on government organization to provide speed and accuracy in handling present and future social benefits, and to replace the old 7-digit number which had become obsolete.

to the nearest local office of the commission, bringing with him, or mailing, all the social insurance number cards in his possession. The commission will simply cancel the later number or numbers and supply the employee with a new registration card if the first has been misplaced.

Text of Inaugural Address by Mayor J.R. Ellis

Following is the text of the inaugural address to Belleville city council made this morning by Mayor J. R. Ellis.

"My first words this morning must be of appreciation to those who helped us in our inaugural ceremonies, particularly Canon Wright and Monsignor Sullivan. I take a great deal of personal pride in having Canon Wright with us this morning. Canon Wright has just recently taken over the duties of Rector of my church, Christ Church, having come from St. Mary Magdalene's in Picton to replace Rt. Rev. Richard Fleming, and it gives me a good deal of personal pleasure to have my good friend Monsignor J. F. Sullivan of St. Michael's with us this morning. Later in the morning, the council will be asked to appoint Monsignor Sullivan to the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital.

"I recall that a year ago, I had the pleasure of announcing that the then Rev. R. G. Fleming would be appointed to the Bay of Quinte District High School Board. Mr. Fleming was of course, unable to stay on the High School Board due to his appointing to St. George's Cathedral in Kingston. We trust that we may have the pleasure of the Monsignor on the Board of Governors for a longer period of time. I might add, however, that while many parish priests of all faiths find it difficult to take time from their parish duties, I feel that we are very fortunate in having men of the calibre of Mr. Fleming and Monsignor Sullivan volunteer their services for boards. Particularly, in the case of Monsignor Sullivan. His experience on Hotel Hospital Board in Kingston will be extremely valuable to our Belleville Hospital Board.

BOARDS MUST CHANGE

"Council's boards and committees must, of necessity, change; change not for the sake of change, but because new faces come forward from time to time to volunteer. While we will be properly thanking our retiring aldermen, we are greeting them with the usual plaques shortly, I notice on the agenda that a number of our other boards and commissions are not being re-appointed after many years of faithful service. I would like to express the appreciation of a grateful public to Mr. William Horne who will be absent from the Board of Parks Management after many years of service; to Mr. Ken Phieler, one of the original members of the Belleville Transit Commission; to Mr. Frank Domenico after 16 years of service on the Board of Directors of the Belleville General Hospital, and also Mr. Herbert Pointer of the same Board; to Mr. Doug Mozam who has served on the Committee of Adjustment for four years. These gentlemen and others that I may have missed, have contributed generously of their time and talents to the city administration in various capacities and I am sure I speak for all of our citizens when I say we are extremely grateful.

NEW ALDERMEN WELCOMED

"I would like now to express an official welcome to our new Aldermen. I quote my many from the same co-operation and close harmony from Aldermen Carruthers, Lally and Soden that we have received from the council in the past year, and we welcome their assistance in the deliberations of the 1965 council.

"I wish also to welcome back Alderman Allin, David, Deacon and Murray. I am delighted that the citizens of Belleville saw fit to return you to office and I look forward to working with you next year.

"One of the more important steps to be debated today is a motion to direct the City Solicitor to prepare an application to the Ontario Legislature for a private bill, authorizing the reduction of council from 12 aldermen to 10, 2 was personally very pleased with the decisive-ness of the vote last December 7th, despite the fact that it was a very poor turnout. I intend to ask council to include in the same private bill the necessary legislation to allow for election of a mayor and alderwomen for a two-year term coinciding with the present term for the mayor only. This will mean a sacrifice on the part of the seven newly elected aldermen, in that, in effect, I am asking them to voluntarily reduce the two-year term to which they were elected to a one-year term. Election costs are increasing every year. The cost to the City of Belleville was almost $3 for every vote cast in the last election, and I am sure that no sitting alderman wishes to impose this extra burden of cost on the taxpayers again. In order to accomplish this saving and carry out the wishes of the electorate at the same time, I am prepared to request that the aldermen voluntarily reduce their term.

SERIOUS BUSINESS

"My inaugural address this year will likely be somewhat longer than usual, and for this I do not apologize, since I intend that 1965 be a year of achievement for the council of the City of Belleville. My address will not only be long but perhaps somewhat dry to some of you. However, the business of the City of Belleville is a serious business and not to be taken lightly. I intend that the council members set for themselves high this year, because only by aiming high are we apt to come close to our goals.

"One of the first projects that I wish to mention is the completion of the Pinnacle Street re-paving. It may seem to some that the removal of the tracks from Pinnacle Street has already been left too long. However, I hasten to assure those who are worried that all of the problems of Pinnacle Street re-development are not insurmountable, we have simply not received the final approval of the Department of Highways. As a matter of fact, less than two weeks ago our Engineer, Wilbur Powell, was in Toronto with the consulting engineers, Damas and Smith, and they have carried out what we think are the final kinks in our presentation to the Department of Highways.

"Assuming D.H.O. approval and taking into consideration the many underground utilities and their corresponding costs of this type of work, I still feel that if we push as much as possible for all the approvals that are necessary, the completion of this important part of our downtown improvement can be accomplished this year. I should point out that the delay in receiving full Department of Highways approvals for this project, will not be the fault of our Public Engineer and the consulting engineers to convince the Department that they have what is indeed a part of the work necessary for the original Bonnie Cather survey. This, of course, follows the steps taken by Alderman Soden and the Damas and Smith alternate to the Dr. Low Cather survey last fall.

FIGURES ARE OLD

"I intend to ask Council to direct the consulting engineers to re-evaluate some of the traffic information in the Dr. Cather report. That report and the figures in it are now some seven years old. In that time there have been many changes. The 401 Highway is now completely open from East to West. Some of our industries have increased in size and others decreased. The major shopping centres, one on the East and one on the West side of town, are now in operation. I feel it is important that a careful study be made of the facts in 1965 before steps are taken to implement the survey as we now know it. You may recall that the original survey indicated the need for the Upper Bridge at the end of Church and Pinnacle Streets as an immediate necessity. Some of us on Council feel that the bridge across the Moira River at Dundas Street, which was originally slated for 1970, should actually receive some priority over the Upper Bridge.

"We must be very careful, however, to make sure that we have completed all the necessary planning before starting out on an overall project, which, before completed, will entail the spending of over two million dollars. This can only be properly determined by a fully-qualified consulting engineer with all the facts, and since I am determined that this year we must start on the overall project of relocating some of the traffic problems in the City of Belleville, the gathering of this data becomes vital.

"I am well aware that there is a tremendous amount of pressure to replace the College Street bridge, and I agree that this bridge is a "pottlenock". However, the replacement of this bridge was planned for the second five-year phase of the Traffic Study. Since we have not yet started the first five-year phase I fail to see how we can possibly start picking pieces out of the whole study before starting the basic project. We have been told that there is some repair required to the bridge; however, a recent report of the City Engineer dated Jan. 2nd, 1964 states that the structurally sound, and although some immediate repairs may be required, he makes no comment that the replacement of this bridge is necessary out of its normal position in the overall project. I am, therefore, going to ask council to proceed with the repairs to this bridge, and ask our citizens who use it to be patient for a little while longer such time as we have completed the first phase of the project.

"Similarly, the rebuilding of the Front Street Pier is, in my opinion, have to wait till the slightest time-slot in the overall program. Certainly, it will be impossible to open that portion of Sidney Street through the Fairgrounds until the approval of the various boards and commissions, but I do not foresee a great rebuilding of this street for some few years to come.

READY FOR TENDERS

"The final engineering is just about completed on the section of North Front Street from the new CNR overpass to Craig Street, and I expect that our council will be ready to call tenders in the early winter months. I intend to ask council to allocate funds in its Capital Works Budget to complete the rebuilding of this part of North Front Street through to the 401 Highway, and in the fall of this year, at least in the early spring of next year.

"Also this year, I intend to reappoint Alderman Boyle as chairman of a special committee to study Belleville's housing. Income Rental Housing, together with Aldermen Deacon, and Carrihers, should have a report back from the Ontario Housing Corporation, I fully suspect that we will be in a position to proceed next before the end of 1966.

"All of the works that I have outlined so far are the responsibility of the City of Belleville money, and there are many to come. I feel that we must, this year, take a stand for fiscal responsibility in our various budgets. While the principles of debenturing, so that the users over the years pay their share of the work completed, is a sound one, nonetheless, the restrictions placed upon by our assessment and the Ontario Municipal Board and the fact that we have such a tremendous backlog of work ahead of us, suggests to me that we must now pay our way in certain smaller projects. If not, we can expect an unbearable payment rate of debentures in the near future. Every dollar that is debentured in the city for a twenty-year period eventually costs the taxpayers approximately $2. We all, in our own private financing, use the time payment plan, I am sure, on occasion.

"However, we realize that the bill must eventually be paid and if we can buy for less for cash, certainly this is the time to do it. Canada, Ontario and Belleville are riding the crest of a boom economy that cannot last forever, and by paying our way now for certain projects, we will be in the position of being able to retrench, if necessary, once the crest is passed. If, however, we continue to debenture these many smaller amounts, we will find ourselves faced with an ever-increasing need for public works at a time when our economy is perhaps not so buoyant as it is now.

SHOULD PAY CASH

"One of the first steps towards this and is the payment of the city's share of any local improvements in cash. In any local improvement such as a street, sidewalk, sewer, curb, etc. there is always a portion of the work which the city has to bear, for example, at intersections and past publicly-owned property. In the past, it has been our policy to debenture these small amounts of money together with the taxpayer's portion. I suggest that these can be and should be committed to cash, and our Capital debt not cluttered up with these many small amounts. To this end, I am going to also suggest to Council that all local improvements contemplated in any year must be petitioned by July 1st of the preceding year.

"I don't think that it is unreasonable to expect our City Engineer six months to complete the engineering and costs necessary for the work to be done in 1966. With this lead time the City Manager and his staff will be able to work into the budget and the work should be done in that year. Council-instigated local improvements under Section 8 of the Local Improvement Act could possibly wait until October 1st, since in this case the City Engineer would already have completed a portion of his Engineering Study before presenting it to the proper Committee of Council.

"Some of the smaller capital works which I will ask you to face over the next few months are the placing of traffic lights at the corner of West Moira and Coleman Streets, which all Councils agree is an urgent matter.

"I intend to ask Council also to provide funds for a major engineering study of the entire Moira area of Belleville. During the past year, the Planning Director of the Belleville and District Planning Board completed a detailed study of a portion of the northwest area of Belleville, and was greatly hampered by a lack of complete engineering data. We have already spent a fair sum of such a survey and the Director is now prepared to start on a survey of the entire Northeast area. In the North-east, the Moira River and its terns were pretty well set and many services had already been installed.

"However, in the Northeast area, there are no sewer services, either sanitary or storm, and only a few water lines are to be found anywhere in the Hillcrest area. It is up to Council to provide for the orderly development, by proper plan-ned manner, we must have the necessary engineering data. A few dollars spent now to start preparing this information will be of tremendous benefit to our City in the future. This survey will be of untold value in the planning of our capital works for many years to come. In fact, we can successfully complete the Northeast study this year our next step will be to start a similar study of the Foster Ward area.

SHOULD REPLACE TREES

"This area has for a long time felt neglected by the City Council. While it may be some time before all or any of the various recommendations can be implemented these steps properly planned now, will lead to a proper official plan for the City of Belleville. There is a tremendous fund of federal re-development grant money to municipalities with a proper Official Plan. We, in Belleville, have many grave needs under these funds and the completion of these studies and the preparation of such a plan is critical to our future development.

Another perhaps smaller kind of expenditure, but nonetheless important to the beauty of our City, is the replacing of some of the trees that are now more beautiful streets that, due to the ravages of the "Dutch Elm" disease, will be necessarily in the next twelve months. Unfortunately, these will be some of the many fine old elm trees that line such streets as Dundas Street West, Bridge Street East, Dundas Street East, Herchimer Avenue and others. We know that somewhere up to 100 of these trees will die in the very near future and unless removed, may spread the disease to other healthy trees. I think it would be a classic shame if, when these trees are removed, they are replaced with inch-thick saplings. Dundas Street West is one of the last shady, tree-lined avenues of approach to our City and I feel that we must be prepared to replace these trees with partially full-grown trees, and with the assistance of the Department of Highways and their tree-moving equipment. This will cost us a no-n money, but I don't think there are any of us prepared to wait for fifty or twenty-five years for the replacement of the trees on these beautiful streets.

FINE SURPLUS

One last expenditure of money that must be faced up to this year is our Centennial Project. I feel that we have already delayed unnecessarily the start of this project, and I intend to ask Council at the whatever steps are necessary to assure that Belleville in 1967, together with the rest of Canada, has a memorial of which it can be justly proud and one from which all of our citizens can derive the maximum amount of pleasure and recreation. At the last meeting of Council in 1964, an agreement was made with the Department of Transport for the leasing of some 36 acres of bay on the east side of the Bay Bridge Road that is more than 80 acres per year. I intend to ask Council to once again turn this project over to the Parks Board with specific terms of reference requesting them to give top priority to the planning and commencement of the re-building of Zwicker Island into a park which will be a delight to all citizens in Belleville and travellers passing through.

"I have spoken at length about the items of expense with which we may be faced this year. I think you will agree that this is not indiscriminate spending. Our staff this past year have kept well within the budget and in some cases effected considerable savings. I can now safely forecast a budgetary surplus greater than any of the past four years; a surplus of better than $40,000. This is a direct reflection of a thin, well-supervised staff, and they will once again be directed and encouraged to repeat their performance.

"This, then, ladies and gentlemen, is an outline of some of the major steps which I expect Council will take this year. I am sure that with the fine Council you have elected for 1965, it will be another banner year in Belleville's history.

FLOOR SANDING AND FINISHING

GLEN ELLIOT

186 Dufferin Ave — WO 2-3669

ON THE DAY AFTER THE STORM, Sunday, hundreds of Belleville's younger residents had the opportunity to give their new Christmas toboggans, skis or sleighs a trial run on the Herchimer Ave. hill.

Snow Blamed for Smash-Up That Blocked Highway 401 And Sent Four to Hospital

Saturday it was a bust. Sunday a blessing!

The heaviest snowfall of the winter to date drew contrasting reactions in the Belleville district over the weekend.

Saturday, at the belaaguering blizzard's height, snarls, curses and climate-accentuated woes were spat by hundreds of motorists.

Sunday, white-covered slopes played host to delighted tobaggakers uncoiled themselves for a new year on the snow they thought would never be.

The eight-hour fallout which started around 11 a.m. Saturday layered the district with seven inches of snow before passing on to blanket greener pastures.

The result brought traffic snarls and scores of pile-ups that caused automobile damage running into thousands.

At its peak it was blamed for a seven-car smash that sent four people to hospital, caused $10,000 damage and blocked eastbound lanes for a half-mile, near Marysville.

Injured in the melee that took hour to untangle in the blinding snow were:

Dr. Joseph Fenton, 47, Toronto physician, broken leg, elbow and severe face cuts; his daughter, Madeline, 11, with lacerations; Jack Bevis, 28, since Christmas.

Sex Signals Acquired

Birdwhistell says the sex signals of homo sapiens are acquired, not inborn.

Before any of our readers conclude that Birdwhistell is strictly for the birds, we had better point out this is not the pen name of an amateur bird watcher, but the authentic surname of a Philadelphian anthropologist with a doctor's degree.

Perhaps, he knows a thing or two.

A little reflection will convince most people that a great many of the gestures which we think of as typically masculine or feminine are connected with our attire. The short-striding, scurrying walk of the female is the product of tight skirts and high heels, and not of any inability to stretch long legs into a ground-consuming stride. Man runs his finger around his neck underneath his collar because he wears a necktie; if part of his interior decoration was continually slipping off his shoulders he would substitute the finger-hooking, shoulder-shrugging gesture of the female.

If a poll were held, most of us would probably vote for that pat-pat-pat at the nape of the neck as the most characteristically feminine signal. It reminds us men of a bird preening its feathers. A rude shock awaits us, however, if we change to run across one of those sawy males with the wavy locks hanging over their coat collars. There go male fingers in the same preening motion.

Those "sex signals" which do not derive from apparel or hair styles may be nothing more than habit, the postures of one generation handed down from father to son or from mother to daughter without any consideration of the possibility of achieving the same end in a different fashion.

Consider, for example, the Anglo-Saxon method of smoking a cigarette. On this continent, and in England, the cigarette smoker, male or female, holds the "coffin nail" between the first and second fingers of the hand, the first finger on top, the hand itself poised below the mouth as the smoke is inhaled. In Eastern Europe, though, precisely the same result is obtained in a distinctively different manner, which we are not certain that we can describe accurately, as every servant one is most of us when we see examples of different techniques for doing anything. The cigarette, though, is held between the thumb and, we believe, second finger of the right hand, the hand itself held either above or below the cigarette. Some new smokers in America may stumble on this method but quickly discard it. If most of those who use it at first are feminine, this probably has nothing whatever to do with sex, but merely reflects the fact that the male of the species, being vainer, generally tries out a new skill in private, while the adventurous female is more likely to expose her inexperience to public gaze.

Contradictory Language

From Montreal the other day came a story describing new weapons scientists have discovered in their war on insect pests. One of the weapons was described as "invisible light."

"Invisible light" is a contradiction in terms. The dictionary says that "invisible" means something which cannot be seen, while "light" is described as that which makes it possible to see.

We do not know, however, how else the rays in question could be tersely and lucidly described. "Invisible light" is a phrase which carries a clear message—it is obviously a description of rays similar to light rays which yet cannot be detected by the human eye.

As scientists discover the nature of things, such contradictions in terms will become ever more frequent. When man invented words, in any language, he did not know enough to assure their accuracy. Language changes, and some inaccuracies will be corrected. In the majority of cases though, we shall probably continue to use scientific terms which, if we give their components their original meaning, are nonsense.

Space-time forsooth! As nonsensical as length-breadth—more nonsensical because it is not a measurement of the same thing in two different dimensions but of two things which, in our everyday world, are totally different. But it comes as-close as any phrase can to defining the virtually indefinable.

There is less justification for the combinations of words which we sometimes use to describe every-day events, as contrasted with scientific facts. "Amicable divorce" for example — properly used amicable denotes something more than the mere absence of bitterness. Few divorces are actively friendly in character.

Tidiness, Vice or Virtue?

By Bernard Gamble

Those who visited the study
Sir Henry Irving, in the study of his house in Grafton Street, might be perplexed as to a piece of furniture. It was a sofa. But from the heap of objects that had been piled on it, and from time to time, the visitor might speculate whether it might be a wardrobe, a bookcase, or a portfolio. Sometimes, when an inherited and a bumper of penholders happened to be posting their way up, like crocuses, through a litter of books and papers, it would seem that a writing-table must lie beneath.

Elsewhere in the room, brown paper cascaded from a stool at the foot of a piano, while on top of the stool might stand a parcel of cigars, recently opened. The floor was also strewn with books that there was little space for walking, except where a tiger-skin, like a walk-way cricket-mat, was stretched in front of the fire.

It might have been thought that Irving could hardly feel at ease in such disorganised surroundings. Yet this study was his temple of peace. There he would read, write, brood, and read long, or to smoke and talk.

He had a valet named Walter, who sometimes made a desultory attempt to tidy such things as he dared. He never dared to touch them and Irving was never seriously disturbed.

Putting things to right, in the sense of having a place for everything and putting everything in its place, does not appeal to all men as particularly important or even desirable. Such orderliness is found far more strongly to most women. Many women spend much of their time putting away what men have left lying about.

Once when Dorothy, Wm. Wordsworth had to set out on a journey early in the morning, he left the preparing of hours of work to put in order the confusion he had left. "Before we (Coleridge and Dorothy Wordsworth writes, "Calvert's man brought the horses for William. We had a deal to do . . . since he left me at half-past eleven (it is now two) I have been putting the drawers in order, laid by his clothes, which he had thrown about, and packed up books and papers."

There are some men, of course, who not only endure the neatness imposed by their wives, but actually prefer it to suffering it themselves. They may be troubled if the least thing is left out of order.

Sir Arthur Pinero, the playwright of Edwardian days, was one of these. A friend, lunching with him at his house in Hanover Square, noticed he was reading the leading article of a newspaper he had been blown against the railing outside the window. He folded it and settle down comfortably only after it had been pressed by a servant and brought indoors to be burned.

This kind of precise and compulsive tidiness may seem to other people a vice. But a pro-occupation with little things. The great Dr. Samuel Johnson considered it a virtue and in his resisted, when his wife was bein on upsetting him with her scrupulous housekeeping.

James Boswell once asked Johnson if he ever disputed with his wife. "Frequently," was Johnson's reply; "my wife had a particular reverence for cleanliness, and desired the praise of neatness in her dress and household. But when I take do, till they become trouble- some to their best friends, quarrel with their dress, and only sigh for the hour of sweeping their husbands out of the room to dirt and useless hum- ber."

"A clean floor is so comfort- able," we could say ourselves, by the way of twitting him; till it is the floor, but the hat he thought they had taken enough about the floor, and "would now have a touch at the ceiling."

It is the lot of humanity that all must leave some things at the end for someone else to tidy up and dispose of. Tidiness and untidiness are matters of taste; they still leaves a task of sorting out and putting away.

Prof. Baleigh of Oxford anticipated this task that would be left to others. He knew he was among the untidy in his habits, and that the legacy of his confusion deserved an apology. It was gracefully attended in its verse:

What a nuisance then will be
All that shall remain of me!
Shaving- brushes, razors, strops,
Bottles that have lost their tops,
Boxes full of odds and ends,
Letters from departed friends,
Failed ties and broken braces,
Tucked away in secret places
. . . And that ghastliest of ghosts,
Boots and shoes in horrid rows.

Not Resting On His Oars

Ottawa Journal

The post-Inuriesishly of Eng- land has been taken by some re- cipients to be a kind of poetic pension; supernumation after the hard, productive years.

But Mr. John Masefield, near- ing 87, refuses to stop. He pub- lished a new volume of verses this week and he still hopes "to write better sometime." He paid this compliment to age:

"Some of the comwebs have been knocked away and the scene seems to become grander as one gets older, and much more majestic are those fables that still await retelling".

He went on to make a tell- ing comment on his role as poet:

"English literature is a great cause to have helped, however humbly. Those who serve that cause well, delight and make living more joyful for many of the millions who now speak and write our language".

Perhaps his latest work her not been up to the standard of:

"I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky,

We have not had haunting lines in recent years such as:

Coming in solemn beauty like the slow still tunes of Spain.

But if he never writes an- other poem which school chil- dren will get to memory, Mr. Masefield has served his good cause well enough. This gent- le man has given magical lines to store away, stanzas freighted with wonder and contrast, like the ships in "Cargoes":

Quinquereme of Nineveh from distant Ophir,
Rowing home to haven in sunny Palestine,
With a cargo of ivory,
And apes and peacocks,
Sandalwood, cedarwood, and sweet white wine.

Dirty British coaster with a salt-caked smoke-stack, Butting through the Channel
in the mad March days,
With a cargo of Tyne coal,
Road-rails, pig-lead,
Firewood, iron-ware, and cheap tin trays.

Shuffleboard Fighting Game

Edmonton Journal

The theory that the friendly atmosphere of the British pub might be transplanted to Ed- monton .. filling the . . . beer parlors, has suffered a cruel blow.

A year ago, a number of beer parlor operators petitioned the Liquor Board for permission to install shuffleboards for the amusement of patrons. Permis- sion was granted. The board is a sort of an affluent society's version of the British pub shove ha'penny game.

Now, it seems, it was all a mistake, at least as far as some city operators are concerned. To quote one of them: "They've been nothing but trouble. People start to gamble, then get mad at each other and fights start. And even if they don't fight, they're always yell- ing and whooping and rais- ing the roof".

It's not that way in rural Alberta or in Calgary, accord- ing to Mr. Peter Hasel, Lcb chairman. Perhaps Calgarians and country folk are less bel- ligerent beer drinkers than Edmontonians.

Whatever the case, it's prob- ably a good thing that that other popular pub game, darts, did not catch on in Edmonton. Hospital emergency wards might not have been able to cope with the flood of impaled beer parlor patrons.

Problem Real

New York Times

Fifty-five prominent indus- trialists, educators and civic leaders have just addressed an open letter to President Johnson urging him to "make family planning in the anti-poverty campaign and other federal pro- grams. They warn that "the rocketing growth of population" not only poses a threat to the president's dream of a great society but will, unless checked, "inevitably lead to chaos and strife at home and abroad — to more Cubas and Vietnams — to revolutions and wars, the dissen- sions of which it would be hard to predict." The problem is real, the need for action immediate.

Over 40 and Wrinkling? Just Accept It

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 50 and my chin and neck are starting to look flabby.

My physical culturist teaches that you should twist and stretch neck muscles to tone them up. However, some beauty experts advise against exercising the neck, claiming that one should avoid stretching the skin, but that proper carriage of the head in time will eliminate some of the drop.

These two schools sound con- tradictory. Which in your opin- ion is more apt to be helpful? — Mrs. V. S.

Both kinds of advisers have to make their living, and nat- urally try to convince people that they have methods that will unfish the flabbiness.

Some events we just have to accept. After 40 or so, the tone of the skin changes. So does the fibrous tissue under the skin. That's what leads to wrink- ling, flabbiness and drops.

Another factor is that the tex- ture of skin varies with people. We can't do much about that.

For still another, if we put on extra weight and later (wisely) lose it, we have also stretched the skin and then let it sag when the fat departs. Early in life, this is tolerable. The skin is elastic. Later it doesn't snap back to its original tautness.

As for exercise (while I ap- prove of it in reasonable doses), I doubt very much if this can make the muscles bulge and undo the flabbiness of the skin. But conversely, I have the most vigorous doubts that any neck exercises would stretch the skin.

Exercise, besides keeping you limber and feeling fit, won't have much to do with your looks. But it will help you along in de- veloping or maintaining proper carriage of the head. And yes, that does improve the lines of neck, bust and shoulders.

So I say that both the physi- cal culturist and the beauty ex- perts have some things that are helpful.

Strictly Personal
Harsh Penalty Is No Curb On Crime

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Among the vulgar errors of mankind, few are more wide- spread or persistent than the belief that "harsher penalties" and "longer sentences" are ef- fective means of curbing crime in the community.

This fallacy cropped up once more in a national poll taken last month. A large number of citizens polled declared that a "stiffer fall terms" would help reduce the rising crime rate in America.

I have pointed out before that the only country which has one of the lowest crime rates, also gives shorter sentences in prisoners than we do here. The average length of stay in prison in Am- erica is appreciably longer than in Great Britain, or in most European nations with low crime rates.

It is in the administration of law, not in the severity of pun- ishment, that a solution is to be found for the continuing incidence of crime. It is the swiftness, the certainty, and the incorruptibil- ity of penal administration that keep crime down — not the length of harshness of the sen- tence. All sensible police people- gists and wardens know this.

In America, for the most part, the administration of law is slow, capricious, and corrupt- ible. Delay and discrimination and political influence are pow- erful factors in determining which defendants shall go free and which shall go to prison.

Keeping a man in prison a long time does not deter him from committing a crime the moment he gets out — it incre- ases the likelihood that he will "smarter" the next time, to get a better lawyer and better "con- nections." And the fact is the severity of the sentence has lit- tle to do with the magnitude of the crime.

It is true, as some insist, that while he is in prison he is not committing any crimes — but this line of reasoning ends in absurdity. We might as well say that as long as a child is locked in a closet, he cannot create any more mischief — and thus keep him there permanently. Every closet, and every jail cell would soon be occupied at that rate.

The fact of the matter is that it's easier for us to complain about "lenient" judges and call for "stiffer sentences" than it is for us to take a hard, cold look at the whole administration of law in our nation. We close our eyes to the gross inequities that exist; we are not concerned with the delays and perversions; we prefer to look upon official cor- ruption as an isolated phenom- enon rather than as a way of life among us.

Criminals are more realistic than the public. They are will- ing to take chances, because the odds are in their favor. It is only the very stupid, the very poor, the very abandoned, who get hit with the book. The others are gambling with dice loaded heavily in their favor.

Robert Smithrim First Chairman Of Authority

TRENTON—At a meeting in the Trenton-Brighton and District Association for the Retarded last week, Trenton solicitor Robert Smithrim was elected first chairman of the newly-formed education authority for the school. The meeting had been called by Murray Township clerk, Angus Gunter.

Other executive officers, appointed by the township council to the body are Mrs. Hazel Cox of Stockdale, Harry Lafferty, council's appointee and Peter Charlesworth and Mrs. Irma Plunkett from the association. Mrs. Frank Dunnett of Brighton will represent the village on the authority.

School operations will be financed by government grants and township tax allocations, but the retarded association will continue to provide necessary "extras" through tag days and other public appeals.

Storm Brings Traffic Mess

TRENTON — Accidents Saturday near Brighton were numerous and provincial police constables Bolger, Mason and Martin were kept on the run all afternoon and into the night.

One three-car collision, which gradually worked its way up into a seven-car pileup, sent Mrs. Lorne Selsby, Oakville, and Mrs. Margaret Gregson of West Hill, to Trenton Memorial Hospital for emergency treatment.

Cars driven by Joseph Selsby, Dennis Lumbas and James McCarthy of West Hill were damaged to the extent of $1,950, when they collided in the snow storm on Highway 401, west of Highway 30.

The first accident occurred around 1:15 p.m. About 1:50 p.m. a Highways Department plow, driven by Wendell Henderson of Colborne, and a car, driven by Gordon Taylor, also of Colborne, joined the pile up. They Taylor car received $350 damage. Almost simultaneously, cars driven by Frank J. Landraz of Don Mills, and Gordon Palen of Sarnia, got in the act and for a damage total of $850.

A short time later, a snow plow driven by Alvin Anderson of Warkworth and a car driven by Miss Joanne West of Orillia collided in almost the same spot. Damage to the West car was $200 while the plow was not damaged.

On the heels of the first series of collisions, around 3:45 p.m., a station wagon, driven by John Leavitt of West Flamboro and Donald Large of P.Q., crashed on Highway 401 near Brighton and damage in this instance was $700. No one was hurt.

At 6:50 p.m., on Highway 401 east of Colborne interchange, Constable Mason investigated a two-car collision. Drivers were Maurice Fournier of Port Colborne, and David Payne of Simcoe. Damage was $650.

Constable Mason called it a "night" at 9:45 p.m. when he investigated an accident on Highway 401 east of Highway 30, when a car driven by Frank Evans of Picton slid out of control and struck a guide post. Damage to the car was $250.

Levee Is Held By Hasty Pees

TRENTON — Nostalgia was the order of the day on Friday when officers and men of Trenton Company A of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, entertained about 60 fellow officers and men at the Trenton Armory New Year's Levee.

Companies from Belleville, Cobourg, Picton and Madoc were present, as well as RCAF representatives. Sgt. Major R. Wigmore was in charge and Col. Angus B. Duffy and Major Rhyden from Belleville were present, as was Trenton Legion president Russell King.

This will be the last meeting for Company A in the Trenton Armory as the company operations are being moved to Belleville.

Levees were also held at RCAF Station Trenton in the Officers and Sergeants' Messes.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — United States dollar in terms of Canadian funds was unchanged at $1.07 13-32. Pound sterling was up ¼ at $2.98 13-16.

Newfoundland Dog Has Litter Of Fifteen Pups

MARMORA—The large Newfoundland dog belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cobbing, R.R. 3, Marmora recently gave birth to 15 pups, of which 12 survived. A human parallel is a mother giving birth to quintuplets. The Newfoundland is Canada's "national" dog and at present there are only 600 purebreds in the country.

"Lena" had a litter of seven in April which were readily sold for $100 each. Her mate "Bruce" is a 100-pounder and the dogs are often thought to be bears. The Cobbings say they haven't any problems with the large dogs, but they do have healthy appetites. It eats about $2.00 a day to feed the big dogs and $1.50 to feed the pups.

First Ticket For Walking Against Lights

Belleville's new pedestrian Four Corners' signals have claimed their first jay walker.

Having given sufficient time for the public to adjust to the new system designed to speed traffic flow, police are now enforcing safety measures by the book.

First ticket for walking against the lights has now been issued. The infraction costs $5 and costs.

'Construction Spurt' In 1965 Says Mayor

TRENTON — Sworn into office as councillors for 1965-66 at a meeting in the town hall over the police station this morning were Ross Burtt, Edward Todd and Paul Tripp. The oath of office was administered by clerk comptroller O. W. Larry.

Not required to take the oath were Mayor James MacDonald, and councillors Duncan McDonald, Joseph Gould and C. V. Graham as they are starting on the second year of their two-year term.

A brief religious ceremony was conducted by Rev. Douglas Wilson of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and Mayor MacDonald gave his annual report to the people of Trenton.

Following is the text of the mayor's address:

"The start of every new year is always accompanied by faith and hope that it will be the best ever.

"The past year has seen many changes in the physical appearance of Trenton. This work has been done under a planned program and we are optimistic that the next twelve months will be equally productive.

"Some four years ago, I began negotiations for a second bridge for Trenton. This was considered impossible by many, particularly because of the cost. Those years were used in striving to obtain a suitable financial agreement between ourselves and the two senior levels of government. We have now reached our objective, and construction will begin this year.

"A second major item in Trenton's development for 1965 will be the results of the Urban Renewal Study. We have been advised by our consultants that they will be releasing their findings and recommendations within the next three weeks.

"This study is not designed to merely improve physical appearances, but to strengthen our economic base to acquire substandard housing and renew or redevelop specified areas. I am particularly anxious that we use this method to acquire the river bank property on Front Street as far as the CPR overhead bridge. The two senior levels of government pay 75 per cent of the cost of the study as well as the implementation.

"Bayshore Park in 1965 will begin to show some semblance of its ultimate development. This is Trenton's Centennial Project and we ask each one to assist Mr. Ken Couch in every way possible.

PLANS COMPLETED

"We have had several discussions with Department of Highways re the improvement of the subway at North Trenton. These plans are now completed and we hope to have Council's approval to implement them this year. We have also asked the CNR in their capacity to improve the area by rejuvenating the CNR Station.

"For 1965, Council has plans for public works of all kinds which will now be reviewed and assessed for priority.

be serviced and lots available for purchase before the year end.

"The realtors of Trenton have indicated they are prepared to build a factory building on speculation. The Town Hall will meet every inducement that is possible to encourage this development. A majority of our present industries are occupying buildings originally built for others. Cooperation of private enterprise with the Town can have a great influence on our industrial growth.

"1965 will see for (1) the completion of the new Federal Building, (2) start of construction on the new bridge, (3) synchronization of our traffic signals, (4) an increase in our planed street lighting program, (5) the planting of many trees by our Parks Board.

"To all the citizens of Trenton—we wish you a Happy, Healthy and Prosperous New Year.

"To our neighbours in the surrounding Townships, we wish you the same. May we work in close harmony for our mutual benefit."

Ann Landers

There Are Laws to Protect Wives From Brutality

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Your advice may work for some people but it didn't work for me. You had a letter in your column from a woman who said she reminded her husband it was her birthday. He gave her 25c and told her to go buy a birthday card. She was burned up and asked what she should have done.

You said she should have gone out and bought a dime card and given the big sport 15c change. I showed that column to my husband because my birthday was coming up. I thought maybe he'd give me the money to buy the box of dishes I've been wanting.

ANN LANDERS

Instead he said, "I will do better than that guy in Ann Landers' column. Here is 50c. Go out and buy yourself a real nice card."

I bought a dime card and gave him 40c back. He got real mad and now I have a cut over my eye and a loose tooth.

Any more advice? — MRS. V.T.H.

DEAR MRS. V.T.H. — As soon as your eye gets better and you can read the phone directory, call Legal Aid and find out what can happen to a man who knocks his wife around. And then clue in your husband.

In the meantime, don't let him get his hands on this column or you might not be able to see at all.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My 73-year-old mother is a semi-invalid who lives with me. Previously she lived with another member of the family. As her illness became worse, mother became increasingly incapacitated and her presence was resented more and more. When it became apparent that she was being mistreated I took her into my home.

Other members of the family are in a position to give mother more than I can, in a material way, but they refuse to give her even five minutes of their time, let alone support.

I don't want their money, but it makes me sad to see mother so lonely. What is wrong with sons and daughters who become so involved with their trips and parties and shopping that they can't spare a few minutes to go see their mother?

These sons and daughters are the ones who will the loudest at the funeral. And it will be a sense of guilt, rather than a feeling of loss, that will move them to tears.

Will you publish this letter, Ann? I'll bet it will hit thousands of thoughtless children right between the eyes. And please with-hold the name of this city. Let them all guess. — CORNFLOWER BLUE.

DEAR CORNFLOWER — Here it is — and it's not the first time such a letter appeared in my column. I hope those who are made uncomfortable by this letter will do something about it — while there is still time.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I just returned from a shopping trip and I am steaming. While browsing, my sleeve brushed against a small Swedish crystal vase. The vase fell off the shelf and broke. A salesman walked over and cheerfully said, "That's too bad. It will cost you $4.95."

I did not break the vase on purpose and told her so. She replied, "Do you see the sign, Madam?" — and pointed to a card which said, "If you break it . . . it's yours."

Shouldn't this sort of breakage be expected in all gift shops? I paid the $4.95 but you can be sure I'll never go back.

My husband and two children insist I have no right to be irritated and the store policy is a good one. What do you think? — PAID FOR A DEAD HORSE.

DEAR PAID — If I broke a vase in a shop I'd offer to pay for it without being shown a sign. It was an act of carelessness (and not malice) but people should be willing to pay for their mistakes.

* * *

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mathematically Speaking Styles Divide, Multiply, Subtract, Add For Popular Fashion Formula

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Mathematically speaking, the most popular formula for women's styles this spring is:

Subtract from already short hemlines, add more to dress tops, and divide skirts—short division equals culottes, long division, the pantaloon craze.

For dressy occasions, multiply fussy yardage into huge cloudlike stoles, ballooning sleeves and burgeoning skirts. Add ruffles to anything, any place, for any event.

Just how this figures in terms of the feminine figure as well as the family budget will be taken into account beginning today by some 300 fashion reporters here for a nine-day preview of the most costly clothes in the U.S.

Trend - setting design houses are scheduled to show their spring collections either during the New York couture group's 22nd annual press week program, Jan. 3-9, or as a part of the American designer series, Jan. 9-12. The designer series has been conducted for the last three years by Eleanor Lambert, former press director of the couture group.

CLOTHES ARE COSTLY

It is estimated only about 2,000,000 American women are able to afford these clothes, seldom priced at less than $100 and often more than $1,000.

Nevertheless, the wearing apparel of 36,000,000 other women will shape up in line with the new style ideas. The most successful styles always are reproduced by the volume ready-to-wear manufacturers.

The new styles figure this way:

Knees should be round, rosy and preferably dimpled. With hems rising thigh - high, they will be getting plenty of public exposure. For evening wear a trim ankle is de rigueur for calf-length gowns called demi-longeur.

Waistlines should be nipped in to give emphasis to the flare and flounce of wider skirts.

Shoulders, once fashionably slouched, now must be squared off to do justice to set-in sleeves fast replacing the raglan style.

LONG BODY LOOK

Stomach is in and chest is out to improve the so-called elongated body look in such costumes as long jacketed suits, tunic dresses and skinny coats with belts underslung at the hips.

Even designer Rudi Gernreigh, creator of topless fame, who still dips a neckline a little bit, also is wrapping women to their noses in exaggerated turtleneck and scarf styles. But a holdout is designer Jacques Tiffeau who still plunges a neckline farther than you can imagine without blushing beet red.

Overall, the 1965 feminine form must be trim, firm and without fault, for underpinnings prescribed for garments as diaphanous as smoke are mere second skins, meant to cover, not correct.

Except for an occasional burst of immodesty, the favored female fashion prototype next season will be a slightly curvier, very much ruffled, often languid, old-fashioned girl.

LEADS DOUBLE LIFE

CRAWLEY, England (CP)—School teacher Gerry Murphy, 27, was leading a double life until his students recognized him as television wrestler Sean Regan. Murphy, who had been earning extra money towards a university degree, offered to quit wrestling, but the school's headmaster told him to "carry on."

BACKS MUSIC PLAN

WINNIPEG (CP)— The director of Canada's National Youth Orchestra thinks the federal government should go into the business of teaching music. Ezra Schabas of Toronto said in an interview the government should send out a touring group of instrumental teachers to instruct youngsters in smaller Canadian centres.

PEEPING BRUIN

BIGGIN HILL, England (CP) Mrs. Beatrice Collins probably never liked to see anyone peering at her through her kitchen window. But she had a real shock when she looked up from her work to see a bear looking back. The bear, which had escaped from its cage, was later recaptured by the owner, a pig farmer.

Susanna's Family Fare

FOR BABY'S ROOM

Dear Susanna: Here are some hints I'd like to share:

For the baby's room, I purchased a piece of fairly stiff plastic 27" long, from a local chain store. This is the type used for chair covers and the width is 54". By cutting it in half and pinking the edges, I had a mattress cover and also a washable sheet for changing the baby on.

We often like to go for long drives and I have found that we do not have to stop at restaurants to warm bottles if I prewarm two or three and place them in our gallon picnic jug — our jug takes three nicely. It is wonderful to be able to have a warm bottle as soon as required and we enjoy our outing much more.

Spring type clothes pins tacked to the inside of a cupboard door make wonderful hangers for rubber gloves, etc. — Mrs. B. M. L.

BAKING TIP

Dear Susanna: Would anyone like to try my production line idea for baking cookies?

Cut some wax paper the same size as the cookie sheet and place the cookies on the paper. While they are baking, lay out another batch on a second waxed sheet.

When the first group is done, lift the whole thing off and slide the newly filled wax sheet onto the cookie tin. Keep them going in and out without delay. This method is especially helpful when you are preparing large quantities for an afternoon tea or bake sale. — Mrs. Dorothy Sullivan.

To keep leftover canned pimentos from spoiling, place in a small dish and cover with salad oil.

Queen Sirikit of Siam Tops Poll of World's Best Dressed Women

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The Queen of Siam, who interchangeably wears Oriental silks and French couture, tops the annual poll of the world's best dressed women for 1964.

Queen Sirikit, of what now is Thailand, is sometimes called the Jackie Kennedy of Asia.

A secret committee of fashion editors which counted ballots distributed among 2,000 fashion authorities and celebrities announced the list of a baker's dozen Sunday.

Of the 12 women on the annual "12 best dressed list," seven are from three American families. The Kennedy family is the most generously represented.

After being at the top of the list for two years, Mrs. John F. Kennedy was omitted last year in deference to her mourning period. But she is in second place on the current list, with two relatives and a close friend lined up in the next three spots.

Her mother-in-law, Mrs. Joseph P. (Rose) Kennedy, is third, her Palm Beach neighbor, Mrs. Charles (Jayne) Wrightsman, is fourth, and her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill of New York and London, is fifth.

Said the committee of Mrs. Joseph Kennedy and the president's widow:

"Their decision not to wear deep mourning over a long period reflected the same sense of discipline and contemporary dignity which the late president always displayed."

LIST ACTRESSES

Although actresses without social background have made the famed list in the past, the two this year are both from New York's social register. They are Mrs. Stanley Rumbough Jr. (Miss Merrill), in sixth place, and Mrs. Wyatt Cooper (Gloria Vanderbilt), seventh. Following in eighth place is a second member of the Vanderbilt clan, Mrs. Alfred Gwynne (Jean) Vanderbilt.

Newcomers to the elite along with Mrs. Joseph Kennedy are: Ninth, Mrs. William (Cathrine) McCormich Blair Jr., wife of the U.S. ambassador to the Philippines.

Tenth, Mrs. Paul (Rachel) Mellon, wife of the industrialist and art collector (called the shyest of the world's millionaires).

Eleventh, Mrs. Alfred (Betsy Newling) Bloomingdale, wife of the California founder of the Diners' Club of Beverly Hills, Calif.

The twelfth spot is shared by two fashionable Ford sisters, Anne and Charlotte, of New York and Detroit, daughters of Henry Ford II and his former wife, Mrs. McDonnell Craig. Mrs. Ford, five times on the international best dressed list, is now a member of the Fashion Hall of Fame.

This year five other fashion pace-setters who have been on the list five times, made room for the new candidates by moving to the Hall of Fame.

IN—BUT OUT

Otherwise Mrs. Lod (Gloria) Gunness, London, Paris and Palm Beach, would still lead the list. The Mexican-born wife of the international banker captured twice as many votes as any other woman in the 1964 balloting.

The four other perennials moving with her to the for-all-time list are Mrs. David (Evangeline) Bruce, wife of the U.S. ambassador to Britain; Mrs. Walther Mondia Langenbahn Visanna; Salles, wife of a Brazilian banker living in Paris; Mrs. T. Charlton (Lilia) Henry, Philadelphia socialite, and film star Rosalind Russell.

Already entrenched in the fashion hall of fame are Princess Marina Princess Grace of Monaco, Mrs. Patricia Lopez Willshaw of Paris, Mrs. Bruno Paillat (Hersh Oberon), Duchess of Windsor, Mrs. William (Baba) Paley of New York, Countess Edward Von Skumarck of Paris, Queen Elizabeth, Mary Martin, Irene Dunne, Claudette Colbert.

Countess Consuelo Rodolfo Crespi of Rome, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst Jr., Mrs. Winston Ceenes Guest, Viscountess Jacqueline de Ribes of Paris, Audrey Hepburn, Mrs. Norman K. Roulz Winston of New York, Countess Aline Romanones of Madrid, Mona Marella Agnelli of Turin, Italy, Mrs. John Barry (Didi) Ryan III of New York, Mrs. (Nicole) Herve Alphand of Paris, and Mrs. Ford.

BEING ROYAL HELPS

Obviously, being royal helps in the international fashion sweep stakes, yet only Queen Sirikit reached the winners' circle. Polling an impressive number of votes but not enough to make the big list were Princesses Alexandra and Margaret of Britain and Paola and Liliane of Belgium.

At the same time a list of best-dressed personalities in the fashion industry for 1964 was announced. It includes:

Mrs. Richard (Dorothy) Rodgers, wife of the composer; and Mrs. Charles Wrightsman, collector of patented hand dress patterns; Mrs. S. I. (Mitzi) Newhouse, wife of the head of Conde Nast Publications; Mrs. Frederick (Isabelle) Eberstandt, wife of fashion photographer; Helena Rubinstein, head of cosmetics company; Geraldine Stutz, president of Henry Bendel New York; Mrs. William (Bern) Rose, wife of a New York textile executive; Mrs. Milton (Amy) Greene, Glamour magazine editor; Mollie Parnis, New York fashion designer; Mary Quant, London fashion designer; Mrs. David (Marilyn) Evins, wife of shoe designer; Mrs. Robin Butler, of Christian Dior New York; and Mrs. Gloria Schiff, member of the Vogue staff.

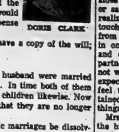
Prayer Partnership Is Subject Of Address at Diocesan W.A.

The Ontario Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary held their December monthly meeting at Christ Church, Belleville. The opening devotional period was conducted by the rector, Canon R. B. Wright; and the president, Mrs. S. G. Jackson, presided.

Mrs. T. J. Matthews, Lennoxville, Quebec, the Dominion secretary of Prayer Partners, was the guest speaker. She pointed out that Prayer Partnerships started in 1917 with the idea that a link be made in prayer by some missionary in the field and an intercessor at home. Although it began with individuals as partners, it was later expanded to take in W.A. branches.

"If prayer partnerships are to be successful there must be a closer understanding on both sides at the outset," the speaker said. The partner should realize we want to keep in touch and would like to hear from time to time. Also, if there is one case a Diocesan Board and Circle should have a good partnership. The partner does not write to them and does not expect a change of address. Even though the prayer partner moves it will remain the partner wherever she goes unless there is an understanding that the partnership be dissolved. Prayer partnerships should not be cut off because a person is ill, bedfast or bereaved old and valued friendships should be kept and perhaps another partner secured as well.



If a branch is considering giving a gift to a member for birthday or Christmas and they are being sent to foreign lands they should make certain it can be received without the payment of duty.

Prayer partners all have one thing in common—they are witnesses and ministers of God wherever He has called them to be.

"Our purpose is the extension of God's kingdom and our aim is that His salvation may be known throughout the whole earth. In these partnerships we invest ourselves, our times, our thoughts, time to learn what our partner is doing and time to study the numerous publications that are available to us. We need not always be looking upward in prayer but look outward to see what we can see; to see what they are doing that our hands may not do."

The speaker further told us we should think about our partners as we would like them to think about us, taking time to remember them and time to pray for them. We often think the person needs our prayers but we do not need anything from them. It should, however, be a mutual feeling since we need their prayers just as much as they need ours.

Mrs. G. Davies, Prescott, the Diocesan Prayer Partners' secretary, introduced the speaker,

DORIS CLARE

Successful Living

No Need to Probate Will If Debts Use Up Assets

DEAR DORIS — I would like to know why the will of a man who died three years ago is not in the recording office. Is it because he didn't own property and had his belongings in cash or bonds? Or has the will not been settled?

Some of the heirs are in the old country, too far to do much about it. I have always understood that all beneficiaries got a copy of the will but I know that is not the case this time. — FAMILY FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND — The one reason why a will might not be probated would be if there were no assets in the estate. If the deceased's debts used up all the cash and bonds or whatever, there would be just no sense in going to the expense of probate.

All beneficiaries should indeed have a copy of the will; and could request this.

DEAR DORIS — My sister and her husband were married in a Catholic church, also did not turn in time both of them attended the Protestant church and the children likewise. Now some of his relatives are of the opinion that they are no longer married.

— Can this be legally right? Can Catholic marriages be dissolved this way? If so, could the man plek up and marry again? Isn't a marriage a marriage, even if they later broke a signed contract about the children? — SANDY.

DEAR SANDY — No, no, no, and yes.

• • •

(Get your trouble off your chest by putting it on paper to Doris. Remember to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a private reply.)

Teeners Like New Spring Hats, Shoes

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The nicest thing you can say about spring hat and shoe designs shown at the visiting fashion press Sunday is that they are cool, boss, fab, gonk, or really with it.

These are strong words of approval in teen age jargon. And that something is the only language worth listening to now that the fashion industry has capitulated completely to youth.

At the millinery show which opened the New York couture group's semi-annual press week activities, one speaker suggested the word "hat" be replaced by a nothing - jangling since teen-agers don't understand this square term.

The designers of top - notch fashions admit they are wooing the young because they are desperate. Making up half the female population is a big, considerable, lucrative generation that may grow into hatless adults.

MOTHERS IMITATE

Daughters have stopped imitating the way their mothers dress. Mothers imitate them — including the bad hit.

Therefore these styles modified by misses in above-the-knee dresses were offered as possible remedies to the situation:

—Very Young Styles—Nothing could be younger than baby bonnets, some flowered, some helmet - like, all with chin straps, some with chin bows and posies, by Lilly Daché, Dachet, Emme and Sally Victor.

— Curler Covers — Instead of deploring, Adolpho and Carnegie among others have adopted and prettied up the babushka and hood, adored by the young set to hide their hair hardware. New spring snoods and scarves are in fabrics matching dresses or blouses. Coolie hats are worn over these.

—Easy-to-ditch—Many of the spring hats pack, fold, roll or jam into purses, pockets and beach bags, miraculously recovering their shapes once they are retrieved.

Hats for Fun — Candidates for this category are Mr. John's white chapeaux. One is a shaggy mane of white organza petals that frames the head and cascades to the shoulder blades. Others more seriously obscure the wearer's face with a flopping brim a yard wide.

SHOES ROUND

Young also made news at the National Shoe Institute's spring preview. There were baby doll or rounded toes, big news in the style line.

The toes are not quite as round and flat as little girls', but they are fuller than women's have been for some time.

Other shoe news includes: Strapped, low - heeled sandals for the city; cut-out designs on the sides of walking shoes; sometimes the sling pump, and now and then bare toes.

Turkey Loaf As an Encore

By MARY MOORE

My nephew says he looks forward 364 days until the next time he will see turkey with stuffing and giblet gravy with all his relatives around.

That remembered meal has been extended into a wonderful all-thing some of all of the turkey leftovers. The result is a happy combination of all the flavours. Read the recipe below and see how we have contrived to serve Christmas dinner over again. Turkey Soup from the bones is given too.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Cheese Omelette; Hot Chili Sauce; Creamed Diced Potatoes; Buttered Green Beans with Almonds; Celery Hearts; Gingerbread Pear Upside Down Cake; Coffee.

ENCORE TURKEY LOAF
(Serves 6)

2¾ cups ground turkey meat (include a little brown skin), ¾ cup fine stuffing, 1¼ cups cooked rice (see below), eggs, beaten, ½ cup turkey gravy, ½ cup hot water, 1 or 2 tablespoons chopped canned pimento (optional) (or pimentos from bottled salad olives), ½ cup chopped onion, 4 teaspoons chopped parsley or parsley flakes, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Cook the rice by adding ¼ cup boiling water and ¼ teaspoon salt to ¼ cup long-grain rice, and cook, covered for 20 minutes. Put the turkey meat through the grinder, adding the stuffing as you feed so that meat and stuffing are well mixed. Add cooked rice and remaining ingredients and mix well. Turn into well-buttered 9x5x3" pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 60 minutes. Unmold on hot platter and serve with Chili Sauce.

CHILI SAUCE

2 tablespoons fine chopped onion, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup tomato juice, 1 chicken bouillon cube, ½ teaspoon salt and dash hot sauce. Fry onion in butter until soft. Add 2 tablespoons flour and stir until thick, being sure bouillon cube is dissolved. Serve hot.

TURKEY SOUP

If bones are to be made into soup, be sure to break them, refrigerated until enough collect for a big pot full. Cover bones with 6 cups of water. If desired add some of the leftover skin. Simmer covered until all meat is separated from bones, then add skim off fat. The broth add any bits of meat you care to—about ½ cup. 2 tablespoons uncooked long-grain rice, macaroni alphabets, pearl barley, ½ cup each finely diced carrots and finely chopped onion, celery chopped with some leaves, ¼ cup finely chopped parsley, 1 or 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 1 cup tomatoes, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate. Simmer gently until barley is tender.

Serve this at a main course soup with Apple Dumplings for dessert (see tomorrow).

The members were welcomed by Mrs. William Ashley, president of the hostess branch. A social hour was spent at the close of the meeting.

Mosquitoes No Gentlemen Says Girl After Vacation

Buddhists

anti-U.S. and anti-Huong slogans on cars.

They rallied outside the Buddhist headquarters swinging banners which read "Americans go Home" and "Stop interfering with Vietnamese affairs."

The ostensible reason for the march was to call for the release of about 20 students arrested recently.

Last night, top political monk Thich Tam Chau demanded the ouster of the Huong government before some 2,000 Buddhists at a prayer meeting.

PROTESTS LAPSED

The Buddhist leadership had refrained from protests during the past two weeks after a group of young generals dissolved Viet Nam's High National Council (provisional parliament) Dec. 20.

Thich Tam Chau said at the meeting the Huong government was illegal because the High National Council which had chosen him to be prime minister no longer existed.

He declared that Yoong's government survived only because it was supported by "foreigners."

He also demanded the release of Buddhists and students held by the police. He added a call for unity in defending the faith.

Student demonstrations continued for the fourth straight day at Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon. A crowd of 600 students gathered in a school courtyard, shouting anti - government slogans and distributing tracts.

No troops were called and police did not intervene. High school and university students in Hue have been boycotting classes for the last two weeks.

END NBC BAN

NEW YORK (AP) — A National Broadcasting Company spokesman said Sunday the Soviet government has authorized the reopening of the NBC news bureau in Moscow. The bureau was closed in March, 1963, on a Soviet order following the broadcast in the United States of two NBC news White Paper programs—The Death of Stalin and The Rise of Khrushchev.

MORE

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — Diana McNess, 19, the toast of Tennant Creek, came home to Melbourne from the wilds of Australia's northern territory Friday night with 46 marriage proposals and legs swollen from gunshot bites.

"They're a beaut mob up there," the 5ft - year - old telephone operator said after her three - week vacation with the gold mining town's 150 bachelors. "But the mosquitoes were no gentlemen."

Diana, a chubby (32-26-36½) Melbourne girl, flew to Tennant Creek after reading that the bachelors were prospecting for wives.

After her flight home Friday, she said she had not made up her mind whether she would accept any of the proposals.

"Every man was a real gentlemen—well almost every one," she said. "One of the blokes clobbered a fellow and laid him out because he kissed me when he shouldn't have."

Diana went on: One day someone nicked (stole) the underwear I'd washed and left drying on the hotel balcony — but the boys chipped in and I got a complete set of lingerie for Christmas.

"On New Year's Eve we had an all-night party. It adjourned to the airport to see me off on the plane. They all told me to come back as soon as possible and bring some girl friends. I would tell any girl to go there; they couldn't do better."

She goes back to work Monday.

When the town's bachelors had heard that red - headed Diane intended to visit them, they paid her fare and gave her the biggest welcome and hospitality in Tennant Creek's history.

hospital there who was able to talk.

Red Cross officials in Pueblo said those who escaped injury were seated at the back of the church, where the roof had not been completed.

The church, of brick, mortar and concrete construction, was being used formally for the first time Sunday, and the mass was dedicated to the building.

The interior structural supports of the church's aisle had been removed by construction crews Saturday.

Survivors joined other townspeople in rescue groups to dig through the rubbish in search for dead and injured.

Five tractors from the sugar mill plowed away the heavy debris.

Help from outside was hours in arriving because of Rifle's remoteness from any large towns and its lack of telephone and telegraph.

Red Cross units from three towns moved into Rifle and took the injured to neighboring hospitals and to Pueblo.

Serenity

across the country.

The Commons now stands adjourned to Feb. 16, having interrupted the longest session in Canadian history a week before Christmas with much work still to be done.

When the Christmas recess began, Mr. Pearson drove the Commons what sounded very much like an undertaking that the government would try to arrange things so Parliament wouldn't have to sit through July and August in 1965, as it did in 1964.

At his press conference last Thursday, however, Mr. Pearson spoke of the possibility of having to work again through the summer.

RESUME 1964 SESSION

The government's plan now is to be resumed 1964 session dealt with the Labor Standards Bill, the Canada Pension Plan, and a formula whereby provinces to opt-out of federal-provincial joint programs.

Then, Mr. Pearson said, a new 1965 session probably will be started.

Observers think it likely that the resumed session will take at least six weeks to complete the 1964 program.

A new session starting in April then would have only three months to run before the promised summer recess.

Meanwhile, the government could decide on a general election anytime. Equally possible is the chance that opposition forces might combine to vote no confidence in the minority government and force an election.

Doubts Slayings Are Connected

KINGSTON (CP) — Provincial Police Inspector H. M. Sayou of Toronto said today there is no connection between the fatal shooting Christmas Eve of a Kingston brewer's retail store manager and the slaying New Year's Eve of three persons near Watertown, N.Y.

"Our ballistics findings will be compared with theirs (New York State Police) but frankly I don't believe there's a chance of any connection," he said.

"The motives and methods in the killings were absolutely different."

Insp. Sayeau did not elaborate.

Paul Lawrence, 31, of Kingston was shot twice by a .25-calibre revolver during an abortive holdup by two masked men.

The bodies of Peter Kgan, 28, and of Sackette Harbor, N.Y., his wife Barbara, 24, and his brother Gerald, 19, were found in or near a station wagon parked off a highway about two miles north of Watertown. Each had been shot twice in the back of the head.

State police said in Watertown that among the leads they were checking was a possible connection between the two.

45 Fatalities Across Canada Over Holiday

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The 78-hour New Year's holiday period came to a close Sunday night with at least 45 Canadians reported killed in accidents, 30 of them in traffic mishaps.

The 30 road deaths surpassed a Canadian Highway Safety Council estimate that the person would die during the period but fell short of the record 89 killed in traffic accidents in 1958.

The 1958 three - day total of 41 deaths set a record for the New Year's holiday.

A Canadian Press Survey from 6 p.m. Thursday to midnight Sunday local times also included nine fire deaths, three drownings and three deaths in miscellaneous accidents in this year's total.

Quebec led the provinces with 23 deaths. Of the 14 traffic deaths reported here, half occurred in a downtown Montreal hand. Two other persons were drowned and one boy died when he accidentally swallowed a fire whistle.

Ontario reported 15 deaths, including nine in traffic, three in fires, one by drowning, one man who died while his home-made plane crashed and one elderly woman who died of exposure when she apparently locked herself out of her isolated cabin.

Three of four traffic deaths in Alberta occurred in a two-car crash in Edmonton and one person was killed in a traffic accident in Saskatchewan.

Nova Scotia had one traffic fatality and one death by fire. Newfoundland reported one road death.

British Columbia, Manitoba, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick were fatality - free.

Soviet Military Hardware Now Seen in Cuba

HAVANA (AP)—Cuba's Premier Fidel Castro has displayed Soviet "land - to - land missiles" and swift new reconnaissance jet planes which have been added to the array of Soviet military hardware which has made his army the strongest in Latin America.

The slender, grey rockets, about 24 feet long, rolled through Havana's streets Saturday in the military parade marking the sixth anniversary of the Castro revolution.

The new jets, of six unannounced type, screamed low overhead as announcers said they were capable of guarding the Cuban coasts day and night.

A Cuban television announcer said the missiles had been acquired by Cuba "through the brotherly help of the Soviet Union."

But at the same time, Castro declared "we do not need to ask anybody to loan us their brains, their heroism or their revolutionary colors."

STATES INDEPENDENCE

In his annual speech, Castro said Cuba will keep its political independence, regardless of the price, even to the point of subsisting without economic aid from any country.

Castro's 2½-hour speech was devoted largely to economic matters, including the assurance that production will increase in the tightly - rationed country.

On Cuba's economic problems, Castro accused "imperialists" of speculating with sugar prices and said he had "misinformed the enemy" with respect to Cuba's sugar production in the face of price fluctuations.

Cuba's 1964 sugar cane harvest has been estimated as low as 3,800,000 tons, compared with a peak of 7,000,000 tons in some previous years.

A shortage of manpower has been one of the big problems in the recent cane harvest. Some 60,000 workers from Havana area factories, hotels and other commercial centres are scheduled to work in the fields during the harvest which now is under way.

"The house is going to seem so lonely without its bright, shiny face and sweet voice!"

Rusk Cautions Against Reckless Action in South Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dean Rusk has counselled against "reckless action" in Viet Nam and said he would not have the United States abandon its war or expand it.

Rusk also ruled out for the time being a political settlement of the struggle against the Viet Cong guerrillas—a drawn-out affair in which the United States has invested men, money and materials.

The South Vietnamese can turn back the Communist insurgents, Rusk maintained Sunday as he reviewed the war and the international scene generally for a year-end review on the NBC television network.

Rusk conceded he shares with many Americans "a sense of frustration that things are not going better, more rapidly toward a conclusion." But, he said, the situation calls for persistence and coolness, not "reckless action which would move us over thoughtlessly in either the direction of defeat or in the direction of a very great war."

Along the way, he said, he does not favor expanding the struggle or having the U.S. pull out of it.

The first, he said, would subject Asians to devastation and lead down a trail "the end of which no one in any country could possibly see with assurance." The second, he said, would encourage China to become more aggressive.

He dismissed a political settlement — a third alternative to present policy — as impossible because the Communists have refused to give up their aggressive designs.

Elsewhere the debate on South Viet Nam continued as four senators urged a re-valuation of the U.S. role in the Southeast Asian country and Japan's new premier, Eisaku Sato, said in a copyrighted interview in U.S. News and World Report that South Viet Nam will be an important subject during his forthcoming talks with President Johnson.

Killer Would Have Preferred Death Penalty

TORONTO (CP) — Nathan Leopold, a convicted murderer of the 1920s, said Sunday night he opposed capital punishment because it is degrading to society and fails as a deterrent to murder.

The 59-year-old Leopold said during a television interview here he would sooner have been executed at the time of his conviction than face life in prison.

He said that on several occasions he even contemplated suicide, although he realized that if he lived long enough he would probably regain his freedom.

Leopold was sentenced to life imprisonment plus 99 years in 1924 for his part in the death of a Chicago boy. He was paroled in 1958. Richard Loeb, sentenced with Leopold, was later stabbed to death by a fellow prisoner.

Mayor J. R. Ellis

Brown and Eugene Herrion.

Mayor Ellis also presented a long service plaque to former city engineer Charles A. Mott, who has retired after 45 years' service with the city.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

Appointments to the various civic boards and commission, along with committee chairmen were made.

Alderman Donald Joss, last year's chairman of the Recreation Arena and Parks Committee, expressed his disappointment at being left off the parks board this year.

He admitted that as chairman of the parks board he had offended many persons last year and for this he apologized.

Ald. Joss said he was looking forward to serving on the council finance committee this year and assured he would give the parks committee his fullest co-operation.

BY-LAWS PASSED

Council gave first, second and third readings to by-laws providing for the issuance of $190,000 in debentures for a 20 year term for the Public Utilities Commission for erection of a sub-station, and for a second debenture for $225,000 for the public school board for erection of an addition to Park Dale school.

Although no formal objection to the school board debenture was offered, Mayor Ellis said the school board had passed up an opportunity to save the city $30,000 regarding the cost.

"The board," he said, "had acted very foolish in the matter." He promised fuller details at a later meeting.

Another by-law which saw two readings was one providing for amendment of the public health to allow the re-opening of the Swift plant on Station St.

And finally a borrowing by-law was approved authorizing the city to borrow up to $2,300,000 to meet current expenditures until taxes are collected.

Woman Rescued By Firemen

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Reid, 25, of Hamilton was rescued by firemen from a smoke-filled hallway Saturday after a fire broke out in a west-end home.

Mrs. Reid's nephew, Kenneth, Bach, 16, suffered cut tendons in both hands when he jumped to safety through a second-storey window.

Dennis Dinirock, 16, a friend of Kenneth, suffered a cut hand while making his way out of the house.

All three were treated at hospital and released.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Les (The Whooping) Crane who, in my book, is an also-ran in the nightly Carson-Paar stakes, had just finished trying to out-Guy Lombardo and his famous Canadians on New Year's Eve when somebody wheeled the 1965 crystal ball into our TV den.

It pictured a bleary-eyed stork squinting through plaid-colored eyeballs dropping a bundle of 1965 whatnots into the "in" basket on the sports desk.

The New Year's predictions were the usual salad garnished with wishful thinking and wild guessing with a lot having a sexyalibi of truth.

Harness racing horseheads, said one, will have its best year yet. The sentsuels will break all records. The first prediction is based on last year's success; the second on the number of shirts given as Christmas presents.

A bright reason was predicted for Al Kelleher and his Baseball Umpires' Association. This is based on the reduced-price offers from spectacles and shoe-shine equipment manufacturers.

Golf will exceed the highly successful season of 1964 especially if they "Let George Do It." If the rumored merger materializes they'll have to make the 19th hole twins.

Senior baseball will have to put out the "Help Wanted" sign early. If the Easter stocking does not contain a sponsor, coach and manager above and beyond player status, the boys might have to revert to foolhardy fishing and colorless conversation.

Diluted softball is in the same position as the bride left at the church. It will have to wait and see if anything turns up. On the other hand the Commercial Loop should look for bigger parks. If 1964 success is a criterion the "corner-lot" softball will only need a Brink truck to take home the silver collections.

It's "Success Ahey" for the Yacht Club. It ran splendidly under the "Pink" last year and a stepped-up social agenda will augment the success of the "White-Whisper" of 1965.

Soccer should have a fair to middling year. It's stepped-up public relations program last season, as far as this department is concerned, did not do any harm—and if this is improved in 1965 there will be fewer "kicks" outside the playing field.

The brook trouters will be able to get off the winter book come March first, as far as I know. It is too early to predict anything weather-wise but the success of the past two years indicates a bumper crop of March anglers—not counting those who don't fish. Some of 'em go in like lions, pans out like lambs and come home with their tales twisted.

The crystal ball predicted another lease of life for Campbellford's Moby Dick and Marmora's "Moby Doll." These "man-eating" muskies, if they ever get together should produce a bumper crop of offspring—or liars.

One of the local Baron Munchausens told me "Dick and Doll" had a secret sub-ice rendezvous New Year's morning which caused that alleged "earthquake." That's about as logical as the tripe about earth tremors and walls shaking.

Hunting authorities predict a great season for seekers of the bear pelts. But they should be wary. Since one of the bear commissioners was gunned down by a fusillade of shots from the Great White Hunter last year, the brutes are warned against the blandishments and love-making antics of hunters who warble "Foam on the Range."

However, I'm informed by the public relations officer of the Bear Lake Hunt Club that Armand (GWH) Duffy is undaunted. He'll even wear the pelt of his 1964 prize and go into the pack as a decoy. Let's hope he doesn't lose it to some amorous Lady Bear. He'd be the first bald-pated hunk in history.

Other predictions—Bobby Hull won't score fifty goals; the Boston Bruins will win the Stanley Cup; the Mets will take the world series; the Grey Cup is a cinch for the Argos; Chuvalo will be the next world's heavyweight champion; Arnold Palmer will start taking golf lessons; Pearson will adopt the Red Ensign as Canada's flag and I'll be nominated as the next president of the United Nations.

Leafs Win, Tie * * * Habs Defeat Bruins, Hawks; Up Lead * * * Wings Split

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

This looks like the big year for right-winger Claude Provost, who has played on seven championship teams in his seven National Hockey League seasons but never quite made it into the limelight.

Provost, 31, has never made the NHL All-Star team, even in the 1967-68 season when he had 33 goals to lead Montreal Canadiens to a fifth consecutive league title.

But this year, Montreal's leading scorer and the league's leading right-winger feels he has a chance. So does his coach, Toe Blake.

Blake's confidence was justified Sunday night in Chicago when consistent Claude scored the winner as Canadiens edged the runner-up Black Hawks 3-1.

That, coming on the heels of a 3-1 home-ice victory over Boston Saturday night, gave Montreal a three-point lead over the Hawks in the NHL standings.

In other weekend action, Toronto Maple Leafs defeated visiting Detroit Red Wings 3-1 Saturday night and tied 2-2 with the Rangers in New York Sunday. Detroit pounded lowly Boston Bruins 6-2 in the other Sunday game at Detroit.

SCORED DECIDER

Provost scored the deciding goal against Chicago unassisted while Canadiens were a man short.

Bobby Hull, celebrating his 26th birthday, had opened the scoring for Chicago near the mid-point of the second period. He scored his 32nd goal of the season on a pass from Chico Maki.

Montreal rookie Tyna Conroyer evened it up eight minutes later when he scored with a five-foot drive on a power play.

Centre Henri Richard was the Montreal star Saturday night, scoring two goals and assisting on the other, a screened 30-foot shot from the blueline by Jacques Laperriere.

Bruins got a first-period goal from Wayne Maxner but fell apart after that.

Bruins' beleaguered goalie Eddie Johnston had to come up with 4 saves as Canadiens stormed all around the Boston nets.

The action was even hotter for blue Sunday, when the Red Wings peppered him with 56 shots and made eight of them count.

Bruce MacGregor and Nor Ullman scored twice each in the Red Wings' biggest offensive display of the season. The other Detroit marksmen were Pit Martin, Ted Lindsay, Alex Delvecchio and Ron Murphy.

Boston got its only goal from Tom Williams in the second period.

LOST TO LEAFS

It was a feast for the Red Wings after their earlier 3-1 loss to Toronto, in which Ullman opened the scoring with Detroit's only goal on a pass from Floyd Smith.

Defenceman Tim Horton scored the first of two goals less than five minutes later. Ron Stewart netted the winning goal in the second period and Horton provided the insurance marker.

In New York Sunday, each team got a goal in each period for the 3-3 standoff, although the Rangers outshot Toronto 43-31.

The Toronto marksmen were Horton, who scored his third goal of the weekend in a blizzarn 80-foot flinks shot, Jim Pappin and newcomer Britt Selby, elevated from the junior Toronto Marlboros because of injuries to right-wingers Andy Bathgate, Ron Ellis and George Armstrong.

The Rangers led 3-1 until the final minute of the second period on goals by Rod Gilbert and Earl Ingarfield. The Leafs then went ahead, and Jean Ratelle netted the tying goal at 7:32 of the third period.

No further NHL games take place until Wednesday, when all six teams are in action. Detroit is at Montreal, Toronto at Chicago and Boston at New York.

Will Honor Citation With Statue

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A lifesize bronze statue of the famous thoroughbred Citation will be unveiled Jan. 10 at Hialeah Park, Hialeah President Eugene E. Mori has announced.

Mrs. Gene Markey of Lexington, Ky., and Calumet Farm, Fla., owner of Calumet Farm under whose colors Citation, the last triple crown winner raced, will do the unveiling.

Also present will be Jockey Eddie Arcaro, who rode Citation in 17 of his 45 starts; trainer Jimmy Jones, (Jimmy) Jones, and Thomas Flanagan, sculptor who was commissioned to do the bronze.

The 3,855 - pound statue arrived here after a 44-day sea trip from Florence, where it was cast.

Citation started his career as a three - year - old at Hialeah, winning four races here in February, 1948, before going on to take the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes and win 19 of 20 starts that year.

He raced 45 times and was out of the money only once. He was the first horse to earn more than $1,000,000 dollars and the first to run a mile in less than 1:34 minutes.

The Big Seven

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Veteran Gordie Howe joined the National Hockey League's top seven scorers Sunday night when he picked up two assists in Detroit Red Wings' 6-1 landslide victory over the Boston Bruins.

The performance, which brought his season total to 29 and his points total to 39, moved Howe into sixth spot in the scoring race.

His teammate Norm Ullman and Claude Provost, Montreal's high-scoring right-winger, are three points in weekend games. Ullman has 32 points and is tied in third spot with 33 apiece.

Provost, on the other hand, has two assists, moved past Phil Esposito and Jean Ratelle into second spot with 32. Esposito, who had nothing added to his record, is fourth with 33.

The only other move was made by Red Gilbert of New York, who added one goal to move into a 30-point tie for seventh with Chicago's Pierre Pilote.

Bobby Hull, the scoring leader, netted one goal for a total of 32 goals and 53 points. That increased his lead to 12 points over the runner-up, his Chicago teammate Stan Mikita.

The leaders:

	G.	A.	PTS.
Hull, Chicago	32	21	53
Mikita, Chicago	13	28	41
Ullman, Detroit	13	19	32
Provost, Montreal	12	21	33

Oaks Win Third In Row

Regals Grab Senior Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sunday night's 5-3 loss to Guelph Regals wasn't anything to be ashamed of, Woodstock Oaks but it did enable Guelph to jump two points ahead of the Galt Hornets and the Ontario Hockey Association Senior standings.

The hapless Welland club has been a prime target for the other four teams in the loop all season, winning only four of its 22 starts.

In other Sunday action, player-coach Gus Morison guided Oakville Oaks to their third straight win since he took over the coaching job nearly two weeks ago. By downing Woodstock Athletics 7-5, the Oaks moved to within four points of third-place Woodstock.

Dave Lucich, Don McGregor, Joe Mair, Frank Carroll and Keith Worrell netted one apiece for Guelph while Vance Millar, Don Seager and Ted DeRutter scored for Welland.

Norm Sibbick and Bill Ford sparked Oakville with two goals apiece, Morison, Bob Hawkins and Moe Galand added one apiece. Scoring for Woodstock were Ron Ryan, Jerry Stirling, Art Sullivan, Bryle Klinck and Bernie Lawrence.

West Outmuds East; Florida Wins Gator

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League can be forgiven if they are a little smug today following the West's 21-7 victory Saturday in the East-West Shrine game at San Francisco.

Quarterback Craig Morton fired three touchdown pass to end Jack Schrash with just one minute, four seconds remaining. The Cowboys of California stars have been playing catch with a football since they were 10-year-old dandies.

And, since Dallas has signed them both to professional contracts, club executives have high hopes they'll be combining in just the same way for many years to come.

In the only other college bowl game played during the weekend, Florida State slaughtered Oklahoma 36-19 Saturday in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla.

Oklahoma was without four of its first-string ballplighs because they signed professional contracts before their college careers had been completed.

A steady rain, driven by strong winds, fell throughout most of the game in San Francisco. And the field, already sopping from several weeks of rain, resembled a swamp.

Neither team could manage anything approaching a scoring drive through the first two quarters. Fumbles were frequent and players often slipped to the ground with no one close to them.

STAUBACH INJURED

Then Navy quarterback Roger Staubach, 1963 Heisman Trophy winner, splashed to the West's one where he was knocked unconscious by Washington State All-America Charles Williams on a driving tackle.

Fred Mazurek of Pittsburgh replaced Staubach and plunged for the score. Nowatzke booted the extra point and the West led 7-0.

For the next two scores Dick Butkus, two-time Illinois All-American playing for Chicago Bears, twice centered the ball high over the head of Michigan State's John Hadl in the end zone on punt attempts. The West was awarded two points on each of the unusual safeties.

In the Gator Bowl game, Florida State fired Bitenicourt scored a record four touchdowns while quarterback Steve Tensi tossed a record five scoring passes for six Florida State, only two of a flock of former Big Ten players that saw only one of nine touchdowns converted.

Among other records, Tensi completed a record 23 of a record 36 pass attempts for a record 302 yards with Bitenicourt catching a record 13 for a record 182 yards.

The single game pass in Gator Bowl history was 25 yards from Oklahoma quarterback Ron Pletcher to Ben Hart in a game that produced a record total score of 55 points for the clashers.

Lindsay Bucks NHL Over Fines

'Face Ran Into Stick' - Brewer

TORONTO (CP)—Left-winger Ted Lindsay has threatened to back both the National Hockey League and its president over $75 worth of fines he received automatically late in the game as his Detroit Red Wings lost 3-1 to Toronto Maple Leafs in an NHL contest here.

"I'm going to tell Sid (coach Sid Abel) not to pay the money," Lindsay said in an interview Saturday night. "And I'm not going to sit for Campbell's (NHL president Clarence Campbell) kangaroo court either.

"It's a disgrace what Carl Brewer (Leaf defenceman) gets away with, but I'm not going to say anything because it does not do any good."

Abel said that when the team returns to Detroit, centre Norm Ullman will have to see an eye specialist because of an injury to right eye suffered in the second period.

Ullman commented: "Blood was drawn and I guess there should have been a five-minute penalty, but the referee said he didn't see it."

Brewer asked for his version of the Ullman incident.

"Let's say his face ran into my stick."

Cards Defeat Favored Packers

MIAMI (AP) — Billy (Peanuts) Gambrell, one of the smallest players in the National Football League, made himself a big target for Charley Johnson's passes and St. Louis Cardinals upset the favored Green Bay Packers in the pro Playoff Bowl Sunday.

The 167-pound Gambrell, a free agent picked up by the Cardinals from South Carolina, threw two touchdown passes from Johnson, one an 80-yard play, as the Cardinals took a 17-13 lead in the third quarter.

A Green Bay attack in the final period put the Packers within field-goal reach, but a threat died with Jimmy Burson's end zone interception of Paul Hornung's pass meant for Ron Kramer.

Gambrell, who had been regular offensive only since this season when Sonny Randall and Bobby Johnson's six passed for 194 yards, setting a Playoff Bowl record.

It was the first victory for the East in the game of NFL runners - up.

Packers, six-point favorites, moved into an early 3-0 lead on a 40-yard field goal by Hornung.

In the second quarter, Gambrell got behind Jesse Whittenton, and Johnson's perfectly placed pass over his shoulder at the Green Bay 46 and raced in for the first touchdown.

Johnson took the Cardinals in twice in the third quarter for a seven-yard TD sail by Jim Barnes and a touchdown on a 10-yard toss to Gambrell for a 17-3 margin.

Green Bay's first touchdown came on Donny Anderson's punt to Elijah Pitts at the St. Louis 16 and Jim Taylor got across from there.

Then Green Bay quarterback Bart Starr suffered his first interception after 201 throws. Jerry Stovall picking it off and running 30 yards for a touchdown, making it 24-20.

Green Bay got back in range on a 30-yard touchdown lunge by Taylor. But Burson's interception saved the game with Hornung's last throwing at the floor on the St. Louis 23-yard line.

Canada May Get

World Hockey In 1967

QUEBEC (CP) — Lionel Fleury, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, says Canada will bid to play host to division A of the 1967 world hockey championships, never before played here.

The request will be submitted to the March annual meeting of the International Ice Hockey Federation in Finland, he said. Cost of the meet would probably limit CAHA to staging the one divisional series, said Fleury.

He did not say where the tournament would be staged, noting only that it must be held "where the attendance will be large enough to make ends meet."

A publicised report had said Montreal and Toronto might split the games jointly.

Fleury was interviewed Saturday after his return from Colorado Springs, Colo., where he watched an invitation tournament featuring Canada, the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia. He said the 1967 meet would cost the CAHA about $100,000 to stage.

The IIHF supports two eight-team divisions labelled A and B. This year the Soviets, Canada, Sweden, the U.S., Norway, West and East Germany and Czechoslovakia form the A division.

Fleury said he is certain Canada's request will be granted but he added that problems such as obtaining visas for East German players must first be solved. Canada does not recognize East Germany.

The annual international championship was first played in 1920.

Richest Rookie On Earth

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Brawny Joe Namath, son of a struggling Beaver Falls, Pa., steelworker, Saturday signed the contract that made him the richest rookie in the history of pro football—and probably any other sport.

The scary of the former shoeshine boy who led Alabama to the national college championship was climaxed at a Miami Beach hotel at Miami Beach where he concluded a deal with New York Jets of the American Football League that is reported to be worth $400,000 for three years work.

This is said to include $100,- 000 a year in salary and about $100,000 in bonuses. There also were unconfirmed reports that Namath's personal attorney was giving Namath $5,000 a year for life after his playing career ends.

Namath said—the Jets and St. Louis Cardinals, who drafted him in the National Football League, made "about the same" offers. It had been reported that St. Louis dropped out when the bidding reached $400,000.

STOCKHOLM (CP - AP) — Sweden's national hockey champion, Brynaes, defeated Lacombe Rockets of the Central Alberta Hockey League 7-4 Sunday to win the 28th annual Ahearne Cup tournament here.

Brynaes and the Soviet Union each collected eight points, but Brynaes won with a better goal average of 17-6 to 14-6.

Improved Nationals Defeat Czechs

First Victory

WINNIPEG (CP) — Czech Gord Simpson figures his national hockey team's 4-3 victory over Czechoslovakia Sunday was a good "start" for 1965.

It was Canada's first win in eight exhibition games against two of Europe's top clubs, the Russians and Czechs.

It fell "quite good," said Simpson, who predicted steady improvement now as the Canadians get ready for the world championships at Tampere, Finland, in March. Canada last won the championship in 1961.

"I don't think there's anybody as good as Russia," Simpson said. But we will be...."

The Russians staggered Canada 4-0 three weeks ago in the first of the recent international matches. Last week Canada tied the Czechs 3-3 in an international tournament at Colorado Springs, Colo., halting a losing streak of six games, give against Russia.

Grant Moore, Aggie Kukulowicz, Brian Conacher and Bob Parke scored for Canada, who built up 2-0 and 3-0 period leads while Vaclav Nedomansky and Josef Galonka replied for the Czechs.

Ken Broderick made a total of 31 saves in goals for Canada, 14 of them in the final period, while Vladimir Dzurilla stopped 17 shots before being replaced in the second period by Vlado Tumrlla, who stopped 16.

The Czechs, who beat Russia 5-3 in the Walter Brown memorial tournament at Colorado Springs, Sunday lacked their usual precision and fast reaction.

Canada beat them with hard skating and sharp passing as well as solid defence and good goal-tending.

The most dangerous Czech play was the long pass, designed to break a man into the clear.

Canada used the bodycheck to advantage throughout the game. In one case, late in the first period, Czech Josef Gradisnar was knocked over the boards by Parke.

Each team took two minor penalties.

Early in the third, Czech defenceman Jan Suchy was carried off after failing to the ice on a bodycheck by Conacher. He wasn't wearing protective headgear, commonly used by European hockey players.

Dr. Jack Waugh of Winnipeg, the doctor for the Canadian club, consulted him and said he had concussion.

The Canadian and Czech teams meet again in Toronto next Sunday.

Victoria Wins Six Straight

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

With Saturday's 6-3 victory over Vancouver Canucks in the Western Hockey League, Victoria Maple Leafs appear at last to be living up to their reputation they established last year when they were the winningest team in the league at Denver.

The win extended their win streak to six games and pulled them to within four points of fourth - place Los Angeles Blades, who Sunday took an 8-4 pasting at the hands of Portland Buckaroos.

On other weekend action, last-place San Francisco Seals managed a split, losing 3-2 to Los Angeles Saturday and winning 5-4 over Seattle Totems Sunday.

Totems lead the league with 45 points while Portland has 40, Vancouver 34, Los Angeles 33, Victoria 29 and San Francisco 27.

What Makes Bobby Hull Click

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Hull's assault on the 50-goals scoring record has been the highlight of the first half of the 1964-65 National Hockey League season.

How come the dynamic left-winger with Chicago Black Hawks is moving at an unprecedented pace? Is he ready to join Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings, Maurice Richard, former Montreal Canadiens star, and others among the all-time greats?

A survey of opposing players and coaches unveiled these observations:

"Hull's slap shots from the blueline and even from a bad angle are more accurate this season," says veteran Toronto Maple Leaf goaltender Johnny Bower. "The power he got behind his shots is remarkable. He has developed a good skill cornering in and he gets the goalie to make the first move."

Leo Boivin of Boston Bruins, rated one of the NHL's hardest body-checkers, says Hull is "the toughest forward in the league. You have to try to get him over to the boards, but that isn't easy. He's like a bull."

"This season, Hull is coming down dead centre more," says Jacques Plante, New York Rangers' goalie and a six-time Vezina Trophy winner. "That gives him more of the net to shoot at. I used to be able to protect the angle on him.

TRAILS PLAY MORE

"He trails the play a lot more. His linemates set him up and he picks up the puck with more time to shoot and can get more power behind his slap shot. If he shoots toward either corner of the net from 40 feet out, it's in the net eight times out of 10.

"Hull would break my face mask with one of his hard shots. His shot is like a piece of lead and sometimes it sinks three or four inches. You have to see it coming toward you to believe it."

Claude Provost of Montreal, a right-winger often assigned to Hull, advises: "You can't give him any room to get started. He'll beat you unless you stay right on top of him and this year it's been harder to do that."

Hull, is in his eighth NHL campaign. He scored 50 goals in 1961-62, tying the record set by Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens in 1944-45 and equalled by Bernie Geoffrion of the Canadiens in 1960-61.

TWO-WAY PLAYER

"Bobby has become an outstanding two-way player," says Ranger coach Red Sullivan. "He now really back-checks well. I remember one game in which we had a four-on-one breakaway and he was caught deep in our end. He put his head down and raced back to break up the play."

Hull, who often plays from 30 to 40 minutes a game, had a career total of 254 goals after 31 games of the current campaign. Howe, 36 and in his 19th NHL season, has an all-time high of 378. Richard, who retired in 1960, is the runner-up with 544.

"Hull is more colorful than Howe and a better player than Richard," maintains Kingo Clancy, whose span in the NHL as player, coach, referee and currently assistant Toronto manager-coach covers 42 years.

"Bobby is more advanced than either Howe or Richard at a comparable age. He just plays all out every minute he's on the ice."

Legality Of Signing

College, Pro Leagues Head For Battles

By MURRAY CHASS

The National and American football leagues, heading for court, battles over two college players, with multidisciplinary action against Minnesota Vikings or Houston Oilers for signing four Oklahoma gridders before their college eligibility expired.

A larger problem confronting the two leagues could be whether to co-operate with the schools and each other in eliminating practices that have aroused the wrath of college officials.

Executive director Walter Byers of the National Collegiate Athletic Association is hopeful but realistic about the prospects of co-operation.

Both leagues have indicated they will have representatives at next week's NCAA meeting in Chicago and Byers hopes a solution to the problem will be found.

The NCAA's concern stems from the signing of four Oklahoma players before the Sooners' Gator Bowl clash with Florida State Saturday.

Houston signed tackle Ralph Neely, who later also signed with Dall's Cowboys of the National League while Minnesota signed fullback Jim Grisham, flanker Hubert Bentley and end Wes Skidgel.

College officials pay the pro-leagues must co-operate with each other and with the colleges by honoring assignments.

Commissioner Mill Woodard said the AFL is ready to do just that. However, he said he would be healthy to eliminate this situation. Woodard said, "But we cannot do it by ourselves. The NFL would have to go along."

"The only good answer," Byers says, "is if both leagues would agree not to draft players until after Jan. 1 and not draft a player who has football eligibility remaining. That would solve 90 to 95 per cent of the problem."

Under the present system, both leagues can draft redshirts, players whose original classes will graduate the following June but who have one year of college eligibility left.

One such case was all-American tackle Jim Wilson of Georgia.

Drafted in 1963, he signed a contract with Boston Patriots of the AFL before last season and played the entire season for Georgia. He became the season's first double signer when he put his name on an NFL contract with San Francisco 49ers after the Sun Bowl.

Neely signed with Houston Dec. 1, then decided against playing for the Oilers and signed with the Cowboys last Friday after he had been declared ineligible for the Gator Bowl.

Both the Wilson and the Neely cases appear headed for court.

Although there have been no other double signings, there apparently have been other early signings, technical as they might have been.

Four Florida State players signed contracts with AFL teams 15 seconds before the game was over.

All-America end Fred Biletnikoff joined Oakland Raiders while quarterback Steve Tensi, end Don Floyd and centre Jack Edwards signed with San Diego Chargers.

Peewees Win First Over Napanee 6-4

Saturday's bad snow storm paved the way for Belleville Rollins peewees' first victory over their Napanee counterparts, a 6-4 exhibition decision.

Wellington was scheduled to play in Napanee and Belleville was slated to go to Gananoque for OMHA games.

The storm forced postponement of the game at Napanee but Belleville started out for Gananoque.

It took three hours for a couple of Belleville cars to get as far as Napanee — and several did not make it at all.

Management of the Napanee and Belleville teams got heads together and decided to play an exhibition.

Rollins had only eight players there but surprised the home squad with the 6-4 victory. Napanee had beaten the Belleville boys each time they had met previously this season.

Belleville jumped ahead 1-0 after just 15 seconds of play, on a goal by Fred Stickie, and Terry Meagher later added three, Rick Meagher and Graig Duffy one apiece.

Dave Cass potted two Napanee markers, Wayne Elder and Murray White one each.

In other OMHA games scheduled over the weekend, results were once again lacking here.

Ritway novices were scheduled to play in Trenton on Saturday.

The Belleville A.C.T. "Travellers" were scheduled to play host to Wellington here yesterday. A Wellington club official said over the weekend that the juvenile schedule had been revised about a month ago and that Sunday's game was one of those changed.

No schedule revisions were announced here.

Ski Reports

City and district skiers frustrated by the non-cooperation of the weather man than the most of the season to date, came into their own at regional resorts over the weekend.

Large crowds took advantage of the popular sport at the Mountain View and Oak Lake resorts.

Oak Lake had the largest snowfall, some ten inches mantling the hills. Over six inches covered the fine runs of the Mountain View slopes.

Reports from both resorts state the snow is now well packed and good skiing is forecast for the week.

Skiing will be available at Mountain View, Tuesday evening starting seven o'clock.

Oak Lake will be open Wednesday from 12.30 to 4.30 and next Saturday and Sunday from 10.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m.

BOSTON WINS

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—Led by John Cunniff with two goals and one assist, Boston College's hockey team defeated Loyola of Montreal 5-3 Saturday night. Both teams scored twice in the first period and Boston went ahead to stay in the second on another goal. In the finals, Boston College scored four more goals before Loyola tallied its third.

Flyers Unbeaten In Nine

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's more than just competition for points between second-place Niagara Falls Flyers and fifth-place Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Both teams have been on winning streaks and appear to be making a race of it. Sunday, the Flyers defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-3 in St. Catharines while Montreal defeated Toronto Marlboros 8-5 in Montreal. The Flyers now have gone nine games without a defeat compared with Montreal's seven.

This secondary action could affect the league standings as the Flyers are only two points behind league-leading Toronto and could have a first-place title if they defeat fourth-place Oshawa Generals Tuesday. Kitchener is at St. Catharines in the only other Tuesday game.

In other action Sunday, Oshawa defeated third-place Peterborough Peter 5-4 and Kitchener Rangers downed Hamilton Red Wings 7-3 in Kitchener. Saturday, Hamilton defeated Kitchener 5-3.

In the Flyers' game, Ted Derbrody, Jean Pronovost, Derek Sanderson and Brian Bradley each scored to give Niagara Falls the necessary edge. St. Catharines got two goals by Ken Hodge and one from Brian McDonald.

SCORE TWO EACH

In Montreal, Lucien Grenier and Jacques Lemaire scored two goals each for Montreal-Christian Section. Rene Drouhet, Larry Pleau and Norm Ferguson scored one each. Toronto's goals came from Ray Winterstein, with two, and Mike Corrigan.

Oshawa's scorers were Ron Buchanan, Bill Little, Billy White, Chris Roberts and Bill Hannemann. Jim Paiement scored three goals for Peterborough and Drake Jopling one.

In Sunday's game, Kitchener's goals came from Bill Hway, who scored three. Bob Jones, Bruce Meier, Tom Miller and Bob Howard. Fred Speck and Bart Crashley scored the Hamilton goals.

In Hamilton's win Saturday, captain Jim Peters and Don Gelsebrecht scored two goals each. Peter Mahovlich, Gary Doak, Crashley and Pete Vervegaert scored the others.

The Kitchener-goals were scored by Bob Beechey, Jones, Hway, Tommy Miller and Jack McCreary.

CHILDREN KILLED

NAVARA, Italy (AP) — The five children of a British atomic- physicist died, Sunday night in a fire that swept a wooden alpine cottage, police said today. They said Dr. Clement Grenell, 30, and his wife Rosemary, 32, were away dining with friends when flames engulfed their ski vacation cottage in a remote valley 67 miles north of Novara. The children ranged in age from three to nine.

1,000 Watch Minor Games In Trenton

TRENTON (Special) — The largest crowd of the season for the Sunday night double-header, over 1,000, watched visiting teams score wins over Trenton midgets and juveniles last night.

Gananoque midgets downed Trenton Lions midgets by a narrow 3-2 score.

The strong Toronto Marlboro Major "A" midgets whipped the Trenton Legion juveniles 10-6.

In the first tilt, Gananoque and the Lions were tied 1-1 and 2-2 by periods before the visitors took the edge.

O'Donnell and Shine scored two goals apiece for Gananoque. MacDonald fired a pair and Dixon one for the Trenton midgets.

The Marlies got good goaltending in the wide open nightcap and held 5-0 and 6-2 leads by periods. The winners also picked up 10 of the game's 13 minor penalties but it failed to stem their victory tide.

Sloane paced the Toronto scorers with three goals. Hughes and Lewis each scored twice, Moore, Hinton and Hawke once.

Al Ferguson potted three Trenton goals while Andy Teeple, Turner and Poschman got the others.

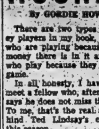
New Year's Day Parade Done in Color by Networks



By CYNTHIA LOWEY

By GORDIE HOWE

There are two types of hockey players in my book, the ones who are playing because of the money there is in it and those who play because they love the game.

In all honesty, I have yet to meet a fellow who, after retiring says he does not miss the game. To me, that's the real story behind Ted Lindsay's comeback this season.

It was my good fortune to play with Ted for seven years before he was traded to Chicago. He's the highest scoring left winger in hockey history. We just seemed to jell, knew where one another were, at all times.

I couldn't understand it when he did retire; I figured it must have been the pressure of his growing business, because in ways thought he had the legs He's proving that now.

The thing that was lacking at first and was most noticeable was his timing with the lumber, his shooting, and his ability to control pucks thrown at him.

When I was playing with him regularly, I could throw it about waist high and in behind him. He'd get a stick on it and have control in about three strides.

Actually, instead of hanging up the blades, he played in the old interlocks series they had in Windsor. Boys at the stations picked up a team. They had a few others with them such as Glenn Johnson, five-time Michigan amateur golf champion, who was a halfback for Michigan State University.

They'd rent the ice at the Windsor Arena for an hour and a half, put on a little scrimmage. This helped keep Lindsay in condition.

As far as his weight is concerned, I don't think he's varied more than a pound or two. He's always been able to hold his weight.

He's always been a man who'd get up in the morning and do a few pushups or calisthenics to keep limself in trim. His shots are getting harder and he's potting the puck in the net off the pipes in practice. That's a good sign.

Americans Take Pair From Bears

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Americans have given Quebec Aces to thank for the best record in the American Hockey League this season.

The Aces, who lead the league', eastern division, got off to a fast start and have been undefeated in nine games ever since.

But the Americans, who lead the western division, have been content to leave the publicity and the pressure that goes with it to the Quebec club.

Now, with the season approximately half gone, Rochester has compiled 50 points in 36 games—one more point than Quebec in the same number of games.

The Americans took over the points lead during the weekend, defeating second-place Hershey Bears of the eastern division 4-3 Saturday and 6-3 Sunday.

SHUT, OUT HORNETS

In other games Saturday, Quebec shut out Pittsburgh Hornets 2-0, Buffalo Bisons walloped Cleveland Barons 6-2 and Providence Reds tied Springfield Indians 3-3 in overtime.

Sunday, Baltimore Clippers crushed Quebec 9-1, Buffalo trounced Cleveland 9-4, and Pittsburgh shut out Providence 3-0.

NEW YORK (AP)—That time old television tradition, the assorted New Year's Day parades had some special significance this year. All three networks broadcast the spectacles in color.

In past years, NBC alone gave us a chance to see the Tournament of Roses floats in their colorful glory. The ability to color by the other two networks can only mean there now are enough color sets in homes to make a difference in the Nielsen ratings.

Actually, commenting on and describing a parade which the viewers are watching must be one of the most challenging jobs in the TV world. Betty White, who has been on NBC's coverage team for several years, manages to do the most lively, amusing job and seems to have a secret source of information.

On Broadway Tonight, the CBS summer replacement variety show that made it back as a winter - season program, had its premiere Friday night. It was a more elaborate program than the summer edition but it seemed to saw during the hot weather months.

But from Eydie Gorme to less well - known performers, it was a fast - moving well - produced hour. The emphasis seemed from the same problem. It encouraged last summer—those awkward periods when Miss Gorme, the host, engages in some dreary chit - chat designed to introduce the next act.

The first edition of The Entertainers in its new Saturday night spot on CBS showed signs of living up to its title. Anyway, it seems to be picking up steam. Gene Kelly's selection of Peter Gennaro brought some attractive dancing. Now, if they can just get over the addiction to improving the comedy sketches it will be a fine Saturday evening diversion.

At the Belle

2 Action-Adventure Films,
"Guns At Batasi" and
"The Earth Dies Screaming".

Fans' of motion pictures that feature plenty of outdoor action and suspense will be pleased to learn that two big ones from 20th Century-Fox, "Guns At Batasi" and "The Earth Dies Screaming" will open at the Belle Theatre, Belleville, former is set in the old Southwest, and the latter in contemporary, newly independent African nation.

"Guns at Batasi" stars Richard Attenborough, Jean Seberg and Jeremy Kemp. Attenborough plays a tough regimental sergeant major with Hawkins as his commanding officer, and together they must cope with a violent political revolution that suddenly erupts in the African nation where they are stationed. Within a 24 hour period, they act as intermediaries between both warring factions, and although they are ordered to stay out of the fighting, inevitably they are drawn in as participants.

Richard Attenborough, long a top British star, recently attained popularity in America through his starring role in "The Great Escape". "Guns at Batasi" should firmly establish his position as a top star here, as "Ben Hur", "The Bridge on the River Kwai" and "Lawrence of Arabia" have done for his countryman, Jack Hawkins.

Dame Flora Robson is an outstanding British actress last seen in "55 Days at Peking" and she has had starring roles in many stage productions as well as numerous films.

Ten Million Dollar Movie May Be Made in Two Parts

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Filming will start on Washington's birthday for what may be the biggest project of 1965, the $10,000,000 movie Hawaii.

The site of initial shooting: 130 miles above the Arctic Circle off Bodo, Norway. If that seems like a strange place to film a film about the history of Hawaii, director George Roy Hill explains:

"We'll do the scenes there of the missionaries sailing through the Straits of Magellan en route from New England to the islands. The geography is very similar off Norway, and we will be near towns where the crew can headquarter. That wouldn't be possible at the straits."

Director Hill (The World of Henry Orient) and producer Walter Mirisch (West Side Story) discussed their project at Mirisch Bros. headquarters. The filming will run about 9½ years after the James Michener novel was purchased.

Why so long a wait?

HAD BAD START

"We had an unfortunate start," explained Mirisch. "Fred Zinnemann worked on the picture for a long time, and he came to the conclusion that the story should be told in two pictures. We decided that wasn't feasible. The new idea of two pictures being made and shown in tandem wasn't a commercial venture."

Zinnemann left the project and Hill was enlisted. Not the weighty Michener novel, but still end up as two films.

"We'll take the story from prehistoric times up to about 1862," Hill explained. "That will include the Polynesian period, the story of the missionaries, some of the Chinese and a little of the Japanese.

"If the picture is well received, the rest of the novel might be put into another film. We would jump to a whole new generation in the story."

The film makers said the Norwegian shooting would include one of the principal cast members—Julie Andrews in the first to be signed. The cast will begin work at a New England location which is being selected. The company would then report to Hollywood for New England interior scenes.

Most of the movie will be shot in Hawaii. The site will be an old army base at Makua, on Oahu.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

FOR JANUARY 5

Aries (Mar. 21 - Apr. 19) — Fine time to break from tradition. Make your own way. Throw out unnecessary concern. Replace it with confidence. Others will respond, come to aid. Also to prove friendship.

Taurus (Apr. 20 - May 20) — Suppress desire to expand upon achievements. Leave well enough alone. Accepted trend to be envious today. Utilize innate ability to say right thing. Use common sense.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20) — Key is being perceptive. Developments occur "under cover." Be aware. Expand activities. Realize you are going in right direction. Don't be discouraged by "minor character."

Cancer (June 21 - July 22) — Friends tend to make demands. You must keep eye on budget. Be generous—but not foolish. Attend to details. Stress practical approach. Then others appreciate what they receive.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22) — Avoid attempting to "press" issues. Maintain relaxed attitude. Important people now beginning to observe. If you are tense, you could defeat basic purpose. Think it over!

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22) — Key is being tactful. Exercise restraint. Family members appear excitable. Stay out of disputes. Fine for travel plans. Look to future. Unexpected communications due.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22) — Favorable lunar aspect coincides with increased romantic opportunities. Creative forces surge. You are better able to express beliefs. You can gain attention, admiration.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21) — Arguments concerning "who owns what" could prove fruitless. Avoid trivial disputes by careful judgment. Quiet dignity wins the day. Remember past lessons. Then you will take proper steps.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)—Indirect method will gain objective. Be subtle — don't attempt to force issues. Realize others may be extremely sensitive. Rest and probe. Make no direct statements.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) —Work alone. You can gain most through individual action. Have faith in your own plans, convictions, ideas. Others may mean well—but they don't possess answers.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) —Cycles moves up. Obtain hint from today's Capricorn message. Stress self-reliance. Put forth original ideas. Be careful of personal appearance. Others wait to be impressed.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20)—Favor you granted recently due to pay off. Realize advantage. Move ahead. Throw off concern. Many in your cheering section. Key to success is versatility.

If Today Is Your Birthday— you are creative, able to think on your feet. Greater recognition due this year.

General Tendencies — Cycle remains high for Aquarius. Special word to Virgo. If you are receptive, you could gain valuable clue.

Kirkland Lake Fire Takes Lives Of Six Children

Oldest Girl, 14, Leaps Safely From Window

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP. — A 14-year-old girl leaped through a window to safety but six other children died early Tuesday when fire destroyed a two-storey frame house at Tarzwell, 14 miles south of here.

The six victims were all children of Mrs. Margaret Wilson, who was in Kirkland Lake at the time with two other children. The father has not lived with the family for some time.

Dead are David, 11, Robert, 10, John, 9, Ronald, 6, April 2, and one-year-old Linda.

Theresa Wilson, the oldest of the seven children, said she was babysitting and had fallen asleep clad in slacks and a sweater. She awoke about 12:30 a.m. to find the house filled with smoke.

The girl said she aroused the younger children before leaping through the window into about two feet of snow and calling to the others to pass the one-year-old baby to her.

But after several tries times without getting an answer, she ran one-quarter mile through the snow without shoes to arouse a neighbor.

ALERT POLICE

The neighbor, Mrs. Mary Middleton, treated cuts on the girl's legs and feet while her husband, Albert, alerted the provincial police.

Mr. Middleton rushed to the scene to find the fire section engulfed in flames. He was unable to get inside.

Police arrived a short time later but the blaze was out of control. Fire trucks from Kirkland Lake were recalled when the building collapsed before firemen could start fighting the blaze.

Cause of the fire has not been established.

PLAQUES ERECTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Seven historical plaques have been erected along the Ottawa River within the national capital area as part of a country-wide program to indicate the westward route of the first explorers, missionaries and fur traders, it was announced Monday. The plaques, in French and English, mark the river as the oldest trans - Canada throughout its length, the aboriginal signs indicate the old canoe route where it runs near the Trans-Canada Highway. Manitoba will carry out a similar program next spring, and Quebec, Saskatchewan and Alberta have been asked to take part.

Johnson Would Accept Any Bid To Visit Russia

Address Outlines Many Goals on Home Front

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Russia's new leaders have been invited to visit the United States in a casually-phrased but careful initiative by President Johnson.

The invitation, made public Monday night in the traditional state-of-the-union address, was made known to Moscow earlier in the day, officials said.

And Johnson is prepared to consider favorably an invitation to make a trip to the Soviet Union, leading to a new era of U.S.-Soviet relations.

Former premier Nikita Khrushchev came to the United States in 1959 but no American president ever has visited Russia. The U-2 incident in 1960 abruptly ended former president Eisenhower's plans to pay a reciprocal visit.

But the bulk of the Johnson message to the newly-convened 89th Congress and the country was a formidable domestic program for a great American society, marked by little of the usual in state-of-the-union messages skimp on detail.

The state of the union is "free, restless, growing and full of hope," Johnson said in his 47-minute speech.

WORKLOAD FULL

He specified another $1,500,000,000 for federal aid to education, a substantial excise tax cut, plus fresh drives against poverty, crime, pollution, city blight and other ills. It appeared to stack up as a full workload for the next four years and then some.

Shortly before a cheering joint session received Johnson's message—delivered in person and carried by radio and television networks—Congress broke down some of its own ancient legislative barriers by revising rules that might have blocked the way.

The president, who won a landslide November victory and polled an unprecedented 43,000,000 vote, found colleagues with brighter-than-ever prospects that they will enact the great bulk of his program. Both the House of Representatives and the Senate are Democratic by lop-sided margins.

The legislators burst into applause 57 times in Johnson's 4,000 - word address. Democrats called it "inspiring" and "attainable." The usually-critical Republicans were stingy with applause; some of them called his proposals costly and Utopian.

His specific new proposals, Johnson said, will be detailed in special messages during the next six weeks.

A health message will come first, on Thursday. Then education, next Tuesday; immigration, two days later; space and foreign aid, before the inauguration Jan. 20.

Prefacing his domestic message with an international review Johnson said that "today, the state of the union depends in large measure on the state of the world."

By PETER ARNETT

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese government deployed more soldiers around Binh Gia today, and a counter-offensive against the Viet Cong appeared to be under way.

Sporadic sniper fire was reported during the night and a road convoy was hit with small arms fire, but casualties were light. The area 40 miles east of Saigon was quiet today.

Gen. William Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in Viet Nam, was expected to direct the U.S. side of the developing effort to counter the Viet Cong offensive in Binh Gia.

U.S. reconnaissance bombers crossed the battle areas repeatedly Monday, taking aerial photographs, possibly in preparation for a drive against Communist forces around the embattled Roman Catholic refugee village.

Viet Cong units made new attacks Sunday night and Monday, shattering a three-day lull in fighting around Binh Gia. Six Americans have been killed in the fighting around Binh Gia, and two others are missing and believed captured. Government casualties are believed to be in the neighborhood of 500.

Saigon, scene of student riots and demonstrations Monday, was calm today, although the main Buddhist secondary school of 5,000 students was on strike and more trouble was expected.

CAMPAIGN PLANNED?

There were indications that Buddhist students and other agitation groups would try to mount a co-ordinated campaign opposing the civilian government of Premier Tran Van Huong.

In Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon, 100 students passed the first night of a 48-hour anti-government fast, but widespread public support for the protest did not materialize.

Ring of Marijuana Users Discovered Among Airmen at New York SAC Base

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — A ring of alleged marijuana users at the massive U.S. Strategic Air Command installation here has been smashed by air force officials, the Plattsburgh Press-Republican reports.

The newspaper says that 178 airmen were caught in a predawn raid in September at the Plattsburgh Air Force Base.

The crackdown, the newspaper says, followed the arrest of an airman outside the base by civilian authorities. The airman, Lance Hunters, 24, of New York City, was convicted last week in Clinton County Court on a charge of possessing marijuana.

Of the 178 caught four months ago, the Press-Republican says, the air force has taken action against 40. The newspaper says it had learned that, of the 40, one airman has been acquitted and that one court martial resulted in a mistrial.

The commanding officer of the aerospace division at the base, Col. Richard Stewart, said: "Seven airmen have been discharged for using marijuana. Six of them were young and new to service life."

He said that the airmen came from "a large metropolitan area" and that several said they used the drug before joining the air force.

Plattsburgh, with a population of about 20,000, is in northern New York on the shores of Lake Champlain.

Malaysia Gets U.K. Troops

From AP-Reuters

SINGAPORE (CP) — Fifty more paratroopers arrived from England today as part of a British buildup amid fears of escalation of the undeclared war between Indonesia and Malaysia.

Britain has flown in 100 paratroopers and the remaining 400 men from the 2nd Parachute Battalion are due to be airlifted by Thursday. Another 300 men of a Gurkha battalion are coming by ship from Hong Kong, raising the total of British and other Commonwealth troops in Malaysia alone to more than 7,000.

The paratroopers are to move to the Malayan mainland for jungle training.

Britain's most modern aircraft carrier, Eagle, was expected in Malaysian waters in a few days and four minesweepers and two

T. S. Eliot, Noted Poet, Dies At 76

LONDON (CP)—Private funeral services are planned for T. S. Eliot, one of the 20th Century's greatest poets.

Eliot, a native of the United States and a British subject since 1927, died at his home in London Monday night. He was 76.

The cause of death was not announced. His health had recently showed signs of deterioration and two years ago he was a patient in a London hospital that specializes in respiratory ailments.

A tall, somber man, careful and precise in both speech and dress, Thomas Stearns Eliot was in the forefront of English literature. It has been said he created the English poetic style of the 20th Century.

He was the second major British poet to die within a month. The other was Dame Edith Sitwell (Dec. 9).

The voice of the "lost generation" between the world wars, Eliot revolutionized poetry and also was a noted critic and successful playwright. He won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1948.

GIVEN ORDER OF MERIT

The same year he was awarded the Order of Merit, one of Britain's highest honors. Last year he received the U.S. Medal of Freedom, highest civil honor the president can bestow.

Eliot's best known poem was The Waste Land, published in 1922. Other major poems included The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock (1917), The Hollow Men (1925), Ash Wednesday (1930) and Four Quartets.

His most successful plays were Murder in the Cathedral, in 1935, and The Cocktail Party, in 1950.

B.C. Govt. Offers Prisoners To Aid Municipal Crews

VANCOUVER (CP)—The services of prisoners were offered Monday night to hard-pressed municipal crews in British Columbia's snow - stifled lower mainland.

The attorney - general's department announced about 100 prisoners at nearby Haney Correctional Institute would be made available for emergency snow removal upon the request of municipalities gripped in their fourth week of heavy snowfalls and freezing temperatures.

Work parties would consist of prisoners from the minimum security institution accompanied by guards.

Reeve Alex Forst of West Vancouver, a municipality hardest under as much as 10 feet of snow, said:

"We haven't turned down the offer but our engineer says we can't use them without equipment—we would need 20 or 30 trucks to take the snow away—there's no place to shovel it."

Provincial officials said armed forces personnel had also been placed on a 24-hour alert to swing into action should municipalities be unable to cope with mounting snow.

In the neighboring municipalities of North and West Vancouver, fearing serious flooding in the event of a sudden thaw, were considering the army help to clear drainage systems and roadside ditches.

In West Vancouver, nearly 7,000 school pupils were given a three-day break from classes and near - blizzard conditions today forced closure of schools in the Chilliwack and Agassiz areas of the Fraser Valley about 75 miles east of here. More than 8,000 students were affected. The schools were to remain closed today.

On Vancouver Island, snow-clogged roads Monday forced closure of all but one school in the Ucluelet-Tofino School District, on the northwest part of the Island, and even the relatively snow-free provincial capital of Victoria is expected to receive some snow today with temperatures expected to range from 25 to 33 for the next two days.

No respite for the province was indicated in the latest weather forecasts.

Liberals Prepare For Vote

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Top organizational brains of the Liberal party were meeting here today to put finishing touches on the party's plans for the next federal election campaign.

Informants said Monday the meeting doesn't mean that Prime Minister Pearson is on the verge of dissolving Parliament in an effort to win a majority of seats for his embattled, minority administration.

But it does mean the party organizers are assuring that 1965 is a sure-bet election year. They want to be ready to swing into action on a moment's notice.

The senior campaign officers from the provinces and from Liberal headquarters will discuss establishment of a speaker's bureau and the party's campaign advertising and fi-nancing plans.

Also up for discussion will be campaign touring by the prime minister, now on holiday in Florida.

PEARSON'S DECISION

Barring a defeat in the Commons on a question of confidence in the government, the decision on the election date is Mr. Pearson's.

Parliament resumes Feb. 16 amid some signs that the government will be unable to count so heavily on voting support on important matters from the nine Social Credit MPs.

Social Credit Leader Thompson has issued a clean-house-or-else ultimatum which Mr. Pearson rejected at a press conference last Thursday before leaving for his Florida holiday.

Mr. Thompson's party has been the government's voting mainstay on a number of occasions. However, if the support is withdrawn, the Liberals expect the 13-member Rallement des Creditistes from Quebec's 4,000 - word address. Democrats called it "inspiring" and "attainable." The usually-critical Republicans were stingy with applause; some of them called his proposals costly and Utopian.

His specific new proposals, Johnson said, will be detailed in special messages during the next six weeks.

A health message will come first, on Thursday. Then education, next Tuesday; immigration, two days later; space and foreign aid, before the inauguration Jan. 20.

Prefacing his domestic message with an international review Johnson said that "today, the state of the union depends in large measure on the state of the world."

UN Has No Rules or Precedents To Cover Resignation of Nation

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Indonesia's announced decision to quit the United Nations has posed a problem not covered by UN rules or precedent. It was a different story with the old League of Nations, which lost 17 members in its brief life.

The league covenant permitted members to withdraw after two years' notice. The UN charter makes no such provision; there is no machinery to deal with such a situation although it least three nations besides Indonesia have threatened to quit in recent years.

UN officials say nothing can be done until President Sukarno's government writes its formal notice in writing. Opinions vary on what will happen after that.

A member of the UN legal committee expressed the opinion that it would be impossible for any member to actually quit the UN.

"The Indonesians can walk out," he said, "but if at any time they decide to walk back, there would be no need to apply for admission. Their seat would still be here."

A high official in the secretariat expressed the opinion that oral notice of withdrawal was enough and that Indonesia ceased to be a member when its chief delegate, L. N. Palar, got in touch with assembly President Alex Quaison-Sackey and Secretary - General U Thant's office.

There is a third theory that a country might insist his country is no longer part of the world organization but maintain an observer here to keep a foot in the door.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cooler air is expected to cover the province by Wednesday morning. While skies will be variable in the cooler air Wednesday it should be a pleasant day.

Beaten Body of Girl of 7 Found in Store's Toy Dept.

TORONTO (CP)—The beaten body of seven-year-old Deborah Johnson of Toronto was found early today in the basement toy department of a hardware store almost directly beneath her home about seven hours after she was reported missing.

Coroner Dr. Hans Sepp said the girl had been indecently assaulted and then beaten and kicked to death.

A man surrendered himself to police early today with two lawyers, David Humphrey and Edward Merzec. No charges were laid immediately.

Deborah was one of four children of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Johnson. She had been left in the care of her 20-year-old uncle, David Prain, while her parents were out looking for a new place to live.

More than 20 policemen were searching for the girl when her body was found. An autopsy showed the girl's skull had been fractured and her liver lacerated.

Shortly after the parents missed Deborah, a description was broadcast at 9:15 p.m.

Rival Nigerians Agree on Solution of Crisis

From AP-Reuters

LAGOS (CP)—Nigeria's president and prime minister said Monday night that they have settled the six - day constitutional crisis over last week's controversial election that threatened to break up the Nigerian Federation.

President Nnamdi Azikiwe asked Prime Minister Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa to form a "broadly based national government" on the basis of last Wednesday's balloting, which opposition parties boycotted after Balewa refused to postpone of the election, the first since Nigeria gained its independence from Britain in 1960.

Azikiwe, an easterner and former leader of the largest party in the opposition United Progressive Grand Alliance, said elections would be held "as soon as possible" in areas where no balloting took place because of the boycott. This included parts of eastern and parts of midwestern Nigeria.

The balloting also will be re-examined in districts where such a small number voted as to make "a mockery" of the election, the president said.

In constituencies where the opposition charged that nomination irregularities took place, the matter will be taken to court, Azikiwe said.

The UPGA, which draws most of its strength from Nigeria's eastern and midwestern regions, charged that its candidates were not allowed to register their candidacies in the Moslem north, the nation's most populous area. The victories there and in western Nigeria of the northern-based Nigerian National Alliance, led by Balewa, gave it a majority in the 312-seat House of Representatives.

Council Directs Solicitor To Seek Private Bill to Cut Number of Aldermen to 10

City fathers are losing no time in seeking to carry out the wishes of the Belleville electorate for a reduction of the council from 14 to 10 aldermen.

Yesterday at an adjourned session of the morning's inaugural meeting, council directed the city solicitor to make application to the Ontario Legislature for a private bill authorizing reduction of council from 14 to 10 aldermen, effective January 1, 1965, and also pointing up that the whole council be elected in December 1965 for 1966 and 1967. Elections would be held every two years thereafter.

This, in effect, means that the seven aldermen elected early in December, 1964, for a two-year term will actually serve only one year.

Mayor Ellis introduced the recommendation at the morning session but when councillors asked for a little more time on the matter was laid over until the afternoon.

It was the method of implementing the council reduction, rather than the reduction itself which drew criticism from two or three aldermen.

JOSS OBJECTS

Alderman Don Joss led off the debate charging that Mayor Ellis was using the annual election cost of roughly $6,000 as a means of "persuasion" the matter through council.

He said the move was changing the city's constitution and should be given every consideration. He asked that all possible methods of introducing the council reduction be explored.

Both City Manager J. R. Reynolds and City Solicitor E. Ross Porter were asked their views on the matter but told council it was a matter for council to decide.

Mr. Porter said however, the method suggested by the Mayor was the simplest, although not necessarily the best.

Alderman Doug Boyle stressed that the electors had spoken emphatically in favor of council reduction and it only stood to reason that it should be brought into effect as soon as possible. Any method other than that suggested by the Mayor was complicated, he said.

Alderman Thomas Lailey agreed the Mayor's method was the simplest but not the fairest, especially for those aldermen being asked to give up one year of their two year term.

SUGGESTS ALTERNATIVE

He suggested an alternative proposal for an election next December for three Aldermen and a mayor for one year terms.

Alderman Jack Allin also felt that council members elected in December for a two year term should be required to serve out their full terms.

He was opposed to a private bill legislating for the people of Belleville and said a better way would be to ask the people if this was the way they would council reduction if implemented.

Mayor Ellis objected to the implication that he was "holding a gun" to council's head in order to get his recommendation approved.

He agreed that Alderman Lailey's suggestion was possible but did not feel it would get past the private bills committee.

VOTE NOT NECESSARY

Replying to Alderman Allin, the mayor did not feel that another vote of the people on the matter of council reduction was necessary.

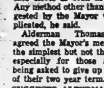
Mayor Ellis said-he was prepared to take full responsibility.

Two of the aldermen-elect, Kenneth Sodon and Jack Deacon said they were prepared to give up one year of their two-year elected term in order to get the people's wishes for a reduction in council carried out.

"All 12 of us are concerned with saving the taxpayers' dollar," added Ald. Sodon. "It is only a question of which year we will not have an election."

Alderman Deacon reported that the number of implementation of the reduced council had been passed before the last election.

Following the vote approving the application for a private bill, Mayor Ellis expressed his appreciation to Aldermen Sodon and Deacon for their co-operation, while congratulations to the same two men were extended by Ald. Don Williams.



Aldermen Are Invited to Visit Museum

An invitation for members of Belleville City Council as well as citizens at large to visit the Hastings County Museum to view the Couldery collection of antiques, was extended yesterday by Alderman Doug Boyle.

Ald. Boyle said he had recently spent a very satisfying afternoon at the museum viewing the Couldery Collection of period furniture, pottery and other items, and highly recommended it to other citizens.

At the same time Ald. Boyle reminded councillors to be on the lookout for another location for the museum as the former county registry office quarters now being used by the museum was required by the county.

Mayor Tells Rotary Club Dundas St. Bridge Necessity

Mayor Jack Ellis told the Rotary Club Monday that this year he intends to strongly urge commencement of the improvements suggested in the 1956-60 traffic survey.

Dea is completion of the 401 Highway, the opening of major shopping districts in east and west Belleville, and relocation of employment, some citizens, he said, now feel the Dundas Street bridge should be constructed before the span scheduled to cross the Moira River at Bridge Street.

South and city traffic, which affects the Dundas Street area, is expected to number 1,320 cars in 1980 at the peak hour compared to 350 in 1960.

Eventually the Dundas Street would become a four-lane highway reaching from the edge of Trenton to a point beyond Point Anne Lane, and continue to serve as Highway No. 2 through the city.

A major problem in constructing the Dundas Street project is the steep grade at the Dundas Street and Bay Bridge intersection.

Signals to stop cars at the foot of the hill would present a traffic problem in winter, and since Dundas Street would be a major east-west artery would like to see a by-pass to the heavy flow of traffic.

To avoid this, consulting engineers Dymas and Smith propose relocating 1,200 feet of Bay Bridge Road and placing a fly-over type bridge above the CPR tracks to intersect Dundas Street a few feet east of Hoidden Street.

Much of the traffic from the south could then, it is expected, easily turn westerly without going up the steep hill, and proceed towards Trenton or northwest Belleville, an area which the planning director agrees will be the most heavily populated portion of the city.

The inadequacy of Front and Pinnacle Streets to carry increased traffic coming from or going to the central business area, makes the Church Street project necessary.

By 1980 it is estimated 3,000 cars would use the new Church Street road during the day's peak hour.

Council has accepted the Dumas and Smith proposal to have Church Street carry northbound traffic and Pinnacle to carry southbound traffic, and connect the north ends of these two streets into a V-shaped bridge over the Moira River.

The bottom of the V would be connected to Cameron Street which would be reconstructed as a four-lane roadway through to North Front.

Larger Auditorium for City Is Required Says Chamber

Is the city of Belleville in need of a auditorium larger than that at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School which has provided a good meeting place in the city for many years?

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce thinks a larger auditorium is required and feels that with the proposed construction of a fourth Secondary school in Belleville, this would be the place to have it provided.

Yesterday a letter from J. C. Hoskins, president of the Chamber of Commerce, was read at city council asking that the matter of a larger auditorium be given serious consideration.

The letter pointed out that a school auditorium not only served the school in which it is situated, but also makes a valuable contribution to the cultural life of the community by providing facilities for the presentation of many forms of live entertainment.

PLAN FOR 900 SEATS

It has been suggested that public buildings should be designed to derive maximum use from them.

Present plans for the proposed new high school in West Belleville call for an auditorium with seating capacity for approximately 800 persons and this the board feels is adequate for the school. Accordingly departmental construction grants could not be expected on an auditorium larger than was necessary in the school.

If a larger auditorium was to be provided in the school it would be the responsibility of the municipality (in this case the city) to provide the additional seating necessary.

Members of the Bay of Quinte High School Board have already met with representatives of the city of the auditorium for the proposed school, but plans are still in the preliminary stage and changes would still be possible.

Underground Spring Floods New Public School Cellar

They have water problems in the basement of the new Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public School in West Belleville.

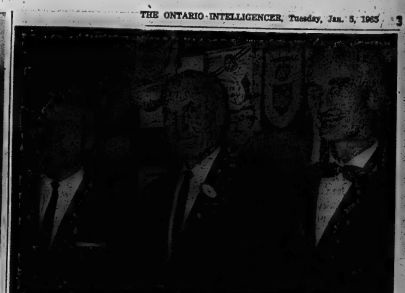
It's the matter of a spring which allows water to get into the school boiler room.

The spring was first discovered during the school construction phase during the dry summer and provisions were made for handling the then comparatively minor flow.

But totally unexpected was the fact that the spring flow is tremendously increased during a prolonged rainy spell with result that the boiler room is deluged and provisions made for getting rid of the spring flow are completely inadequate.

During the mild spell during the Christmas holidays as much as 5,000 gallons of water was pouring into the basement and up to five electric pumps were operated continuously to get rid of the water.

When the spring was discovered during construction a pit was provided to catch the flow and the water was expected to be handled by one sump pump.



But with as much as 5,000 gallons per hour coming in, the water quickly overflowed the pit and the extra pumps were needed to keep the water level below the boiler.

What to do about the matter is now a problem for the school board.

The water cannot be sealed out of the basement because the tremendous pressure exerted would heave concrete floors.

During a dry period the spring flow could be pumped into the sanitary sewer but this would be impossible during a prolonged wet period as the sanitary sewer would be flooded.

"We'll have to do something outside to solve the problem," stated schools superintendent L. A. Kelly.

Mr. Robert Temple, M.P., for South Hastings, shown above with Thomas Hetherington, Rotary President, and James MacDonald, Trenton's mayor, was guest speaker at the Monday meeting of the Trenton Rotary Club.

UN Thrown Into Tailspin By Indonesian Withdrawal

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United Nations, taking its holiday breather in one of its most bizarre assembly sessions, has been thrown into a tailspin by Indonesia's decision to pull out of the world body.

Diplomats hardly know whether to laugh or swear. Privately, some have done both.

"At first I thought it was just Sukarno's idea of a bad new year's joke," one commented. "But there doesn't seem to be much doubt now that he means business."

President Sukarno, 63-year-old dictator of 100,000,000 underfed Indonesians, has pulled surprises before, but never like this one.

There was little public reaction as UN delegations absorbed the shock Monday. But the prevailing attitude was one of puzzlement over what, exactly, Sukarno is up to and how his plans will affect the future of the UN and of Southeast Asia.

PLANNING ATTACK

Specifically, there was fear Indonesia was quitting the UN to clear the decks for an attack against neighboring Malaysia.

There was also rumor and speculation that Sukarno might be planning some sort of new international grouping among the non-aligned countries. But first reaction from such non-aligned leaders as Yugoslavia and Egypt indicated they have no wish to go into such a grouping, at least not under Sukarno's leadership.

Plans of this sort would fit with the past pattern of Sukarno's policies, which have pointed to a desire to embellish the country's image abroad, and to extend its sphere of influence throughout Southeast Asia.

Critics say he has followed this path at the expense of economic and social welfare at home—even to draw attention away from the domestic plight.

Certainly there has been an unreal quality about some of the things the regime has done with social ills. One Indonesian official suggested recently that the hunger problem and the rodent problem could be dealt with together if the populace would only develop a taste for rates.

The latest Sukarno manoeuvre seems to fall into the same pattern, particularly if it means the country must go without the UN.

Since joining in 1950, Indonesia has received UN aid worth $15, $20, or $30,000,000, and many more projects are on the books.

The UN, in fact, was instrumental in setting up the country 15 years ago when it put pressure on the Dutch colonial rulers to release Sukarno from prison and negotiate independence.

And two years ago the UN considered—for many to have furthered Indonesia's claims by supervising the Indonesian takeover of West Irian (West New Guinea) from Dutch control.

Despite all this, Indonesia now accuses the UN of becoming a tool of the U.S. and British, apparently because it has accepted the Malaysian Federation as a bonafide country despite its defence links with Britain.

Sukarno calls Malaysia a neo-colonialist plot to maintain British influence in the area and has threatened to withdrawal from the UN to Malaysia's election to the Security Council. But he has stirred no indication whether Indonesia will come back to the UN when Malaysia's two-year term ends.

Western diplomats say Sukarno's use of the neo-colonialist charge is a familiar one—it strikes sympathetic cords in the Afro-Asian bloc, has raised little opposition from the rest of Malaysia. Some even say they doubt that the Indonesian delegation themselves really believe it, although they faithfully echo Sukarno's policy line.

Trade Four Players

Alouettes Get Faloney

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Alouettes announced today they have obtained Bernie Faloney for an unconditional five-for-three deal with Hamilton Tiger-Cats designed to fill the hole at quarterback left gaping since the departure of Sam Etcheverry in 1960.

The deal, which Alouette owner Ted Workman said is binding even if the players involved don't want to report, sends defensive end Billy Ray Locklin, guard Dick Wallace and defensive halfbacks Billy Wayte and Ted Page and retired Don Clark to the Tiger-Cats.

Besides Faloney, Hamilton gives up defensive halfbacks Ralph Goldston and Jackie Simpson.

Workman said:

"If one or all of the players balk at the trade, that's the tough luck of the club involved."

His statement recalled the celebrated fiasco in 1960 when Montreal Alouettes and Tiger-Cats tried to make a trade-package involving Faloney — that fell through when Etcheverry refused to report to the Ticats.

Since then, the Alouettes have been without adequate quarterback backing and have tried at various times to get Faloney, now 32.

The Bay of Quinte Curling Club rink skipped by Mac Thompson of Dr. McCorquodale, Ron Benn and Bill Lewis of the RCAF, Trenton, won the first game in the Pittings trophy at the Oshawa bonspiel on Monday evening. They defeated Harvey Acton of Uxbridge 5-4 in an extra end. The Quinte rink was leading 4-3 at the end of the ninth end but Acton scored a pair on the tenth which set the stage for the extra end. With the locals having the last rock the skip drew "home" for the winning shot on the game three ends were blanked. Every member of the rink curled well and they are probably on their way to a win streak and a trophy.

This afternoon the rink plays Clare Peacock of Oshawa in the second round.

State of the Union Message Highlights

WASHINGTON (AP)—Textual highlights of President Johnson's State of the Union message Monday night:

We are entering the third century of the pursuit of American union.

But the unity we seek cannot realize its full promise in isolation. For today, the state of the union depends, in large measure, upon the state of the world. . . .

Yet it is not merely our concern, but the concern of all free men in the world, and should not, assume it is the task of Americans alone to settle all the conflicts of nature and troubled world. . . .

Let the foes of freedom take no comfort from this. For in concert with other nations, we shall help men defend their freedom. . . .

SEEK UNDERSTANDING

With the Soviet Union we seek peaceful understandings that can lessen the danger to freedom.

I hope the new Soviet leaders can visit America so they can learn about this country first hand. . . .

In Asia, communism wears the mask of aggressive face. We see that in Viet Nam. Why are we there? We are there, first, because a friendly nation has asked us for help against Communist aggression. Two years ago we pledged our help. Three presidents have supported that pledge. We will not break it. . . .

With the free republics of Latin America I have always felt—and my country has always felt—special ties of interest and affection. It will be the purpose of my administration to strengthen these ties. . . .

In the Atlantic community, we continue to pursue our goal of 20 years—a Europe growing in strength, unity and co-operation with America.

NEW NATIONS WELCOMED

In Africa and Asia we are witnessing the turbulent unfolding of new nations and continents. We welcome them to the society of nations.

I propose we begin a program in education to ensure every American child the full-est development of his mind and skills.

I propose we begin a massive attack on crippling and killing diseases.

I propose we increase the beauty of America and end the poisoning of our rivers and the air we breathe.

I propose we carry out a new program to develop regions of our country now suffering from distress and depression.

TO CONTROL CRIME

I propose we make new efforts in control and prevent crime and delinquency. . . .

I propose we eliminate every remaining obstacle to the right and opportunity to vote.

I propose we make an all-out campaign against waste and inefficiency.

To those in other lands seeking the promise of America, through an immigration law based on the work a man can do and not where he was born or how he spells his name. . . .

Our country owes much to the efficiency of our farmers. We must continue to assure them the opportunity to earn a fair reward.

Chicago Gets First Exposure To Sonic Booms

CHICAGO (AP) — Burglar alarms went off, dishes shattered and at least one dog went berserk.

Aside from that, Chicago escaped unscathed Monday from its first exposure to sonic booms from U.S. bombers.

The sound of a flight of Strategic Air Command B-58 Hustlers on a simulated bombing run was "about equal to a lively cocktail party," said Joseph Fitzgerald, Mr., assistant city building commissioner. Fitzgerald rigged a noise meter in the window of a downtown building. He said it recorded a noise level of 101 decibels, slightly below the measurement that causes the human ear to start hurting.

Area residents reported that two booms which shook the south side were dull rumbles in The Loop—the city's centre—and were not heard at all in many suburbs.

The booms were the first of about 200 which Chicagoans can expect during the next three months as B-58 crews practise bombing targets in the area, which an air force spokesman says closely resembles an unnamed potential enemy target.

Each year the world population total increases by 65,000,000.

Member Predicts Red China Will Be Accepted in UN, Northrup F5 For the RCAF

TRENTON — Robert Temple, MP for Hastings South, speaking to the members of the Trenton Rotary Club and a number of invited guests, including former Hastings South MP, Lee Grills, at a dinner meeting in the Gilbert Hotel last night, ranged through a number of topics of interest and made a number of predictions . . . of equal interest.

Among the predictions was that within two years "the Red China would become a member of the United Nations and that within five years time, "unsocial" university education would be available in this country for those who wished it and could make a go of it.

"We cannot ignore Red China, a country of seven hundred million people," said Mr. Temple. "China now has a nuclear device and while she lacks the ability to deliver it at present, this will come . . . can we afford to ignore Red China?"

Mr. Temple went on to say that it was up to us, as Canadians, to try to "speak" with the Chinese. ("As long as we're talking, we won't be fighting,") but that a "settlement" with honor must be found, a settlement which would include the fate of Formosa.

"We can't leave the government of Formosa to go its own way and be taken over by Red China."

On the subject of Canada's upcoming Centennial, Mr. Temple went further ahead with his predictions and forecast that in 500 years Canada would still be the "vibrant, virile nation it is today."

"It's been said by commentators, politicians and the press that Canada's centennial year is in danger . . . in dire straits . . . but remember that in the 1880s it was "threatened" by some that Confederation wouldn't work, couldn't work and even that it shouldn't work."

WILL BE MADE IN CANADA

On the subject of defence, Mr. Temple pointed out the superiority of the Northrup F-5 for the RCAF over a supersonic Avro-Arrow built plane, recommended by some defence experts.

Mr. Temple said he wouldn't be surprised if quite soon the government announced the acquisition of the F-5 for the RCAF. He said this aircraft would be made and assembled in Canada and while slower than the supersonic aircraft, it has other features, such as the ability for low flying which meant it could not be readily distinguished by enemy radar from trees, brush, etc.

Touching on the situation in his own riding, Mr. Temple said the results of a government engineering survey of the Bay of Quinte should be announced soon and the recommendations of this survey would probably include the dredging of the bay at the mouth of the Trent.

Weed cutting in the bay was particularly heavy after the experience earlier in the day when a man who identified himself as a member of the American Nazi party slipped through guards and pranced onto the House floor wearing blackface makeup, a stovepipe hat and tights.

One burst of applause rang out when Johnson sounded an assurance that "in concert with other nations, we shall help men defend their freedom."

It echoed again and again as the 36th president said that while we are prepared to be good neighbors "we cannot be indifferent to attempts aimed to injure our interests, our citizens or our establishments abroad."

There was total silence when he expressed his hope for a visit from Soviet chieftains.

Wife, Daughters Hear President Give Message

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson delivered his State of the Union speech Monday night before a heavily-Democratic Congress which broke into applause the moment he stepped into the chamber.

Wearing a blue suit and television - blue shirt, Johnson marched half smiling down the House of Representatives aisle to address the joint session of the House and Senate.

Looking down on him from the gallery were his wife, and daughters Luci and Lynda. With them was the wife of the vice-president-elect, Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey.

This was the first night-time State-of-the-Union speech since Franklin D. Roosevelt's 1936 address.

Before it began, newly-elected Senator Robert F. Kennedy (Dem.-N.Y.) walked behind his brother Edward, the Democratic senator from Massachusetts, who moved slowly using a cane, still recuperating from air crash injuries.

A Lifetime of Revolution

Mao Tse-tung was 71 recently.

Soon he may retire as chairman of the Chinese Communist Party.

He is the architect of the Chinese communist revolution.

But what we may overlook is that revolution was stalking the land when Mao was in his teens. We think of the Chinese revolution as a young one and sometimes its excesses are excused for that reason. Young it is if we date it from Mao's seizure of power after the Second Great War, but it is not so certain this was the essential revolution.

The basic rejection of the old way of life in China may very well have been that which was led by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who toppled the Manchu Empire and turned China into a republic in 1911.

Much though the countries of the West abhor communism, it is a western creed. The big wrench with traditional Chinese life probably came long before Mao entered the revolutionary picture. If there had been no Sun Yat-sen, with his western ideals, could Mao ever have rallied the peasants of China against the return to the traditional system of warlords which, in the final analysis, was what the so-called westernized Chiang Kai-Shek represented?

Viewed in this light, the Chinese revolution has exceeded in duration almost every other major revolution known to history, stretching over a period of more than fifty years. If the new regime is not so firmly established in China as in Russia, it is only because in China there was a relapse, a period in which only lip service was paid to the ideals with their stress on things. The basic Chinese revolution was one of materialism, of an acceptance of the idea, inherent in all western countries, be they communist or democratic, that abundance is the key to the good life.

From the standpoint of China's history a revolution's revolution in that land would not consist merely of replacing the communists with a regime dedicated to the democratic ideals of the West but a spurning of the material benefits made possible by modern techniques and by science.

In India, such a development is conceivable, though highly unlikely. In today's China, largely due to Mao and his aides, it is unthinkable.

Whatever the political form of government, China's future, for better or for worse, appears certain to be dedicated to the battle to achieve the affluent society.

Loneliness

Sunday evening, a week ago, the CBC public affairs program "This Hour Has Seven Days" dealt with the problem of loneliness.

It dissected the plights of a man and a woman, the man the product of a broken home with a deep distrust of his fellowmen, the woman a divorcee whose child-rearing task was completed and who found herself without a purpose in life.

These cases are typical of the lot of many in today's society and for that reason it is becoming fashionable to picture loneliness as a modern problem.

In a superficial sense this may be true. In primitive times the individual's ties were with the tribe, rather than with a small, selected group of relatives or friends.

But loneliness, in its essential sense, is a condition to which man has been exposed since he first commenced to develop his intelligence above the level of the ordinary animal.

One can be lonely in a crowd.

And certainly acceptance in a family group is no protection against loneliness to those most susceptible to the pangs.

Most of those people who consider themselves to be lonely in today's society are missing nothing more precious than companionship, acceptance within a group.

But the truly lonely are those who look for understanding, and this may be as difficult to win in the married state as in the single.

Many great men and women have been lonely most of their lives, because intellects which could match their own were so scarce.

It may even be true that the pangs of loneliness are an inevitable consequence of the gap which man has managed to put between himself and the other animals.

This is no way minimizes the discomforts suffered by those who are lonely because they are physically alone, but it may, perhaps, prevent us from mistaking their problem as a major tragedy, peculiar to our times.

Ottawa Offbeat
Diefenbaker Consistent Even Through Financial Sacrifices

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Say what you will about Conservative Leader Diefenbaker — and these days, almost everybody seems to be sounding off about him — but admit you must that he is a man of his public word.

Call him irascible, as most people, even his friends, have come to do.

Say he is unreasonable, as all of his foes and now, a few of his allies claim.

Protest that he is terrible-tempered, as have most of the Liberal Cabinet who, in moments of Parliamentary recklessness, have irritated him.

Charge, as has Prime Minister Pearson, in naming him The Great Rejector," that many and more he has made political condemnables his way of public life.

Say all the things that his political foes have said now, seemingly, an increasing number of his friends are saying.

But don't forget to say that he is consistent, that when he gives an undertaking he keeps it, and once taking a position on principle, holds stubbornly to it long after many other people have forgotten about it and wish he would, too.

GIFT TO CROWN

For the second year in succession he has mailed back to the Government that Parliamentary pay increase against which he and nine other Members of the Commons voted 18 months ago.

Last year he remitted $5,580 the amount to which the pay increase came in the nine months following its July passage made retroactive to the April election.

He cannot quite a book-keeping flap in the Commons accounting office when, from July through to the end of March he failed to cash any of his Parliamentary pay cheques.

Later he explained that he couldn't cash them as they were issued monthly, but had to wait until the end of the year, and remit the refund in the one lump sum.

This year he mailed his cheque to the Receiver General of Canada for $8,000, the full amount of the increase which took Parliamentary pay from an annual $10,000 to $18,000.

The refund cheque he marked as a "Gift to the Crown."

As a gift to the Government, it becomes tax exempt.

"No sir, you can't take an money you can't accept and won't use," he says.

Associates have suggested that he had proved his point last year when he mailed back the $5,580, that now an additional $8,000 re-confirmation of his opposition to the near-100 percent Parliamentary pay increase was scarcely necessary.

NOT EAST

But he refused to see it that way.

He wasn't proving or "re-confirming" anything.

It was just that "I like to do what I say" — life's too short not to carry out your undertakings."

Actually, he didn't object to the pay increase as much — although he did believe it was "a bit much, $5,000 would have been more reasonable" — it was the way in which it was done he found so objectionable. He believed then, and still does, that the taxpayers should have been consulted, and that if there was to have been a pay increase, it should have been made law in until after the next election.

So he is mailing back his, and will continue to do so each year back, year after year as long as he remains in Parliament.

Financially, this is not easy. For John Diefenbaker, always associated with public service to be bothered much about private gain, has little, if any money put by.

"Haven't got much," he told a friend the other day, "but still enjoy life — when taking money I don't want and would not use hardly could make it more sensible to do."

But isn't $13,580 quite a bit to pay in the name of consistency.

"When it comes to making good your word," he says, "it's a small price."

Oddly, when you look back on it, Creditiste Real Caouette was one of the nine who stood with Mr. Diefenbaker against the pay increase, but only the Conservative Leader, on the basis, he says, that "a man is only as good as his word," has followed through with those "gift to the Crown" refunds.

Strictly Personal Contrasting Phenomenon Of Violence

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Speaking of England and the crime rate, as I was yesterday, reminded me of a news item in the London Observer last year, a few months after President Kennedy's murder.

Sir Alec Douglas-Home, then British Prime Minister, remarked privately that assassination seemed to be very simple these days. "His brother William," wrote the Observer, "wanted to see him in the House of Commons and filled in a green police form at the door."

Under "Object of Visit," he scribbled — "Assassination." He was ushered straight in. Needless to say, this was before the Kennedy tragedy, or it would have been too tasteless to be believed.

Why is violence so rare a phenomenon in England that even the Prime Minister can go about relatively unguarded? And why is it so common in America that the rifle club and the unlawful lobby in Washington to ensure that the right to own guns is not more severely restricted by law?

A few sociological studies have been made on the subject, but, like most studies of that sort, they tell us little we did not know before — about British "tradition" and American "frontier spirit," and the customary cliches that obscure more than they explain.

In a Peter Sellers film I saw not long ago, a band of burglars mistakenly tapped on some policemen during the confusion of an arrest. When they were finally subdued, each policeman said, "You wouldn't get much of a sentence for the burglary, but it's going to be doubled for attacking an officer." And the burglars were passionately apologetic for the mistake.

Can anyone imagine American criminals taking an apologetic line for whacking a cop? For one thing, our cops don't command the respect the British police do. For another, robbery and burglary with firearms are standard operating procedure over here, and with a shocking infraction of "the code" over there. And, for a third, the British attitude is overwhelmingly on the side of law and order, while we seem to be only for those kinds of laws and sorts of order that protect our individual interests.

"Individual" may be the operating word here. It is a massive paradox of our society that nowhere else in the world is "individualism" deemed so important — and nowhere else is individual life held so cheaply by a presumably civilized community. Life is cheap in the East because people are too numerous and food too scarce; we do not have either of those excuses, and perhaps it is time we began examining the psychological and cultural roots of our indifference to sudden death.

Water Problem

Milwaukee Journal

Water, usable water, is becoming increasingly precious in many parts of the country and the problem is aggravated in this year of substantial drought.

There are mighty plans afoot in the western U.S. to pump river water from regions which have enough to areas which don't. The interior department's office of saline water continues to seek better and cheaper ways to get fresh water from the sea.

Now, the federal bureau of reclamation is attempting to wring water from the atmosphere. The bureau has set up the new office of atmospheric water resources and doled out $568,700 in new contracts to expand research.

Sex Instructions Available for Youth

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do you have booklets on sex suitable for a 12-year-old boy? If I remember correctly, your column suggested a certain type of book of literature to enable children to understand sex in a factual, sensible manner. — Mrs. K. F.

Dear Doctor: I am 19 and engaged to be married. I hesitate to admit it, but I actually know very little about sex except what I have overheard, and I am getting panicky. Is there any book I can read? — J. J.

There are various books and pamphlets on the subject, but the best suggestion I can offer is a series of five booklets, at 50 cents per booklet, suited to various ages from early childhood to early adulthood.

I have read them and they are excellent as well as inexpensive. My suggestion is that anyone interested, or potentially interested, clip today's column for future reference.

These booklets were prepared under the supervision of the American Medical Association because a need clearly existed for an accurate, tasteful but plain-spoken discussion of sex for various ages.

These are the booklets:

This is for prospective parents, and for parents of pre-school and early school-age children.

"A Story About You." This is for children in grades 4, 5, and 6.

"Finding Yourself." For boys and girls of junior high school age.

"Approaching Adulthood." For boys and girls of the upper teens — 16 to 20.

"Facts Aren't Enough." This is for adults who have the responsibility of instructing children and youths in sex education.

Any or all can be ordered by mail at 50 cents per booklet (or $2.50 for the entire set. (Do not, however, send stamps.)

And do not send orders to me. I had at one time considered writing some booklets on sex, but when I saw these I felt that excellent material already was available at moderate cost.

Booklets may be ordered from:

American Medical Association, 535 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill., 60610. Or from National Education Association, 1201 Sixteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

The price is the same for Canadian readers.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the difference in procedure in enlarging the pupil of the eye and dilating it? Does the enlarging mean cutting of the iris? I know dilating is done with drops. — F. D.

Dilating and enlarging mean the same thing. No, cutting of the iris would not be involved. The pupils automatically dilates or becomes smaller to suit the amount of light. Dilation with drugs (or "drops") is done by ophthalmologists so they can see into the eye better. That's also why patients wear dark glasses, or at that rate avoid bright light, for a little while afterward until the drug has worn off and the pupil can close up to protect against excessive brightness.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do children get their blood types from the father or from the mother? — J. C.

Parenthood is a co-operative undertaking. If both parents happen to be Type O, the children will be Type O. But in any other combination of Types O, A, B, or AB, the children may have any of two or more types. If one parent is Type A and the other Type B, the children can be of any possible blood type.

Two items in the news underscore the role of the father in a boy's upbringing.

A team of psychiatrists told the Quebec Society of Criminology that in a study of 50 fathers of juvenile deliquents, four-were found to be criminal, seven, authoritarian, eight loveal, 12 alcoholic and 17 just plain inadequate.

And Dr. Daniel Paitch, of the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital, said when the theory of a local toymaker that playing with a toy gun will help prevent a boy from becoming criminal is the father not the toy, the doctor claims, who by precept and example makes a man of his son.

Nothing new in this. From the Bible to modern psychiatry, experts point to father as the key to character training. Ask any mother of a home where there is no male parent. She will tell you what an impossible job it is to rear a boy.

An inadequate father is about as good as no father. Yet every day men assume the role without the idea of what it entails. A man must have training for a career. But-we require no training for perhaps the most important career of all—being a father.

If we were logical, we would establish schools for fathers. Past generations never thought in such terms, yet they managed to produce adequate parents.

The answer is that a qualified father usually becomes one through inherited values. Integrity, decency, courage, self-sacrifice—they make the man, and they are transmitted only through traditions.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission is able to place facts before the public showing how such a system as that of three weeks ago can interfere with business and transportation. In a statement issued by the commission it is pointed out that "it took four days for factories, offices, and transportation facilities to return to anything like normal following the snow blitz of December 12th."

The storm struck most of Ontario but particularly Eastern and Central Ontario, and Toronto in particular, where the high piles of snow on the sides of streets still show what an avalanche of snow had fallen upon the city.

The Hydro statement says that Commission engineers "know because the storm created a falling, off in the demand for power in the Southern Ontario system to the extent of approximately 175,000 horsepower."

Mr. Charles A. Ostrom, well known proprietor of Ostrom's drug store for the past 20 years is retiring from business and has sold his interests to Mr. George Pauley, who has been associated with the store as assistant for 20 years.

The Belleville Juniors wintered in the current O.H.A. season in a match at the arena here when they defeated the Campbellford team by a score of 10 to 1, before an audience of 200 satisfied fans.

Miss Ella Rowland of this city, was one of 20 prize winners in the Vacation Photograph Competition, which was conducted by the Rotarian magazine and was open to the world. The prizes were 20 in all, Canadian photographers from Washington, Chicago and New York. Only three prizes of 20 awards came to Canada, one went to Spain and one to Chili.

40 YEARS AGO

The inaugural meeting of the city council for 1923 was held this morning and in an optimistic address, His Worship Mayor C. Nikkel outlined a constructive program for the year. The following aldermen were present: W. J. E. Graham, W. H. Patterson, S. T. Trevethan, Phil Harrison, C. J. Rattan, G. E. Foster, G. W. Dawe, A. H. Ketcheson, J. L. Manley, W. Parish and A. Robinson.

Jan. 8th, 1913

Much interest was manifested in the municipal affairs here yesterday and following are the results: W. H. Hunter, a member of council last year, was elected mayor with a majority of 220 over his old-time foe, A. Robinson. All of the members of last year's council who sought re-election were elected, and two new members were elected, namely J. O. R. McCurdy, and Harry C. Wills. These take the places of W. H. Panter, now the mayor, and Ald. Ed. O'Flynn, who is now with the armed forces overseas. At the city hall after the returns were in, the retiring mayor, J. F. Wills, presided at a meeting at which the newly elected mayor made speeches expressing their thanks to the electors.

Bank Serves Women Only

Ottawa Journal

A Scottish bank has opened an Edinburgh branch for women only, staffed by women, and the manager says more about it is that any woman can walk in cheque in hand to equivalent of $30 without check-up or question.

The bank said it would not consider extending that service to men. It has been convinced that women are more honest.

Who can help applauding?

Honesty and chivalry both are satisfied. How proud men must be of women standing on their own feet depositing money and on their own knees begging for a loan! This will be a man's bank and a male signature on a cheque will be enough to make it suspect, we presume.

The more we see of young women the more convinced we are that they can climb Everest, raise big families on small budgets and lead the way to the moon. But we never believed they could persuade Scotsmen to trust them with a bank!

Pierre Berton's Book Critical Of Protestants

TORONTO (CP)—Author and television personality Pierre Berton says Christianity can only be saved by a violent social and psychological upheaval.

"We need a revolution doctrine, he says in a new book The Comfortable Pew, it will likely be greeted by a man of the description of Jesus Christ —and he will probably be denounced by the Pulpit.

The book, written at the invitation of the Anglican Church of Canada, criticizes the Protestant church and argues that Christianity is shackled by institutional chains.

A modern-day saviour "would be long on a man of vigor, humor, passion, concern, cuts, and above all, action," the Toronto writer says.

"It is axiomatic to say that he would be reviled as the most dangerous and heretical foe of all—being through the "hybrids of myth and dogma in which the church is now somewhat enmeshed: it is more than likely that, being the very opposite of the establishment—religious, social and political —he would be denounced as a traitor.

"And it is in the cards that society would find some modern means of crucifying him."

The book has been recommended as Lenten reading for members by the church's department of religious education.

PLAQUES to retiring aldermen were presented to four former councillors at the inaugural meeting of Belleville city council yesterday. Mayor R. Ellis is seen presenting plaques to George Wishart and Ross C. Bailey. Eugene Harrison and George Brown also received plaques for council service.

Sleet-Broken Power Lines Now Repaired

HALIFAX (CP)—Weary Nova Scotia Power Commission crews succeeded shortly before midnight Monday in repairing sleet - broken power lines conducting electricity into Cape Breton Island.

For most residents of the island nothing seemed amiss.

After heavy icing snapped crossarms and knocked out the main line atop a hill in Antigonish County, emergency sources of electricity provided towns and rural areas in northern and northwestern Nova Scotia with enough power to maintain normal lighting and electrical services.

Power commission linesmen were exhausted by chasing wire breaks all over Cape Breton in the last three days. A sleet storm and subsequent ice conditions caused all the problems.

Meanwhile, officials of CFXU-TV in Antigonish said Monday night it is hoped to get the rebroadcasting station back on the air by the end of this week. The 478-foot transmitting tower of the station toppled under thick ice and pressure of high winds Saturday.

The tall storm moved out of Cape Breton today and into northern Newfoundland, coating power poles and a 175-foot tower at Twillingate with ice much as 10 inches of ice. The Canadian National Telecommunications microwave tower was the source of failure. Nova Scotia near-said four main guy wires had snapped early Monday.

First Acadian Named 20 Supreme Court

HALIFAX (CP)—Vincent J. Pottier, whose appointment to the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia was announced Monday, is the first Acadian to receive the honor. He succeeds Leslie the court's inception in 1754.

Mr. Justice Pottier, Halifax County Court judge since 1947, also is the first County Court judge in Nova Scotia to be appointed to the Supreme Court. He was the first Acadian to be named to the County Court.

Seventy-one judges have been appointed to the Nova Scotia Supreme Court in its 211-year history.

Ranchers Fear Heavy Loss of Range Cattle

CALGARY (CP)—The Albertan says Southern Alberta cattle ranchers fear a repetition of the year 1906-07 when 50 percent of all range cattle were lost in severe winter conditions.

The newspaper says the ranchers' concern is grave as reports of cattle losses from last month's Prairie blizzard trickle in and frigid temperatures continue.

Cattle losses, confined mainly to southeastern Alberta, are estimated between 500 and 1,000 head. A final count likely will not be made until spring.

The newspaper says below-zero cold is preventing some range cattle from recuperating fully from the effects of the December blizzard.

Continuing cold has cut serious into hay reserves for feed and hay prices have risen as much as $10 a ton because of the automation and newly discovered much grazing land and is creating difficulties for ranchers who have to get feed to their cattle.

State of Union Message Presages Most Interesting Year in U. S. Politics

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson's State of the Union message with perhaps 50 proposals for 1965 and beyond opened what may be one of the most fascinating years in the history of American politics.

Through the messages delivered Monday night to Congress ran two revealing insights into the times and the man.

There is no sense of crisis in the world at this moment, at home or abroad, and, thanks to this, there was none in what Johnson said. This enabled him to appear calm and far-seeing, an appearance he treasures.

But, because of it, he was able to employ to the fullest his philosophy of politics and the presidency, which is the avoidance of unnecessary conflict, even with opponents.

Much he said in his talk sounded mild, but in his talk was no accident but is part of his technique. It was almost entirely non-irritating.

And what was controversial—like announcing he would push for medical care for the aged and aid to students in both public and private schools—got no more space than anything else and then he skipped on to an other item.

A typical State of the Union message is generally a rambling outline of things to come. Johnson took advantage of this, but his talk unquestionably said he would spell out some of the main programs in the next six weeks.

Thus he delayed, until perhaps there was no alternative, setting any words after Dec. 31 that there will be fire later seems somewhat unreal. Increased care program alone is a hot number.

And there is the likelihood he will send Congress a new civil rights bill although he gave no more than a line and a half to this, saying barriers to Negro voting must be eliminated.

Some of the programs he mentioned may take years in the doing, not so much because they are inflammatory but because they will need study and there is a limit on what Congress can do in any one year.

Again, and nowhere more obviously than in the field of foreign affairs, Johnson Monday night illustrated his avoidance of even slightly abrasive language if it fills no immediate need. This was on the subject of communism.

He didn't treat it as a devil but simply said it was in Asia that communism wears a "more aggressive face." Even the Chinese Communists, with whom he has battled, he can't get along and at whom this was aimed, can't complain.

MATTER OF RIGHTS

They not only pride themselves on their aggressiveness but make it one of the justifications for their split with Russia, accusing the Russians of not being aggressive enough.

Johnson took advantage of this split by a double invitation to the Soviet leader. To appear on American television and some on over here for a visit.

Fidel Castro is the easiest, and one of the most popular, targets for American politicians who don't have the responsibility of dealing with him. But Johnson does.

And here again, as if deliberately not setting up any roadblocks to the possibility of some understanding with Cuba later, Johnson didn't even mention the Cuban's name in talking about strengthening relations with Latin America.

In this whole talk there was probably not one word put in, cut out, by anyone but Johnson.

Last year, when Johnson delivered his first State of the Union message, it was less than seven weeks after president Kennedy's death, he was reported that Johnson used 75 writers for six weeks to put it together for him.

Leaders of Dockers Will Appeal to Members for Aid

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — Leaders of Britain's dockworkers, under pressure from the government, have agreed to appeal again for moderation in their industrial end work in a bid to ease the congestion in British ports.

But they angrily deny reports that they alone in the industry are sabotaging the country's vital foreign trade at a time when the recent public outcry against dockers is unfair.

The agreement came during a meeting Monday between officials of the Transport and General Workers Union and Labor Minister Ray Gunter, who later reported to Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

There was doubt that the appeal would have much effect.

Jack Dash, a life-long Communist and head of the unofficial but influential Port Workers' Liaison Committee, called the appeal "a waste of time." NO UNION BAN

TGWU head Harry Nicholas, while sympathetic to the government's plea, emphasized that although there is no union ban on more work, most dockers already put in 50 hours every time a week and "we cannot expect them to flog themselves to death seven days a week."

The chaotic conditions building up over the last six months have been straining Britain's renewed export drive.

The situation, aggravated by dockers' unofficial holidays during the Christmas-New Year period, came to public notice during the weekend when British newspapers carried front-page stories. The Daily Mirror led the attack by accusing dockers of being "bloody-minded, selfish, arrogant."

But today several papers tended to be with the dockers somewhat in blaming inefficiency on all sides for the trouble.

"No fair-minded man can absolve the docker for responsibility," says the conservative Daily Mail. "But, equally, no one should blame him for the appalling scene in the ports system, which we expect to work."

Reformed Husband Must Prove Himself to Wife

DEAR DORIS — I wrote to you before about my husband running around with a 13-year-old girl and drinking. Well, I went to the police and lawyer like you told me, and he got one year in jail.

DORIS CLARK

What I want to know is, if I should take my husband back after he gets out? He has written me asking forgiveness and saying he has learned a lot. Says he misses me and the kids so much he cries himself to sleep at night.

They're giving a Christmas doing in jail for husbands, wives and children with a turkey dinner. Do you think I should go?

I'd like to take him back, Doris, for the kids' sake also, but I don't think I could stand it if he started all over again. How does a woman know if a man has really changed?— WHAT TO DO.

DEAR WHAT — Don't commit yourself. Go to the do by all means and take the children. Dress your prettiest. Let him realize he has a wife to be proud of and to reform for.

Then let him also realize that what you do depends on him. And that if you do take him back, and he breaks his part of the bargain, you'll be forced to break yours.

(I have rushed your private reply so that it will reach you in time.)

DEAR DORIS — Your advice was of great value to me with my song. I sent it away as you said and it came back with a very good report and the firm will publish it shortly.

I also rejoined the choir because you said "Join the choir and start a trend." Remember? I said the other male voices were all old men.

Well, now that I'm back it's more fun than ever. It makes me wonder why I ever left.

I shall never forget you, Doris. Thanks a million. — NO LONGER UNDECIDED.

DEAR NO LONGER — Good for you! For folk with a musical ear, singing can be glorious self-expression. You don't have to be a soloist to let everything go in a choir.

More teen-agers, both boys and girls, could have this kind of fun if they'd take the plunge.

Shiny Golden Apple Dumplings

By MARY MOORE

These make a hearty dessert so do not plan a filling main course. Turkey soup (given yesterday) and a generous tossed salad would be ideal forerunners.

These are shiny and gold when baked, for the syrup with which they are served is poured directly over the raw dumplings before they are baked. Eleanor watched these baking through the glass door in her oven—her family of boys hovering and peeking and drooling right behind her as they bubbled.

4 small 5pr apples, ¼ cup brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon (first amount), butter.

Syrup

1½ cups light grown sugar, 2 cups water, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon (second amount), ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon salt.

Make syrup first by combining all syrup ingredients and cook, simmering, for 10 minutes.

Make pastry: Cut shortening and butter into flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in cold water, 1 tablespoon at a time, tossing with fork until all flour is dampened. Press into ball. Roll out into a square to 3/16" thickness (a little thicker than for pie crust) Cut into 4 equal squares.

Peel and core apples, making fairly large hole. Mix together the ¼ cup brown sugar and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon (first amount) and fill holes in apples firmly with this sugar mixture. Place one apple at centre of each pastry square. Dot sugar filling in each apple with ¼ teaspoon butter. Draw rough corner up over top first, then draw up side corners, overlapping, then last square-cut corner so that next-cut corner is on top. You will have to moisten top where last corner touches and press to seal. Pinch folds to seal apple in. Place dumplings in large shallow baking dish. Pour all of the hot syrup over the dumplings. (This is a lot of syrup but not a bit too much when finally served). Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes longer, basting with syrup every 15 minutes.

Serve one apple dumpling to each person, spooning pan syrup over each serving. Super!

Hemline Goes to All Lengths in New Fashions

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The woman who has for years slavishly pinned up or let out her hemlines according to the dictates of fashion now is free of all that—and not an inch above the knees too soon.

Bill Blass of Maurice Rentner gave that advice Monday to the fashion writers here for the New York couture group's semi-annual press week activities. He said anything goes with skirt lengths—from two inches above the knee to the ankles, for any occasion, day or night.

Item lengths in his own collection went to all lengths to prove the point.

Yves St. Laurent is the emancipator, said Blass. Like many another unsung hero, the French couturier was criticized by some of the press last July for what they said were dowdy, grandmotherly costumes with awkwardly-long skirt lengths.

In England, the young mods have adopted the Victorian length skirt, and the French youth, the ye ye crowd, continue to wear them shockingly short.

MAKE OWN DECISION

Shockingly short has been the fashion picture at the press previews here, except for an occasional demilongueur (mid-calf-length) dinner dress. Nevertheless, says Blass, from this day forward women can make their own decisions about skirt lengths and be absolutely in style whether they pin them up or let them down to their ankles.

Dresses in the Blass spring collection are tight and tiny across the bosom with the merest high-waisted shaping.

Blass advocates lace-ruffled pantaloons under short-flared dresses, but for at-home entertaining only. Navy is this designer's substitute for the traditional bare, black crepe skimmer dress. He often combines it with pink satin jackets and coats.

Other spring style trend in Blass' collection as well as Ben Reig's show that followed are:

Silk - printed headgear, scarves, turbans or snoods—to match blouses and dresses; plenty of chin - strap, bonnets with skinny suits and coats; lots of lace, sometimes studded with jewels; flouncy ruffles; languid chiffon.

Haute Couture Days Said Almost Over

TORONTO (CP)—The days of exclusive haute couture are almost over, says New York fashion designer Geoffrey Beene.

In Toronto for a showing of his spring collection, Mr. Beene said he believes Paris is still the fashion centre of the world, although the differences among New York, Paris and Rome are fewer top couturiers than before the Second World War and some of those have added other businesses to their fashion work.

He speculates that women who can afford haute couture originals no longer want to take the time for fittings. And in this day of rapid communication, copies of originals in almost any price range can be bought as fast as the originals.

His spring collection features long jackets and slender coats with string and sash belts and dressmaker touches. Several evening gowns show an influence from the 1930s in flowing chiffon skirts and long waisted blouses. Others, in abstract designs, are slender shifts.

Mr. Beene said he put emphasis on a tailored look for every daytime, a softer look for evening, with use made of a Beene specialty—bias-cup tops.

He said he aims for simplicity of both cut and style.

"It is the hardest thing to achieve, to have enough interest without too much. I think eventually fashion will end in stark simplicity."

LUMBERS STUDIO BABY OF THE WEEK

How about this for a New Year's Resolution, to have the baby photographed in '65 by Lumbers Studio, phone 962-5954.

This is little Heather, the 10 month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Mowat of Belleville.

Ann Landers

Mother-in-Law's Permission Not Needed to Start Family

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I married a man who is a teacher. His mother is a teacher, too. I attended college for only one year and then quit to take a good job.

My mother-in-law says I should not become pregnant until I return to college and get my degree. My husband remains silent on the subject.

All this makes me feel that I do not count as a person. Is a college degree that important? I read a great deal and do not feel intellectually inferior in the presence of our college trained friends. In social conversations I more than hold my own. My husband frequently has commented on my wide range of information.

I am 24 years old and want to start a family. Please tell me how to think about this problem. It's a source of concern and resentment. — E.W.

DEAR E.W. — Since when does a young wife need her mother-in-law's permission to start a family? Her opinion on this intimate matter should not count for anything.

If you'd rather have a baby than a sheep skin, get busy. Don't poll your relatives.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband thinks he's a great public speaker. The truth is, he's a bore. I die a thousand deaths every time Morris gets up to say "a few words" in public.

He was elected president of an organization. The club is bringing a prominent personality to town and Morris will introduce the speaker.

Last night when he read his introduction aloud I wanted to go through the floor. It was 14 minutes of tired jokes and silly anecdotes.

When I told Morris the audience didn't come to listen to him, he was insulted. Will you please say something in your column that might get the point across? — MRS. MORRIS JENNINGS BRYAN.

DEAR MRS. BRYAN — If all the long-winded introducers were laid end to end they would reach from here to China — which is not a bad idea. The speakers would gladly arrange it.

As a victim of a few 14-minute introductions myself, I can tell you it is murder not only on the audience but on the speaker as well. Take it from me, Morris, (and anyone else who may be called upon to introduce a speaker) if the introduction goes over five minutes it's too long.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am the mother of a 16-year-old daughter who has been a joy to her father and me. Joan is an attractive girl with a lovely personality, face and figure. She is popular with both boys and girls. I can't understand why she has chosen for her best friend a girl who in my opinion is the most undesirable I've met.

Joan's friend is vulgar in her language and conduct. She is untidy and has a poor reputation. I actually hate to see the girl walk into our home.

I've told Joan how I feel but she insists her friend is nice and continues to be "loyal" to her. Can you think of anything I might say to Joan which would be effective? — A MOM.

DEAR MOM — You're probably said too much already.

Sometimes teen-agers want to drop a friend (boy as well as girl) but they are ashamed to do so because they have defended the relationship and hate to admit they were wrong. Keep quiet and see what happens.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FAST DRAW FROM BRASSIERE GUN HOLSTER — A Johannesburg, South African housewife demonstrates the newest type of brassiere gun holster designed by a gun expert in her home city. The holster fits snugly at the side of her bra and the manufacturer claims the bustline remains unchanged. In a test, a woman was able to draw and fire a pistol in three seconds. The holster is selling mainly to women who have to return home late at night unescorted. (AP Wirephoto by cable from London)

Susanna's Family Fare

DO I NEED A SLIDE RULE?

Dear Susanna: I suppose nearly everyone has some pet frustration — and I sure know what mine is! How in the dickens do you measure out half a cup of shortening?

Whenever I come across a recipe that calls for say, part of a cup of butter, I go right through the ceiling at the thought of mucking about, packing it in and out of a cup trying to measure it. There must be another way!

One small question. Do 3 or 4 teaspoons equal a tablespoon? Maybe I'm a little too shaky, but it never seems to come out the same — and it would be so helpful if I knew for sure, when I'm trying to double or triple a recipe. You'll be my friend for life if you can straighten me out! — "Confused Connie"

"A pint's a pound of world around" — but how many teaspoons equal one tablespoon? Cheer up my friendly, and long as ear:

3 teaspoons equal 1 tablespoon
And that's not all.
4 tablespoons equal ¼ cup;
2 cups equal 1 pint or 16 ounces;
2 pints, 4 cups, and 1 quart to measure it. There must be another way!

Next, the answer to that really big problem:

You can measure shortening quite easily with a tablespoon:
8 tablespoons equal ½ cup; or
¼ pound stick of butter or margarine equals ½ cup.

Did I measure up? — SUSANNA

PREVENTS STICKING

Dear Susanna: Here is my contribution to your tips for making things easier:

If you possibly can avoid it, do not wash your frying pan, but heat it slightly and clean it with some salt and a paper towel.

By cleaning it this way, food won't stick. If you do have to wash the pan, oil it with a few drops of salad oil right after cleaning.

Do not throw away "empty" salad oil jars or tins right away — that is, until you have given them a second chance. You will be surprised how many times you can eke out a few drops when you need them for greasing baking dishes. — Mrs. B. Kreen

Sound advice for seasoning a frying pan and weathering any shortage of oil. — SUSANNA

Hail Christmas In the New Year

By WALTER REEVEBCHUK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A sheaf of grain, a circular loaf of bread circled by candles and a white tablecloth become symbols of Christmas Wednesday night for thousands of Canadian homes.

It is Christmas Eve for 475,000 Ukrainian - Canadians who observe the birth of Jesus by the Julian calendar.

Placing of the cloth, grain and bread on the table precedes the 13-course Svizta Vechera or Holy Supper.

The supper is the most important part of Ukrainian Christmas celebrations, a mixture of pagan customs and Christian teaching.

The circular bread or kolache, which serves as the table's centre piece, represents the sun—the symbol of life. The sheaf or dinkoh represents unity and gathering of the clans.

The Holy Supper is traditionally a family gathering although a place is set at the table for any homeless stranger who might drop in. The symbolic candle is placed in the window as an invitation to a homeless guest.

The vechera consists of 12 meatless dishes. In ancient times the number of dishes ranged from nine to 14, representing produce grown on the land or taken from the water. But with the coming of Christianity the number was set at 12 for the Apostles who gathered for the Last Supper. The 13th dish . . . does not have the technical ability to escalate its campaign against Malaysia into a larger-scale conflict.

"Indonesia's ability to handle her large armament of sophisticated weapons is doubtful," he said. "Her ability to use her air striking power effectively is questionable."

At the UN, Palar met with Canada's Ambassador Paul Tremblay Monday. A spokesman said Tremblay expressed Canada's concern over the impact the Indonesian withdrawal might have on the UN.

patrol boats were being taken out of inactive status in Singapore.

The moves are part of the British government's decision to strengthen its land and sea forces in the Far East in the face of increasing attempts at incursion by Indonesian infiltrators against the Malaysian federation.

The Malaysian government announced Monday that it would retaliate "against the rule of lawlessness" should Indonesia attack in force. Indonesia's announcement that it was withdrawing from the United Nations came after intelligence reports that Indonesia is massing forces at bases surrounding Malaysia.

CLOSING MISSION

At the United Nations, Indonesia's chief delegate L. N. Palar, said he would close the Indonesian mission this week and go home "to talk things out."

Some sources expressed belief that Palar was going to persuade President Sukarno not to make his withdrawal final.

But in Jakarta, the Indonesian Herald said the withdrawal decision was irrevocable." The newspaper casually reflects the viewpoint of the foreign ministry.

In Hong Kong, British Air Vice-Marshal P. C. Fletcher said Indonesia does not have the technical ability to escalate its campaign against Malaysia into a larger-scale conflict.

"Indonesia's ability to handle her large armament of sophisticated weapons is doubtful," he said. "Her ability to use her air striking power effectively is questionable."

At the UN, Palar met with Canada's Ambassador Paul Tremblay Monday. A spokesman said Tremblay expressed Canada's concern over the impact the Indonesian withdrawal might have on the UN.

SEEN ON STREET

Mrs. Diana Paterson, a neighbor, told reporters Mr. Prain told her Deborah left the apartment at about 3 p.m. to buy a pizza and he saw her on the street near a car with a man inside. She did not return.

"We put on our coats and went down looking for Debbie but couldn't find her," Mrs. Paterson said.

"Police were called a short time later and they searched until about 11 p.m."

She said that at about 2:30 a.m. today Deborah's maternal grandmother "came in and told us what had happened."

"She said Debbie was dead in the basement of the hardware store."

Police said they believe Deborah was attacked in one of several apartments over the store and that she fought and screamed in an effort to escape. But residents of the building said they heard nothing.

Many Pheasants And Partridge Killed by Cold

CALGARY (CP)—More than 50 per cent of all pheasant and Hungarian partridge in the Calgary area have died from starvation in the current cold weather, T. J. O'Keefe, vice-president of the Alberta Fish and Game Association, said Monday.

Similar reports have been heard throughout the province as extreme cold and deep snow make it impossible for game birds to feed on grain and grit.

Several other fish and game groups have announced programs to save the birds and the provincial government has expressed its concern.

What causes BACKACHE and how it may be helped

One widespread recurring form of discomfort is what is commonly called backache. One frequent cause of backache can be traced to sluggish kidney action. This condition often may result in irritation of the urinary system, followed by backache and tired feeling.

Based on a formula introduced over 70 years ago, Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate the kidneys to help overcome the irritating condition, and so bring relief from the backache and tired feeling. Dodd's Kidney Pills are available at any drug counter in the blue box with the red band. The important thing to look for is the name. You can depend on Dodd's.

Johnson Would

begun to crumble." The last was an evident reference to Russia's continuing dispute with China.

At the same time, Russia and the United States must become friendlier to each other if they are to live in peace.

"There is no longer a single threat," the president said. "There are many. They differ in intensity and danger. They require different attitudes and different answers.

"With the Soviet Union we seek peaceful understandings that can lessen the danger to freedom . . . we are to live together in peace we must come to know each other better."

He added: "We seek the new Soviet leaders can visit America so they can learn about this country at first hand."

OPEN TO INVITATION

The president also disclosed that he hopes to visit Western Europe and Latin America this year. White House officials said he is ready to accept an invitation from President de Gaulle to visit France. It is expected that arrangements will be worked out for Johnson to visit also a number of other European countries, including Britain, West Germany and Italy.

His only trip outside the country since he became president in late 1963 was a brief one to British Columbia last September.

The closest he came to mentioning Canada Monday night—he apparently was speaking of Latin America at the time—was when he said that in the last four years the U.S. has "resolved in friendship our disputes with our neighbors of the hemisphere."

He said business, labor and government are working on ways to improve peaceful trade with Russia and the eastern Communist bloc where "restless nations are slowly beginning to assert themselves."

But in Asia "communism wears a more aggressive face." He stressed that the U.S. will continue aid begun 10 years ago to embattled South Viet Nam, and Russia met the eastern aggression with a security precaution.

On the home front, he promised a legislative program that he called "the beginning of the road to the great society."

For example, he wants:

—$1,500,000,000 this year for a new aid-to-education program that would help low-income school districts, provide loans for students at both public and parochial schools, and extend scholarships and guaranteed loans to needy college students.

—A substantial excise tax cut which state officials said could approach $2,000,000,000.

—Either a new law or a constitutional amendment, a point yet to be decided, to "eliminate . . . every remaining obstacle to the right and opportunity to vote." Johnson said the aim here would be to help Negro Americans.

—Medical insurance for the aged under social security and higher social security benefits.

—Changes in the Taft-Hartley Labor Relations Act, which sides said would include a proposal to repeal a controversial section that authorizes states to enact laws barring compulsory unionism, so-called right to work laws.

—A change in Congressional rules to permit speedy enactment of a temporary income tax cut to help fight any recession that might develop. But Johnson said he confidently predicted continued prosperity.

—Federal power to combat air and water pollution, new powers to beautify the countryside and the cities, expanded conservation measures, and moves to fight crime and foster culture.

—A study of ways to cut the cost of farm aid programs and to "direct more of our effort to the small farmer who needs help most."

—An immigration law "based on the work a man can do and not where he was born or how he spells his name."

He added: "In the new year the new $784,000,000 fund to finance anti-poverty programs and the start of a massive attack on crippling and killing diseases."

—Studies of high-speed rail transportation between cities; an attack on big - city problems, and creation of a new cabinet-rank department of housing and urban development—a proposal Congress has rejected.

Johnson even made what white house officials acknowledged was an indirect reference to birth control, saying he would "seek new ways to use our knowledge to help deal with the explosion in world population and the 'growing scarcity in world resources.'"

Johnson's hand was strengthened, only a few hours after the new Congress convened Monday, by a 294-to-130 vote in the House changing a rule which has prevented many a Democratic measure from getting to a vote.

The decision was a blow at the House rules committee and its chairman, conservative Representative Howard Smith (Dem.-Va.), who has been criticized on measures favored by Liberals. Henceforth the rules committee may hold a bill only 21 days; then the speaker may declare that it is to be brought to the floor for a vote.

Another rules change empowers a majority of the House to send bills to a Senate-House conference for adjustment of differences between the two chambers. Until now, the objection of a single member could send sometimes all-House bill this routing and send the bill back to the rules committee.

Retail Merchants Request Vote on Liquor Licensing

PICTON (Staff) — Picton town council at Monday night's meeting heard reports from two committees, the fire committee and the Streets and property committee.

There was three fire calls during the month of December and one call for assistance at 10 Lake Ontario Portland Cement plant. The cement plant fire on Dec. 11 which involved a conveyor belt and was caused by friction. The other three fires were minor ones. One a grass fire at the rear of the disposal plant, a flooded space heater and a small electrical fire at Shannons Wholesale.

For the year 1964 their were 65 residence building permits issued and 12 commercial permits. Commercial permits were for the amount of $46,850 and residence $527,503. Total value of permits granted was $575,353.

Chairman of the finance committee, Don Thompson told council that it cost the town $2,000 for repair damage to sewers. This was caused by vandals or hoodlums who forced one of the older wooden manhole on the manhole and put dirt sticks and stones into the opening. This was cleaned out and was repeated the following night and their area glow. Congratulations to the County Home for such a good job, there was much work done here.

Glenora Road was aglow in the Christmas spirit, Mr. W. Evans and Miss C. Frederick brightened up the town.

Just to name a couple.

To those who were not mentioned perhaps next year we will have your name listed here. To each and everyone in the Christmas spirit, Mr. W. go our thanks, for having

WANT LIQUOR VOTE

A letter was read to council from Picton's retail merchants with regard to submit to qualified electors a proposal for liquor licensing.

(Question one) "are you in favor of sale of liquor under a dining lounge license for consumption with meals on licensed premises?"

(Question two) "are you in favor of sale of liquor under a liquor license for consumption on licensed premises?"

A letter was read from Jesse Mason proposing consideration of purchase of the Picton Armouries. Mr. Mason considered that the building would provide adequate room for the Office of Crown Timber, Treasurer, Town Clerk, Picton Police, Public Utilities, Picton Fire Department and Ontario Provincial Police.

The centennial grant he said might be used for renovating the building and perhaps changing the front. Children's Aid Society, he added might also use the facilities.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Time was when Don Thomas' South Front Street tuck shop was open at the ungodly hour of six a.m. "Then were the days" when hockey was played here—and the Mc-Farland were the toast of the town.

At the frosty crack of dawn, sportswriters, scarcely two hours dishussed from Western Ontario hockey jaunts, trudged to their typewriters with eyes heavily lidded with sleep.

Nearing the Thomas emporium of chocolate bars, ice cream and soft drinks, they were rudely awakened from their wailing slumber by the shrill happy cries of youngsters.

They were the battle-geared pork infantry of the city. The accoutrements of warfare were slung over their shoulders; their regimental habiliments formed a riot of color.

They crowded the Thomas tuckshop, for their early morning pick-me-up of ice cream cones and chocolate bars. Crowding, pushing, shoving they showed little evidence of frost-rimmed gizzards or other interior refrigeration.

The lights of their deep-freeze compartments glowed through their eyes. Satisfied they trooped out of the shop and deployed for the short trek to the battle front in Memorial Arena.

A sportswriting robot, forcing his eyes wide open, baited a platoon of the diminutive, goal-gunners and asked "What do you kids do this for. Can't it wait?"

"Shucks, mister," they chorused, "we're doing it just for the fun of it."

That was it. "Just for the fun of it." They were just youngsters playing a game. And they deserved to have fun playing because hockey is just a game and they were just kids.

The Minor Hockey Committee of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association views with some concern that organization tinged with regimentation of good players is trending to take some of the fun out of hockey.

Chairman Lloyd Pollock and secretary Jack Christie, in an open letter to coaches across Canada, appeal to every minor hockey coach in Canada to make sure youngsters learn every phase of hockey while under their care.

"We want them to learn to be hockey players, so we must teach them the fundamentals—to skate, shoot, make and receive a pass, to check an opponent and so on."

The letter goes on: "We also want them to grow up to be good MEN and good citizens, and so we must teach the fundamentals. We must teach them how to obey authority—in hockey it's the referee and the coach; in school, the teacher; at home, their parents; at work, the boss and in general the law. If they are taught the fundamentals of good citizenship they will grow up the better for having known you. And you can teach them for they'll listen to you. You are their leader, maybe even a hero, in their eyes. This is a responsibility you have accepted."

"AND AS MUCH AS ANYTHING ELSE, WE WANT THEM TO HAVE FUN."

"We do hope that in your teaching and coaching, you will always remember that hockey is a game, and that you are dealing with 'kids.' Youngsters should not be deprived of the fun of playing because their coach is always anxious to win. The lads should be able to enjoy themselves and leave the arena wanting to come back because they have had fun playing."

"If your team wins a championship, but wins it because they were driven to it, and in the process miss the fun they should have, then YOU as a COACH have not been successful. If your team loses, and having lost, feels that the season has been a complete failure, then it is you as a coach has failed."

"So it is, we appeal to you, asking that you always bear in mind that the members of your teams are just youngsters playing a game. They deserve to have fun playing it."

Bill Crothers Tops In Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—Bill Crother's, the fleet-footed druggist from Markham, Ont., who has been plastered with awards for a great 1964 track year, won another Tuesday.

He was named Ontario's outstanding athlete of the year—for the second year in succession—by the Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association.

Previously, the bespectacled 24-year-old runner had been named the top male athlete in the country in the 30th annual Canadian Press year-end poll.

He had staked his claim for honors at the Tokyo summer Olympics in October when he placed second behind world great Peter Snell of New Zealand in the 800 metres. His time for the distance was 1:45.6, the best he has ever done and a time that established him as the second fastest half-miler of all time.

And it was a runaway for him in the OSSA poll, just as it was a year ago. Based on a 3-2-1 setup, he received 153 votes with 43 first-place choices, 11 seconds and two thirds.

Only six of the 57 voters did not jot Crothers' name on their year's ballots.

In second place with 57 points was Roger Jackson of Toronto, one-half of the coxless pair-oar double that won the gold medal at the Tokyo Games.

Tommy Grant of Hamilton Tiger-Cats nailed down third place with 45 points while Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks had 27 and Ron Taylor of St. Louis Cardinals 2.

Crothers will be presented with the award at the 14th annual sports celebrities dinner here Thursday, Jan. 28.

Selectors named 20 athletes and the others were far down the list.

Bobby Hull Tops AP All-Star Selection

By KEN OLAN

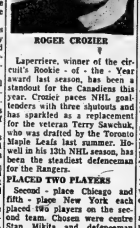
NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Hull of the Chicago Black Hawks, the scoring leader, and two members of the first-place Montreal Canadiens, defenceman Jacques Laperriere and right winger Claude Provost, were named Monday to the Associated Press' National Hockey League all-star team for the first half of the 1964-65 season. Defenceman Harry Howell of New York Rangers, rookie goalie Roger Crozier and centre Norm Ullman of the Detroit Red Wings also were selected.

Hull, a left winger, is moving at a pace that will enable him to break the league records of 50 goals and 96 points. He has 32 goals and 53 points.

Ullman is third in scoring with 18 goals and 17 assists for 35 points. Provost, also among the top defensive right wingers, has 12 goals and 21 assists for 33 points.

BOBBY HULL — NORM ULLMAN

JACQUES LAPERRIERE — CLAUDE PROVOST



ROGER CROZIER

Laperriere, winner of the circuit's Rookie of the Year award last season, has been a standout for the Canadiens this year. He passes with NHL goaltenders with three shutouts and has sparked as a replacement for the veteran Terry Sawchuk, who was drafted by the Toronto Maple Leafs last summer. Howell in his 13th NHL season, has been the steadiest defenceman for the Rangers.

PLACED TWO PLAYERS

Second - place Chicago and fifth - place New York each placed two players on the second team. Chosen were centre Stan Mikita and defenceman Pierre Pilote of the Hawks, right winger Rod Gilbert and left winger Camille Henry of the Rangers, goalie Charlie Hodge of Montreal and defenceman Bill Gadsby of Detroit.

HARRY HOWELL

Mikita, the league scoring champion of last season, is the runner - up this year with 12 goals and 23 assists for 40 points. Pilote has 16 goals and Henry 14. Pilote, the Norris Trophy winner as the league's top defenceman the past two years, got off to a relatively poor start in 1964-65.

The NHL experimes a twice-a year voting system, one taken after the first half of the season and the second after the completion of the regular schedule. The opening half ended Sunday.

Named to the AP's third all-star team were goalie Lorne Worsley, right winger Ron Ellis and defenceman Carl Brewer of Toronto, centre Henri Richard of Montreal and defenceman Ted Green and left winger Dean Prentice of the last-place Boston Bruins.

Rolls 265 10-Pin Single

Gord Thompson, of the International Hardware Mixed League, came up with a sparkling 10-pin game at the Belleville Bowl last night.

Thompson started his game with three spares and finished up with nine strikes for a 265 single, 35 pins short of a perfect game.

The score was the highest bowled in the mixed league this season and the highest at the Bowl for the month of December.

May Play Saturday

'Sir' Stanley Of Stoke

LONDON (Reuters) — Stanley Matthews, the first professional footballer to be knighted, may play his first game of the season Saturday in Stoke City's English Football Association Cup match against Blackpool, his former club.

Stoke manager Tony Waddington has not ruled out the possibility of calling up the soccer maestro to play on the wing in Stoke's cup side.

Matthews, 50 next month, has been kept out of soccer this season with a back injury. He has played in only two games, both friendlies, but now that he is quite fit he might join Stoke's wing problem.

Injuries to regular wingers have forced Waddington to play Calvin Palser, a wing half, and Peter Dobing, an inside - forward, as wing forwards in recent matches.

If Matthews does play, he will surely be greeted with the biggest cheer of his brilliant career when he runs on Stoke's Victoria Ground at the start of the match.

Saturday's third round ties bring the giants of the first and second division into competition for the first time this season. Cup fever will be running high at all 32 grounds, especially at Darlington, in Durham, and Torquay, Devon.

Darlington, struggling in the lower half of the fourth division, is at home to mighty Arsenal, and Torquay, also in the fourth, entertains glamorous Tottenham Hotspur.

Darlington's team cost only about £3,000, and £2,500 of that was for right half Ray Yeoman.

Lawrence Morgan, the Darlington manager, is reported as saying:

"I wouldn't be surprised if we pulled it off. Arsenal have a habit of going out to the underdogs."

Offers To Forfeit All Wins

ATLANTA (AP)—The University of Georgia has offered to forfeit all its 1964 football victories, including the Sun Bowl game with Texas Tech, because of the pro signing of tackle Jim Wilson before the season ended.

None of the seven institutions whose teams lost to Georgia has accepted the offer, the Atlanta Journal reported Monday.

Dr. O. C. Aderhold, president of the university, wrote the presidents of the other institutions, as the current athletic director Joel Eaves and football coach Vince Dooley.

"I have written Dr. Aderhold that Georgia Tech most certainly will not accept the offer to forfeit," said Dr. Edwin Harrison, president of Georgia Tech—the Atlanta-based rival of Georgia.

Wilson admitted he signed an undated contract with Boston Patriots of the American Football League last fall in violation of college regulations.

The signing was disclosed after Wilson signed with the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League following the Sun Bowl game Dec. 26. Both teams are claiming Wilson.

Texas Tech, which lost to Georgia in the bowl game, rejected the forfeiture offer. "We wouldn't ask or expect any forfeit," said athletic director Polk Robinson of Texas Tech. Georgia just gave us a sound country lickin' and as far as we are concerned, it stays that way.

Similar comments came from Athletic director Bernie Shively of the University of Kentucky and Jack Green, Vanderbilt football coach, and coach Ray Graves of Florida.

Coach Frank Howard of Clemson said: "That's very generous of them—and I don't know of anybody who needs wins any more than I do, but I wouldn't take mine that way."

Fight for WBA Title

Terrell, Machen Matched

CHICAGO (AP)—Ernie Terrell of Chicago and Eddie Machen of Portland, Ore., signed Monday to fight for the World Boxing Association's version of the world heavyweight title. The bout will be held in Chicago's International Amphitheatre March 5 under the promotion of Ivy Schoenwald, veteran Chicago fight promoter and manager.

"Machen has a guarantee of $20,000 but there is none for Terrell," said Schoenwald. "Each will get 30 per cent of the receipts. There is no return clause.

"The amphitheatre will seat 12,000. If it is filled, the gate should reach $1,00,000. Right now I expect a gate of $60,000 to $70,000. We are negotiating for television and radio coverage, but nothing is definite on it."

The WBA declared the heavyweight title vacant last summer after stripping Cassius Clay of his championship.

In the WBA's most recent rankings, Terrell was named No. contender with former titleist Floyd Patterson second, followed by George Chuvalo of Toronto and Machen.

Clay was missing from the top 10 and so was Sonny Liston whom Clay defeated for the crown.

The Machen-Terrell winner apparently will meet the winner of the Patterson Chuvalo fight scheduled for Feb. 1 in New York.

Terrell was to have fought Cleveland Williams for the WBA heavyweight title, but Williams was shot and wounded in a fracas with a policeman in Houston Nov. 29 and has been removed from the ratings indefinitely.

Worth Million Says Ryan

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Frank Ryan of champion Cleveland Browns of the National Football League says that if Joe Namath is worth $400,000, he's worth $1,000,000.

Ryan made the comment after watching Namath, the star Alabama quarterback, perform against Texas in the Orange Bowl at Miami Friday night.

"Namath is the best college quarterback I've seen this year," said Ryan. "He has all the tools. It's a big hop, though, and he'll have to keep all those tools.

"But, if he's worth $400,000, I'm worth a million."

Ryan, 28, is a veteran of seven NFL seasons and earns about $25,000 a year.

Mamath was signed by New York Jets of the American Football League for a total of about $400,000 for three years.

Rolls 265 10-Pin Single

Gord Thompson, of the International Hardware Mixed League, came up with a sparkling 10-pin game at the Belleville Bowl last night.

Thompson started his game with three spares and finished up with nine strikes for a 265 single, 35 pins short of a perfect game.

The score was the highest bowled in the mixed league this season and the highest at the Bowl for the month of December.

City Bantams Picton Play To 4-4 Tie

Belleville's bantam Oddfellows battled to a 4-4 exhibition tie in Picton last night in a game that saw most of the scoring come in the final period.

It was a 1-1 game at the end of the first and the teams played a scoreless middle frame.

In the third, see-saw period, first Belleville, then Picton and Belleville again, held leads. Picton tied it 4-4 with the final goal with just 30 seconds left to play. Baverstock was the marksman, after Picton had pressed six attackers into action.

Oddfellow scorers were Royea, Waite, MacCormack and Lamston. Assists went to Jantsch, Mallory, Lamston and Royea.

Kilfoil scored twice for Picton and March got the other goal before Baverstock begged the hero. McCormell had two assists, Baverstock, Tripp and Culver one apiece.

The Oddfellows, who travel to Gananoque for an OMHA game on Wednesday, are undefeated in 11 scheduled games, according to manager George Cole. They have chalked up five shutouts.

Surging Habs Big Threat To Hawks

Three Points Up

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens launched the new year victoriously—coming out ahead in a collision of two winning streaks high up in the National Hockey League standings.

The Rosers were Chicago Black Hawks, who had gone 13 games without a loss before the Canadiens knocked them for a loop.

Not only did the Canadiens add two points to their NHL lead, they extended their unbefeated string to seven games by taking Chicago's measure 2-1 in a Sunday game.

Chicago had started its own new year with a 2-1 win over New York Rangers.

Weekly NHL statistics released today show Montreal entrenched atop the league standings with 45 points, three more than Chicago.

Detroit Red Wings are third with 38 points, three more than Toronto Maple Leafs. Rangers are fifth with 28 points followed by Boston Bruins with 20.

While no longer rocket-powered, the Canadiens have won 23 of their last 17 games and tied two others. Chicago won 11 and tied three of its last 17 for 25 of a possible 34 points.

Detroit had 18 points for the same number of games, Toronto 15, Boston 11 and Rangers eight. New York won only two of the 17 and has gone nine games at home without a victory.

Individual scoring leader? Does guess and no prizes.

Chicago's Bobby Hull, with a modest three-goal week, now has 33 points including 32 goals in 35 games.

Hull has a 13-point lead over team-mate Stan Mikita and is virtually assured of collecting $500 as first-half leader. Formal word will come after all teams have played 35 games.

Mikita, whose 40 points include a league-leading 28 assists, is almost certain to win the $250 runner-up award.

Charlie Hodge of Canadiens still leads Roger Crozier of Detroit in the goaltenders' battle. He has a four-goal lead. Both Hodge and Crozier have one game to play before the mid-way leader can be determined.

The leaders:

Terrell Rated Top Heavy

TORONTO (CP)—Ernie Terrell of Chicago remains the No. 1 ranked heavyweight in the latest boxing ratings released here Monday by the World Boxing Association.

The WBA considers the heavyweight title vacant and lists neither Cassius Clay nor Sonny Liston. Both were suspended by the WBA when they signed for a rematch to their 1964 title fight when Clay beat Liston.

Terrell is scheduled to meet fourth-ranked Eddie Machen of Portland, Ore., March 5 in Chicago for the WBA version of the heavyweight crown.

Nos. 2 and 3 in the January rankings, former champion Floyd Patterson and George Chuvalo of Toronto, will fight Feb. 1 in New York. The winner of that match will then fight the winner of the Terrell-Machen bout.

Cleveland Williams, original No. 1 choice to meet Terrell, is still not listed by the WBA. He was suspended after a fracas with a Houston policeman Nov. 29 in which Williams was shot.

Accent On Youth

Browns Start New Dynasty

By BARRY DAVIS

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns' stunning 27-0 victory over Baltimore Colts for the National Football League championship could mean the Browns have started a new dynasty such as the one that reigned from 1950-55?

There are people who think so, pointing to the youth that characterizes the club. Even counting placekicker Lou Groza, who is 40, the average age is only slightly more than 26.

Frank Ryan, at 28, now has spent two full seasons as the regular passer. His total of 25 touchdown passes in 1963 and 1964 was tied twice by Graham in the All-American Conference, but stands alone in Cleveland records for NFL play.

With Jim Ninowski as Ryan's backup man, Cleveland may have the best pair of quarterbacks in the league.

Jim Brown, Cleveland's incomparable fullback, has said he will play only two more years. However, the 29-year-old bruiser probably will revise that estimate by a couple of seasons.

Brown won the NFL rushing title last year for the sixth time in his seven years of pro ball and there are no indications he has lost either power or speed.

Other veterans over 30 giving no signs they are ready to switch to a less violent livelihood are offensive tackle Dick Modzelewski, 33, line backer and captain Galen Fiss, 33, linebacker Vince Costello, 31, and centre John Morrow, 31.

Flanker Gary Collins and end Paul Warfield are two of the brightest spots for the Browns. Warfield, a rookie last season, caught 33 passes for 920 yards and nine touchdowns in the regular season to lead the club in all three departments.

Blanton Collier, who succeeded Paul Brown after the latter was removed as head coach following the 1963 season, molded the team into Cleveland's first eastern division winner since 1957.

It's probably too soon to tell just how good Cleveland really is or how much potential it has. But the Browns have answered their critics for the 1964 season. A dynasty in the making? Maybe not, but the Browns have everything going for them.

'Painted Lady' Named After Butterfly

STOKE, England (AP)—The owners of Stoke's newest pub — the Painted Lady—assured the citizenry Monday the name is highly respectable.

Said landlady Joan Tandy: "When it was first announced that the pub would be known as the Painted Lady quite a few ladies in the neighborhood became agitated.

"One said it was disgraceful such a name should be placed in their midst. They even had a protest meeting. It's been a big laugh to me, for I knew that the pub was being named for a butterfly, not a lady of uncasy virtue."

She said she thought the petition, handed in by a committee, was so funny she just kept silent about the name.

"Everyone's happy now," she added.

The scientific name of the Painted Lady butterfly is vanessa cardui.

Year-End Selections

Olympics Athletes Given Clean Sweep

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Four Canadian athletes in the Tokyo Olympics last October came up with performances that made a big impact on the folks at home. The results showed up today in the 30th annual Canadian Press year-end poll of sports editors and sports-casters.

They planned the disappointment of the year tag on distance runner Bruce Kidd of Toronto, the comeback on sprinter Harry Jerome of Vancouver and the surprise and oddity on the bowlegs pair rowing gold medallists, Roger Jackson of Toronto and George Hungerford of Vancouver.

The 149 voters who participated in the nine-question poll gave Olympic athletes almost a clean sweep.

Earlier, they named Bill Crothers, of Markham, Ont., as 800-metre silver medallist at Tokyo, the outstanding male athlete of the year and Toronto figure skater Petra Burka, winner of a third-place bronze in the Austria Olympics last February, the outstanding female.

Kidd, 21, opened the Olympic track program with a 26th-place finish in the 10,000 metres. Three days later he failed to get past his heat in the 5,000 metres, finishing ninth in a field of 11.

HAD PULLED TENDONS

What went wrong? Five weeks after the Olympics it was learned Kidd had competed in Europe and North America for two years with pulled tendons in both ankles and an ailment in his left foot which required corrective surgery.

The CP poll voters noted this and a few of the 74 who jotted Kidd's name down in the disappointment list added this footnote: "Poor guy."

Four years ago world track experts said Kidd had the potential to become the greatest distance runner in the world. He justified their confidence with a gold medal in the six miles and a third-place bronze in the three—accomplished in a space of 48 hours—at the 1962 British Empire Games at Perth, Australia.

Now, with help from surgery, Kidd is looking forward to representing Canada at the 1966 B.E. Games in Jamaica, the 1967 Pan-American Games at Winnipeg and the Olympics in Mexico City in 1968.

Other disappointment votes were scattered among Toronto Argonauts and Winnipeg Blue Bombers, last-place finishers in the Eastern and Western Football Conferences; Hamilton Tiger-Cats, losers 34-24 to British Columbia Lions in the Grey Cup, and Canada's Olympic hockey team that finished fourth in Austria.

The surprise and comeback categories were taken easily by the Olympic oarsmen and Jerome.

SUBS WIN GOLD

Jackson and Hungerford were subs for the University of British Columbia-Vancouver Rowing Club eight at Tokyo and they entered the pairs event with no one giving them a chance for any kind of medal—let alone a gold.

They had been in the boat together only a few days when they faced the starting gun. They posted the fastest time of any in the three heats over the 2,000-metre distance and sailed into the final. Then they whipped the best in the world for the big prize.

It was sweet victory, particularly for Hungerford who was stricken with mononucleosis—a blood disease—just a few weeks before the Olympics and was taken off the eights because it was felt he wasn't strong enough.

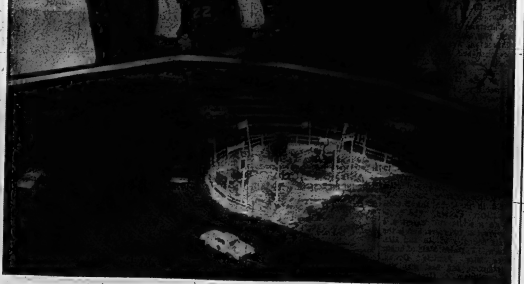
The Jackson-Hungerford two-some took most of the votes, although a few went to Canada's gold medal - beating bobsled team at Austria, the Lions beating the Tiger-Cats in the Grey Cup and a few other assorted sports happenings.

And 1964 was a big year for Jerome who had limped off the track as a loser in the 1960 Olympics at Rome and the 1962 B.E. Games. He was the co-world record holder over 100 metres, but had not won a medal in three big international competitions—the 1959 Pan-Am Games, the 1960 Olympics and the B.E. Games three years ago.

A thigh injury had put him on crutches for a year after his Perth races and he made a triumphant comeback at Tokyo with a bronze medal in the short sprint and a fourth in the 200 metres. He was beaten by inches for a silver in the 100 and for a bronze in the furlong.

Napanee Loses To Apple Kings

TRENTON (Special) — Napanee Legion fell before a strong Trenton Apple King crew to the tune of 8-3 in an OHA Eastern Junior puck fixture played at Napanee last night.



The victory, Trenton's fifth against as many losses, moved the Kings into third place in the loop standing, behind Gananoque and Belleville.

Trenton and Picton Merchants clash in back-to-back games this week. Picton comes here Wednesday and Kings repay the visit Thursday. The Merchants are just two points behind Trenton and have a game in hand.

Trenton outshot Napanee 33-21 and led by periods 4-0 and 5-2 in last night's penalty-riddled affair. There were 19 penalties in all, capped by roughing misconduct and fighting majors to Cook, of the losers, and the Kings' Bob Fellows at 14.41 of the third period.

Les Genereaux spearheaded the Apple King attack with a nifty three-goal performance. Ross Quigley fired two goals with one apiece for Dave Johnson, Rick O'Donnell and Don Morrison.

INDOOR CAR RACING — The thrill of sports car racing goes indoors in miniature. The first model car racing centre was recently opened in Vancouver and centres are expected to pop up across the country. The tiny plastic-bodied cars powered by electric motors hurtle around the track following a slot or groove around the track under the control of their individual drivers. The car's speed is regulated by the the amount of power it picks up from electrical contacts built into the track. (CP Photo)

Gordie Howe's Hockey

By GORDIE HOWE

My youngest son, Murray four years old already wants to take up hockey.

"Look how much fun Marty and Mark are having," he used to say when he watched them playing on our back yard rink." So I guess it's just natural that he should love the game and want to get into it.

This is his second year on skates. I'm doing the same with him as I did with Marty and Mark, his older brothers, as well as Cathy, his sister.

To get the youngsters started, I bought them good equipment. I also put a helmet on them. And if they didn't have a heavy jacket, I might even put elbow pads on them to give them a certain amount of protection.

The helmet is a definite must. So are good-fitting skates.

Then I put them out on the ice. Instead of holding their hands, to help them keep their balance, I gave them a wooden chair and let them push it around.

They'll push the chair ahead of them as they try to skate. They fall a lot at first, but by having the chair to grab as they went down, they didn't hurt themselves very much when they fell.

They also used the chair to push the chair all over the ice.

I think the worst thing you can do is hold a youngster's hand. He's always looking for your hands. It'll delay him in gaining a certain degree of confidence. In developing his sense of balance and ability to stride.

Eventually he says to heck with the chair and pushes it away. He takes off. He'll spill but he's got the confidence. And he's had the thrill of gliding along the ice.

Doug Young who captained the Red Wings when they won the Stanley Cup in 1936 and again in 1937 also helped them in their early skating sessions. Now our Cathy wants to be a figure skater.

Burgess Meredith Replaces Dean Jagger in Mr. Novak

Red Wings Beat Junior Farm Club

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP)—Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League scored five unanswered goals in the first period Monday and coasted to a 9-3 exhibition victory over Hamilton Red Wings, their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A farm club.

Pit Martin and Bruce MacGregor led the Detroit scorers with two goals each. Floyd Smith, Normie Ullman, Parker Macdonald, Ron Murphy and Alex Delvecchio added singles.

Peter Ververgaert, Don Giesebrecht and Bart Crashley scored the Hamilton goals in the third period after Detroit had scored four times in the second.

The Detroit team played without left-winger Ted Lindsay and defencemen Bill Gadsby — but both will be in the lineups in Montreal Wednesday. Gadsby has been out for a month with a charleyhorse.

Hamilton coach Danny Lewicki used pre-forward line made up of Gerry Abel, son of Detroit coach Sid Abel, Peter Mahovlich, brother of Toronto Frank Mahovlich, and Jimmy Peters, former teammate of former Detroit players.

SESSION FEB. 16

FREDERICTON (CP) — The 1963 session of the New Brunswick Legislature will open in Fredericton Feb. 16, Premier Louis Robichaud announced Monday. The address in reply to the speech from the throne will be moved by Charlotte County Liberal Alfred Hawkins and will be seconded by Northumberland Liberal member Norbert Theriault.

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Burgess Meredith went to Hollywood a few weeks ago for a double-header guest appearance in NBC's Mr. Novak.

On his first day, the show's co-star, Dean Jagger, went into the hospital with a recurrence of a stomach ailment. On Meredith's third day on the set, he was offered Jagger's job.

The actor finished his original assignment, playing an English teacher, named Martin Woolridge "who was in a cantankerous state because of his wife's advancement—a bit bitter because he was entering middle age and felt he had not done very well."

Fortunately for the show's continuity, Woolridge recognizes his problems and all ends happily. And, in the next program, viewers will find before too long, Woolridge suddenly is the high school principal.

Meredith who dashed back to New York to move his wife and children to the coast, said he was not definitely sure how he would slide into the principal's chair. He understood, however, that the sudden disappearance of Mr. Vane, the character played by Jagger, would be explained by his sudden decision to run for political office.

"The new principal will not be in the least like Mr. Vane," Meredith said. "Of course he will take shape according to the direction and the writers. I do feel though that he shouldn't be made too awfully nice — he should have some of his faults left."

Meredith, who is 55, has been a stage and film star for years, and estimates that he appears only in about one TV show as a guest star each season.

Basketball Game Cancelled

A spokesman for the Belleville Lightfoots basketball team said this morning that their scheduled game against Picton has been cancelled at the last minute Monday night.

Picton was scheduled to play a home Bay of Quinte League game against the Lightfoots here in Belleville at Quinte Secondary School gym. Picton does not have a "home" court in Picton. The game was slated for 8:00 p.m.

Picton called Belleville at 7:15, according to the Lightfoots' Don Smith, and said they were "unable to get enough players to field a team".

Picton's entry in the five-team grouping has had a number of games postponed and changed on the schedule to date, apparently because of court and player problems.

Smith said he did not know what would be done about last night's game.

Ski Picture Brightened By Snowfall

TORONTO (CP) — Weekend snowfalls have brightened the southern Ontario ski picture after a dreary holiday week between Christmas and New Years.

Unseasonably mild and rainy weather during the last two weeks of 1964 made it necessary for several southern Ontario ski centres to use snow-making machines. Most resorts operated at a loss to small crowds.

But a heavy snow fall during the New Years weekend sent thousands of skiers to centres mostly reporting fair to good conditions.

At Horseshoe Valley in Barrie there now are about three inches of packed snow and conditions are good. Both Blue Mountain and Devil's Glen at Collingwood report three inches of packed snow and fair to good conditions.

The Bay Motor resort at Owen Sound reports six inches of packed snow and the Don Valley slopes in Toronto five. Conditions are good at both centres.

At Summit, north of Toronto, the skiing is fair on a packed base. A spokesman for the Toronto Ski club said most areas in Muskoka are good.

At Hamilton an estimated 10,000 persons went to the city's new winter sports area with skis and tobogans after a weekend snowfall of about five inches.

In Northern Ontario, where there has been a general abundance of fine snow since, conditions are reported good and in some parts of the Lakehead are excellent.

It was the 30-year-old right hander's 13th contract with the American League club.

Last season Kaline, bothered by a sore foot, batted .295. He hit 17 home runs and batted in 68 runs.

Kissing Actresses Provide An Anniversary Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This is an anniversary of sorts, marking the 20th year the above byline has appeared atop a Hollywood column.

Does such an occasion call for a sweeping survey, of two turbulent decades in the movie world? Possibly. But I prefer to present a thesis on a subject that is, I believe, untouched in the literature of Hollywood: The kissing of actresses.

I discovered early that kissing is a normal form of greeting among entertainment folk. Actresses have been known to kiss telegram boys. Comedians kiss each other at testimonial banquets. Cowboys kiss their horses, but that is an entirely different matter.

The recipient of the kiss is of small concern; it is the custom that counts. It has been reported, and I see no reason to doubt it, that Judy Garland has kissed the entire backstage crew upon exiting from a single performance.

My introduction to the local custom was traumatic. Newly married, I was standing with my wife in the lobby of the Biltmore Theatre between acts of a play. Betty Hutton, who was between husbands at the time, walked up with a noisy greeting and planted a kiss on my lips.

"Meet Betty Grable," I said nervously to my wife, wiping the plentiful lipstick from my face.

KISSES ON MOUTH

Miss Hutton is an on-the-mouth kisser, a rarity in Hollywood where actresses must be ever mindful of their makeup. The most common forms are:

1. The cheek-to-cheek double pucker. The two parties rub cheeks and emit simultaneous smacking sounds. This is one of the more affectionate greetings and among its able practitioners are Lana Turner and Ann Sothern. Hazard: The mask can end up with a hard-to-explain lipstick smudge on his ear.

2. The cheek-to-cheek single pucker. A more formal procedure, the actress tilts her cheek to receive the kiss on her cheek but does not respond. This is the method employed by Bette Davis, although I frankly have been too scared of her to try it.

3. The across-crowded room kiss. The long-distance greeting, most frequently used in studio commissaries, is a simple pucker directed from one table to another. A non-contact kiss is never thrown, except by Dinah Shore on television.

4. The European decoration. "You may kiss me Continental-style," said Olivia de Havilland when I saw here recently. She offered both cheeks for a double kiss, like that of a soldier and a French general, only better. This method is employed by many who come from or live in Europe, especially the Latin countries.

Cross-Canada Survey

Parish-Pump Politics Delay Many Local Centennial Schemes

By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The first few months of 1963 should see decisions made by hundreds of newly elected city and town councils across Canada on the local centenary projects for their communities.

Most of the major federal and provincial government building projects have been decided on for the observance of the 100th anniversary of Confederation. Some are well under way; some completed.

But a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press found that decisions at the local level have been held up in many cases by local political controversy.

Municipal elections now out of the way, decisions will have to be made. As Prime Minister Pearson put it, there are fewer than 25 shopping months left before 1967.

The situation in Ottawa is typical of many communities of all sizes, but made more dramatic by the size of the federal government contribution to the city as the country's federal capital, and the vim and vigor of municipal politics in the city.

A $10,000,000 National Library building west of Parliament Hill on Wellington Street is to be completed in 1966. Plans and tenders have been called for a $19,000,000 performing arts centre on the banks of the Rideau Canal in centretown, to be ready in 1967.

PLAN MUSEUM

Federal government projects to be completed in Ottawa after 1967 include such centenary projects as a $20,000,000 museum of human and natural history, a $15,000,000 museum of science and technology, and a new $25,000,000 national art gallery, all near the performing arts centre.

All of this amounts to nearly $85,000,000 worth of new federal buildings for the centenary. By comparison, Ottawa's municipal plan for the centenary is about $785,000, including federal and provincial grants.

But Ottawa's municipal monument to Confederation is still undecided and part of the hard-fought local election campaign which ended in the defeat of Mayor Charlotte Whitton by 38-year-old John Reid, a quiet, business-like member of the Board of Control.

There has been talk of a major overhaul and expansion of Lansdowne Park—football stadium-grounds and football stadium—and of construction of a great new winter sports centre-rink-river from the Parliament Buildings.

There also has been talk of a monument to Col. By, a city founder, and even of a program of burying Ottawa's unsightly overhead wiring.

But no decisions have been made in Newfoundland, yet on projects employing a single grant of $1 per capita being put up by Ottawa, to be matched by $1 contributed by the province and $1 to be raised locally.

Nova Scotia's major federal-provincial project is to be a $2,000,000 medical centre at Dalhousie University, commemorating Dr. Charles Tupper, a Nova Scotia Father of Confederation.

Locally throughout Nova Scotia there are to be a Cape Breton miners' museum at Glace Bay, a library and museum at Amherst, an arena at Port Hawkesbury, recreational centre at Windsor and a library and museum at Dartmouth.

Abbie Lane, chairman of the provincial centennial committee, says the group is first weeding out the undesirable projects and there is "the usual difference of opinion on most of the projects, but they have been submitted as the wish of the majority and we have accepted them as such."

OPENED BY QUEEN

Prince Edward Island's major centenary project was the Fathers of Confederation' Memorial Centre opened by the Queen in October in Charlottetown. The island province held its main celebrations in 1964 to mark the 100th anniversary of the pro-Confederation Charlottetown conference, at which delegates from the Maritime provinces and Upper and Lower Canada agreed in principle to seek union.

Charlottetown may build a $20,000,000 causeway by 1967, but the province's next big transportation likely will be held in 1973 the 100th anniversary of Prince Edward Island's joining Confederation after it rejected the 1867 deal.

New Brunswick is spending $11,500,000 on federal grant on a new provincial office building in Fredericton, relieving space problems and buildings for provincial archives.

Tentative plans by local governments include a square-mile for Saint John, restoration of an old military compound in Fredericton, and transformation to the community park in Moncton. Other communities are planning projects commemorating the province's historic connection with the sea and with forestry.

QUEBEC ACTIVE

Quebec appears further advanced than most other provinces in centenary project planning. The province is planning a major conservatory of music in Quebec City, and took a firm hand in guiding the development of community and recreational centres in 60 regional locations.

Expo '67, the world's fair, is the main project of the city of Montreal, and of the federal and provincial governments. After the exhibition is over, much of its major buildings will be retained as a cultural development on St. Helen's Island, in the harbor, and even in the main project for the Province of Ontario is a centenary theatre, a new concept in technology on 180 acres of Don Valley land in northeastern Toronto, its first phase of which will cost $5,000,000. Toronto's major municipal project is the St. Lawrence Centre for the Performing Arts, rehabilitating the old St. Lawrence market and farmer's market in downtown Toronto.

Throughout Ontario, the most popular local projects are parks, community centres and municipal buildings. Many authorities negotiated an agreement with all provinces to bar centennial grants for such ordinarian projects as street and sidewalk repairs and sewage and sanitary improvements, suggested by some Ontario communities.

MINTER QUIET

Manitoba will have a new arts centre in Winnipeg, built with $2,500,000 from the federal government, and a $1,000,000 grant from the province, with an estimated $11,500,000 put up locally by the city and private citizens, causing the site roused controversy that precipitated the resignation of Maitland Steinkopf as provincial secretary. He later won re-election to the legislature and returned to his cabinet post.

Brandon is to have a new multi-purpose auditorium, and a centenary building will be located in the International Peace Garden on the Manitoba-North Dakota border, south of Brandon. Plans are being made for special centenary editions of the winter and summer fairs in Brandon, the Red River Exhibition in Winnipeg, the Trout Festival at Flin Flon and the Trappers' festival at The Pas.

Saskatchewan's major federal-provincial project is new auditoriums being built in Regina and Saskatoon. Moose Jaw is undecided between expansion of its zoo and construction of a new recreation centre. Prince Albert is planning two celebrations—the 1968 centenary of its founding and the 1967 centenary of Confederation.

START ARCHIVES

Alberta's federal - provincial project is the start on museum and archives building in Edmonton to be built in three stages over the next 14 years. Mayor Milton Watson and family is a $2,400,000, six-storey centennial library.

A $1,250,000 planetarium, followed by a hall of natural science, a $500,000 centennial recreation and community centre, are planned for Calgary's Mewata area, west of the downtown section. Medicine Hat has plans considering a $1,000,000 swimming pool, auditorium and theatre centre.

The provincial-provincial project for British Columbia is a $3,000,000 provincial museum in Victoria. There are 330 local committees in the province and more than two-thirds of them have declared they will have some kind of centennial celebration or project.

But the province is not pressing the local authorities yet for decisions. The province prefers to have local projects planned more closely to late 1966 or early 1967.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort; it shrinks and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

Doo hemorrhoidal case history after case showed real improvement. Piles were practically cut down in case of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful; it helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Russia Opposes Sukarno's Move To Abandon UN

China Alone Approves Indonesian Intention

By ANTOINE YARED

JAKARTA (AP)—Russia and China were locked in a diplomatic tug-of-war today over Indonesia's decision to withdraw from the United Nations.

Peking approved. Moscow disapproved.

Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Mikhailov met Tuesday night with Indonesian Foreign Minister Subandrio. Reliable diplomatic sources said the Russian told Subandrio the Kremlin believes Indonesian withdrawal from the UN will aggravate the tense situation in eastern Asia.

Chinese Ambassador Yao Chung-ming called on Subandrio twice today to communicate Peking's solid backing for President Sukarno's decision. Peking radio earlier today expressed "firm support" of the Indonesian action, and the official People's Daily called the United Nations "a vile place for a few powers to share the spoils."

It was the first expression of support from a foreign government for Sukarno's decision.

OTHERS CALL

U.S. Ambassador Howard Jones and the envoys of Pakistan, Czechoslovakia, and Poland also called on Subandrio. Their meetings all were reported related to Indonesia's withdrawal from the world organization.

Subandrio is scheduled to meet Thursday with the ambassadors from the United Arab Republic, Algeria and the Philippines.

The Russians also are known to fear the threat of Chinese domination over this part of the world and have repeatedly sought to discourage Afro-Communist parties from associating closely with Peking.

Political observers in Jakarta have expressed concern that withdrawal from the UN would force Indonesia closer to China.

MAY RECONSIDER

At UN headquarters in New York, it was speculated that Sukarno would reconsider his decision to pull out. One indication of this was there that Sukarno acted on his own and that his top ministers were disagreed.

Indonesia's chief UN delegate, L. N. Palar, planned to fly to Jakarta New Year's Eve night for instructions "to finalize the action that we have taken here," his deputy, Samarjo Sosrowardjo, said Tuesday.

He refused to comment on speculation that Palar hoped to get Sukarno to reconsider.

In giving notice of intention to withdraw from the UN, the

OUT FROM UNDER — Cars in the Vancouver area, snowed in since Christmas, are re-appearing from the drifts. Members of the armed forces and prisoners have been told to stand by for snow-removal chores as the West Coast fights back after four weeks of heavy snowfall and freezing temperatures.

Residents of B.C. Are Waiting Anxiously To Discover Whether Winter's Storm Over

VANCOUVER (CP) — Residents of British Columbia's lower mainland played a waiting game with the weather today as an unusually snowy winter that has engulfed the area for four weeks appeared to be easing.

No respite from the freezing temperatures was in sight today, but neither was any snow. The weatherman was forecasting a mixture of rain and snow and temperatures hovering at the freezing mark.

Snowfalls in the Vancouver and Victoria areas in the last few days have been light, but a storm that hit Nanaimo on Vancouver Island Tuesday left nine inches of snow in its wake.

It forced schools to close and disrupted traffic on the Duncan-Nanaimo railway line to Courtenay. Schools were expected to remain closed today.

The interior city of Nelson also received nine inches of snow Tuesday, but most roads were open today. Schools were also open. Nelson has had a total snowfall of 79 inches this year.

In Vancouver, usually snow free the year round, city works crews were slowly winning their battle to clear secondary streets to traffic.

In West Vancouver, where some streets were still blocked with up to 10 feet of snow, schools were to open on schedule today after being closed for two days.

Milder temperatures and continuing runoff have lessened fears of flooding from a sudden thaw.

Medicare Bill Is Coming

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — After an absence of one year, medical and health insurance legislation will again come before the Ontario legislature, Premier Robarts indicated Tuesday.

He said the government hopes to reintroduce legislation first presented to the house in 1963 to make privately - operated medical insurance universally available in the province.

An inquiry committee appointed by Mr. Robarts in August, 1963, to study the medical services scheme failed to finish its work in time for consideration by the 1964 session of the house.

However, Mr. Robarts told a press conference he expects to have a report shortly from the inquiry committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. J. Gerald Hagey, and to make it public early in the 1965 session scheduled to begin Jan. 20.

The Medical Services Insurance Act was given approval in principle by the legislature in April, 1963, but no attempt was made to pass it into law at that time.

Instead, the Hagey committee

Viet Cong Forces Vanish

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP) — Large South Vietnamese forces combed the Binh Gia area today, but the Viet Cong enemy had melted away apparently into caves and jungle after scoring its biggest victory of the war over government forces.

Five South Vietnamese battalions, totalling about 2,000 troops, were around the town about 40 miles east of Saigon. A sixth was at nearby Vung Tau waiting for a sign of enemy action.

Any snag might delay the timetable to get the arrangement settled as fast as possible so that legislation can be put before Congress speedily.

Canada is understood to have given the U.S. a year in which to do that, and while administration officials have expressed confidence of fairly quick passage, delays could result if the legislation is dragged out long.

The U.S. also is still discussing the free-trade matter with

Canada And U.S. Expected to Sign Pact Next Week

Ottawa Denies Report Prices Will Be Slashed

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — A free-trade agreement on most motor vehicles and their components parts may be signed between Canada and the United States early next week, it was learned reliably today.

As planned, the lengthily - negotiated arrangement would give Canada's auto and parts industry a continental market and lead toward price cuts of some 17 per cent.

This is about the difference right now between Canadian and U.S. auto prices.

The present timetable is for Canada to sign the agreement after signing with the necessary cabinet decree, or order - in - council, before Jan. 15.

The arrangement itself has been settled. But some details under it remain to be worked out.

One concerns Canadian government discussions with General Motors about the company's undertaking to provide an expanded slice of the U.S. market to the Canadian plants.

It is understood here that General Motors, one of the big three dominating the North American auto industry, has expressed reservations about the short period for providing that expanded market as suggested by Canada.

It has argued that planned substantial investment in new production facilities should give it more leeway.

While this technically is a matter between Canada and General Motors, it remains a vital element in the entire agreement since General Motors produces about half of Canada's autos and trucks and is the American leader.

Any snag might delay the timetable to get the arrangement settled as fast as possible so that legislation can be put before Congress speedily.

Canada is understood to have given the U.S. a year in which to do that, and while administration officials have expressed confidence of fairly quick passage, delays could result if the legislation is dragged out long.

Draft Beer Prices to Be Hiked

TORONTO (CP) — New and smaller draft beer glasses that will give beverage room operators a greater margin of profit will be introduced in Ontario as soon as the beer glasses become available.

This was announced today by the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario, which said it was granting a request for an increase in the price of draft beer from the Ontario Hotel Association.

While the actual price per glass will remain at 15 cents, the capacity of the glass will be decreased to 7.6 ounces from the existing 8.5 ounces. A pilsener-type glass will be substituted for the present glass.

The fixed price for bottled beer in Ontario—25 cents for a 12-ounce bottle and 50 cents for a 22½-ounce bottle—is to be removed.

CAN SET OWN PRICE

This will allow beverage room operators to set their own prices for bottled beer. The Hotel Association had requested increases in the fixed prices to 35 cents and 70 cents for the different sized bottles.

The LLBO said the pilsener glasses requested by the association should be available by Feb. 5. It will become the "of-

China Says Border Violated

PEKING (Reuters) — China has strongly protested to India against a series of "very grave intrusions" by Indian troops along the China-Sikkim border, the China news agency reported today.

The agency said the Chinese foreign ministry delivered the protest in a note to the Indian Embassy here Jan. 3.

"In bluntly disregarding China's sovereignty and constantly expanding the scope of intrusion, India is obviously attempting to create tension and disturb the tranquillity along the China-Sikkim border," the note said, according to New China.

Mint Overrun by Mail Orders for Sets of Coins

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Canadian Mint has been overrun by a mail-order stampede for numismatic sets of 1965 coins. Thousands of orders piled up unfilled.

Finance Minister Gordon said Tuesday the unprecedented demand for the coin sets plus the mint's overtime efforts to fill rising bank orders for new coinage have far outstripped mint capacity.

New high - speed coin presses will be delivered to the mint in about six months, he said. Temporary production quarters were being arranged and additional permanent facilities were under active consideration.

Meanwhile, Mr. Gordon said a year's output of the numismatic—or coin collector—sets will be filled by accepting mailed applications in the order in which they are received and opened.

He did not say how many sets the mint expects to be able to produce this year but it was believed to be about 2,000,000. Orders beyond that level will be returned to the senders, along with cheques.

The sets comprise one coin of each denomination, ranging from a one-cent piece to a silver dollar. These coins are picked off the mint's presses with gloved hands to avoid even the smallest scratches, then are encased in plastic and packaged.

Each set has a face value of $1.91. Last year orders were limited to 50 sets a customer at a price of $3 for each set. This year, expecting the surge in demand, the mint raised the price to $4 and limited each customer to five sets.

Each year the mint accepts orders for these sets starting Jan. 3. Last year it received orders for 1,750,000 before cut-

Brutal Cold and Snow Decimating Western Game Bird Population

EDMONTON (CP) — Brutal cold, suffocating snow drifts, birds of prey and motorists are decimating Western Canada's game bird population.

A winter that has brought unprecedented snow to southern regions of Alberta and the cold-est ons in Saskatchewan since 1952 has resulted in the estimated loss of thousands and hundreds of thousands of Hungarian partridge in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Wildlife officials said Tuesday that 30 per cent of the last two breeds have died. Continued cold and snow could virtually wipe them out in some districts.

These estimates, are the sight of thousands of dead or half - starved birds along highways and around country grain elevators has brought action from several quarters. N. A. Willmore, Albert minister of lands and forests, said he would propose amending Alberta Game Act regulations this week to allow hawks and owls, which have been preying on the pheasant, to be shot until after the danger to the other birds had passed.

Prairie farmers have been asked to clear strips of land and to spread grain and gravel for the hungry birds. The Alberta lands and forests department has offered to pay for grain where farmers have none available — the first time such action has been taken in the province.

Pheasant hunting will likely be banned entirely in Alberta this year, predicted wildlife officials, who are planning to direct almost the entire brunt of stock of 4,000 pheasants to the stocking southern areas.

Manitoba and British Columbia game apparently have not totally suffered. Temperatures have dropped 30 to 50 degrees below normal throughout Alberta and Saskatchewan. But the snow, rather than cold, is the chief problem for non - native birds after weeks of blizzards and drifts.

In Saskatchewan, the only winter snowfall has been cleared away. Unable to break through the crust to get food, birds suffer starve to death or are so undernourished they are an easy prey for predators.

An appeal to farmers may have arrested the game deaths in southern Alberta, said Joe

Sir John A. Macdonald Plaque To Be Unveiled at Birthplace

LONDON (CP) — A plaque commemorating Sir John A. Macdonald will be unveiled Monday in the church of the Glasgow parish where Canada's first prime minister was born 150 years ago.

The aluminum plaque, erected by Ontario's Archaeological Historic Sites Board, will be unveiled by Sir John's great-grandson, Hugh Macdonald of Gainsford, who is flying from Winnipeg for the ceremony.

Ontario's agent general in Britain, J. S. P. Armstrong, will introduce Mr. Macdonald and Lionel Chevrier, Canadian high commissioner to London, will deliver an appreciation of Macdonald.

The dedication will be conducted by Rev. Matthew Liddell, minister of St. Paul's and St. David's in the Church of Scotland parish of Ramsborn.

Sir John was born in the parish Jan. 11, 1815, the third child of Hugh and Helen Macdonald, a family emigrated to Canada in 1820 and settled in Kingston, Ont.

The plaque reads:

"To the glory of God and in memory of Sir John A. Macdonald, 1815-1891, Canada's first prime minister, born Ramsborn parish, emigrating with his family to Kingston, Upper Canada, 1820.

"A successful lawyer, he was elected to the provincial legislature in 1844 and became leader of the Conservative party. He played a leading role in the effort to achieve federal union of British North American provinces which resulted in the formation of the Dominion of Canada on July 1st, 1867.

"He served as prime minister 1867-73 and 1878-91 and under his administration large territories were added to Canada, a trans-continental railway built and settlement of the West encouraged.

"At his death Canadian autonomy, based on rapid economic development and a close British - Canadian relationship, was assured."

Britain already has one other monument to Macdonald, chairman of the London conference of 1866-67 which resulted in the British North America Act.

It rests in the crypt of London's St. Paul's Cathedral and bears Macdonald's best-known saying: "A British subject I was born and a British subject I shall die."

The services are being held nightly from Monday to Friday at 8:00 p.m. The Ministerial Association, which is sponsoring the Week of Prayer, cordially invites the public to attend.

Wants Study of Feasibility Of Winter Lake Navigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator William Proxmire, Wisconsin Democrat, proposed today that $500,000 be appropriated for a study of the feasibility of keeping the Great Lakes shipping lanes open during the winter months.

Any significant extension of the shipping season of [illegible] would amply justify a de-icing system because great economic gains would result from it," Proxmire said in a statement."

If enacted, his bill would authorize investigation of problems involved in the development of de-icing systems, a review of data, information, reports and surveys relative to the establishment of de-icing systems and would apply the findings to the Great Lakes and Seaway region.

Senior Civil Servants Get Raise in Pay

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's 3,500 senior civil servants have been granted pay increases ranging from $600 to $3,000 a year, the first major pay raise in more than five years.

At the same time, hundreds of positions have been reclassified by the Progressive Conservative government by terms of Queen's-to-council published Tuesday in the Civil Service Association of Ontario Activity Report.

Major Shake-up In Education Dept. Coming

TORONTO (CP) — The elementary and secondary school branches of the department of education will be combined in a major shake-up of the department, it was learned Tuesday.

The reorganization was described by one source as the greatest in many years since the days of Egerton Ryerson (1803-1882), the man known as the founder of the educational system in Upper Canada.

A primary aim of the administrative changes is said to be the drawing of a clear distinction between the academic and business ends of a department which this year will spend more than $300,000,000.

The elementary and secondary school branches are being interwoven in order to eliminate overlapping of some of their duties.

New titles and changed responsibilities probably will result for the present deputy ministers of education, F. S. Rivers, top civil servant in the department, is expected to adopt the title of deputy minister.

the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Under GATT rules, the U.S. needs a waiver from other members in its arrangements with Canada. But since most other industrial countries continues to use various protective measures in tariffs and taxes, the U.S. feels it is on good bargaining ground and no concern is felt.

The free-trade talks grew last summer out of U.S. dissatisfaction with Canada's system of export incentives designed to diminish the big deficit in auto trade with the U.S.

Under the new scheme, replacement parts—as opposed to the parts which are imported to go directly into new vehicles—might be added later to the duty-free list.

The only motor vehicles to be excluded are certain off-highway or work vehicles, machines which are not licensed for road travel. These vehicles are produced chiefly by a few small companies which would face disaster if exposed to free trade.

Indonesians specified that they would retain membership in the UN specialized agencies, and would continue to cooperate. Subandrio said the government still expects to get about $50,000,000 a year in foreign aid from the Soviet bloc.

Meanwhile, military preparations continued in Malaysia, which fears Indonesia is leaving the UN in preparation for a major offensive against the Malaysian federation.

A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed on territorial waters off the southern tip of the Malaysian mainland, where a number of small Indonesian landings have taken place.

A Malaysian foreign ministry spokesman said the Kuala Lumpur government is preparing a formal protest to the United Nations, informing it of an increasing number of military threat and that Malaysia may need some form of defence assistance in the coming days.

British air, sea and ground forces are being reinforced in Malaysia, as a British Far Eastparatroopers from Britain; 1 to 2 completed Thursday and a Australian fighting unit; a frigate route from Hong Kong by Sunday. The British defence ministry said that part of the V-bomber force is on the alert in Cyprus to Malaysia if the crisis worsens.

The V-bombers carry British nuclear bombs, but a military spokesman indicated they would be armed only with conventional, 1,000-pound bombs if sent to Malaysia.

CHRISTMAS WEEK SWIM COMPETITION

Boys and girls of the Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. may have gone back to school and happily but among those boys and girls were happy winners of separate swim competitions held for them during the Christmas holidays.

On December 28th, the boys had their competition. For the Frogs and Junior Beginners the winners were first, Stephen Proulx, Robbie Allore and John Dixon. The boys were required to pick-up from the pool bottom the largest number of rubber rings, perform the Jelly-Fish float the longest time, bob in the water the largest number of times, swim two widths of the pool in the shortest time and perform the sight prone float for the longest distance. For the Prep boys of cards 1 to 3, Robert Cunningham came first while Paul Morton came second. They were required to swim one length on their backs free-style, two lengths of side-stroke, three lengths of free-style all for time, and perform a jelly fish front dive and surface dive both marked on style.

For Prep boys of cards 4 and 5 and advanced Bill Kirkman was the winner. Those boys taking part did one length crawl, one crawl, two lengths breast stroke and four lengths free style all for time, and a dive other than a plain front dive and a surface dive marked for style. The winner in this section was Jim Gilhespy.

The girls did the same events as the boys. The winners for Prep girls of cards 1 to 3 were first, Nancy Wormald, Judy De-Boer, and Lorna Schroder. In the Junior section Kathy Beam came first and Donna Kirkman came second of the three girls took part.

All who took part in the swim competition did very well and the Y.M.C.A. hopes there are better boys and girls for it.

Draft Beer

ficial" beer parlor glass Feb. 25.

The change-over means that the draft room beer-drinker will receive about an ounce less of suds than he has been used to receiving. This works out to a decrease in agricultural levies of per cent by volume.

The last increase in the price of draft beer in Ontario was in 1959, when the old six-ounce, 10-cent glass sank into oblivion and the 8.5-ounce, 15-cent glass was introduced.

The Liquor Licence Board said it was felt that some adjustment with respect to the sale of draught beer to the consumer in licensed premises was necessary to assist licencees to meet their costs.

MAY HELP DECOR

The higher beer profits would be used to make improvements could be made in the decor of beer parlors, the announcement said.

"Emphasis will be placed on upgrading some of the establishments whose licences were granted before 1934 to those many of these could not be granted today by the board."

The thinner glass to be introduced in beverage rooms has a thin, concave body expanding into a wide neck. It is slightly taller than the existing straight-sided glass.

Filled to the brim the pilsner glass would hold 9.5 ounces of beer, but a tide line is marked on the glass at the 7.5-ounce level.

The glass now in use, filled to the brim, holds 10.3 ounces, but has a tide line at the 8.5-ounce mark.

The Liquor Licence Board indicated that eventually the fixed price for draft beer will be removed in the province, allowing beverage room operators to charge what the traffic will bear.

a 14-member group represent-ative of all interested parties, was appointed to delve into the particulars of the scheme not outlined in the draft legislation.

Mr. Robarts said he has not yet received the committee's official report, but he added:

"I would hope it would be available in the early days of the session because I'm anxious to get the report and take action on it."

The Hanley committee is expected to steer clear of any recommendations for a publicly operated, compulsory medical care scheme for Ontario, since the committee's terms of reference dictated that its studies should centre around privately-operated health insurance.

The bill proposed by the government would set minimum benefits for medical insurance plans offered by private carriers, at the same time stipulating the maximum premiums they could charge.

The insurance companies would be required to sell plans to all persons who requested them regardless of age. The government would finance insurance for indigent and would subsidize them in low income groups. Means tests would decide who would be recipients of the government aid.

In 1963 Health Minister Matthew B. Dymond estimated the cost of this at $30,000,000 a year. He said insurance would be free to the indigent and subsidies would have to be paid to help some 300,000 to 600,000 persons in marginal income groups purchase medical insurance.

Premier Robarts said then that the government plan would not affect the 70 per cent of the population already covered by private insurance and in his view, the traditional doctor-patient relationship would not be disturbed.

The Hagey committee will likely recommend levels of benefits and how they should be paid them in future; levels of premiums for various medical services to be included in the insurance; the type of means test and the graded subsidies for marginal income groups.

At his press conference, Premier Robarts also promised to make a statement as soon as possible about the possibility of Ontario's participation in the Canada Pension Plan.

His government is studying the provisions of the pension plan bill now before the House of Commons, he said.

In Saigon, the government issued a communique denying rumors of impending negotiations with the Communists to end the war.

China hailed the Binh Gia battle as a "great victory" for the Communist forces. It said it showed the Viet Cong no longer are guerrilla fighters but have grown into a "formidable liberation army."

The U.S. embassy warned South Viet Nam that American aid at the rate of $1,000,000 a day "can be ineffective without a stable government in Saigon."

The warning was contained in a statement issued Tuesday by the embassy after more than two weeks of stalemated efforts for a solution to the country's political crisis.

An embassy spokesman said the statement on U.S. aid was issued to correct "misapprehensions" in the South Vietnamese press regarding U.S. policy.

Drunk Driving Brings Two Weeks in Jail

TRENTON — "A policeman's lot is not a happy one," was aptly illustrated in magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday when Magistrate T. Y. Wills heard three cases which involved danger to local officers.

On the evening of December 21, Sgt. Gordon Steenburg escaped serious injury when he was forced to jump from the running board of a truck driven by John H. Regan of R. R. 1, Frankford, on the town bridge. Regan was charged with drunk driving in court yesterday and will spend the next two weeks in jail. Police were alerted after Regan forced a car off the road on Front Street.

On the evening of December 8, Constable Roy Miller attempted to flag down a car with its lights out on Dundas St. The driver, 21-year-old William K. Rogers of Belleville, put his lights on and "took off," down the Belleville Road, at speeds exceeding 70 m.p.h. the officer pursuing in a cruiser. OPP from Belleville joined in the chase but Rogers was eventually stopped the Poole car by blocking the road. Poole, who pleaded guilty to driving while his ability was impaired, was fined $100 and ordered to pay court costs of $8.

Magistrate Wills has prohibited him from driving for one year.

Poole, who because of his age and a record of previous convictions, has been paying an annual insurance premium of $1,000, has already had his licence to Toronto and will get a rebate on this year's premium.

Bank Caretaker For 17 Years Retires at 84

TRENTON — Charles London, of 164 West St., in his 84th year, last week retired as caretaker at the Toronto-Dominion bank in Trenton, where he had served for 17 years, he said.

Before taking on the caretaker's job, Mr. London had worked for 26 years for the Canadian Pacific Express, and retired on a pension.

Mr. London enjoys good health and will devote his time to his hobbies, reading and flower gardening.

OLD TIMES RECALLED

Trenton area viewers of last week's CBC "Close Up" recalled with nostalgia the early 30s in Trenton, when the full-length film, "Carry On Sergeant" was in the making.

The old film plant was located in the building on Film St. now occupied by the Trenton Forging and Stamping Plant.

Stars of the Bruce Bairnsfather picture lived in the Gilbert House or rented private apartments and many towns' people recall making the odd dollar by acting as extras in the movie scenes.

Scenes were shot in a "mock up" false front French village near St. George's Cemetery or on the grounds of the Trenton Cold Storage plant.

Hockey Team Makes Offer For Ice Time

TRENTON— Howard Weese, manager of the Trenton Junior "C" hockey team, met with the Trenton Community Gardens' Commission on Monday to prefor his latest offer for payment of ice rental time at the Gardens. Mr. Weese offered to pay the standard $15 an hour for practice time and $15 an hour for three hours for regular and exhibition games, plus $5 per game, a 50-50 split of gate receipts for games, but insisted Mr. Weese back next Monday's meeting to further discuss his offer—or come up with a new one.

"The door is still open to the Junior Cs," Mr. Senik told a meeting yesterday, "but the board can't gamble with the public's money, and we think accepting Mr. Weese's latest offer would be just that."

Drove Vehicle Under Ban, Given 2 Months

TRENTON — Silas Mills of 197 Sidney Street, was sentenced to two months in jail by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in Trenton court yesterday, after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while prohibited. The court was told Mills had served six months in 1963 after he was found guilty of a Port Arthur court of criminal negligence. At that time he was prohibited driving for three years. The latest offence occured on Nov. 24.

GUILTY OF THEFT

Raphael Franklin Noble, RCAF, pleaded guilty in Trenton court yesterday to the theft of a toilet paper dispenser from the Quinte Motel and to damaging the telephone booth adjacent to west end motel, on town bridge. He also pleaded guilty to the charge of being intoxicated in public place. Noble was fined $20 on the three charges and will pay court costs of $9 plus restitution to the motel for dispenser and $12 for the telephone receiver, which he yanked from its mounting and threw in the river. The receiver was recovered, floating 20 feet from shore.

BIG BILLING

At the turn of the century, a circus calliope was billed as "The Wonderful Operonicon or Steam Car of the Muses."

Two-Year Ban After Wild Car Chase

TRENTON — Magistrate T. Y. Wills told spectators in Trenton court on Tuesday he heard what the magistrate termed "a comedy," when Constable Gary Davis recounted to the court a police chase on Dundas St. and by Ameliasburg youth, Brian W. Irvine, 19, and which involved a high speed drive from Trenton in a cruiser and two from Belleville in a cruiser and covered more than 30 miles at speeds between 75 and 90 mph. Irvine was charged with driving while impaired.

Constable Davis said he and Constables Frederick Nokes and Roger Camp had started to follow Irvine's car on Dundas St. West in the early morning hours of Jan. 3. Irvine drove across the town bridge and down Dundas St. East at high speed, ignoring red lights, passing cars on curves and double lines and disregarding warning signals from the police car, which included the siren, flashing red light and beams from a flashlight. The two cars drove through 40 mph speed zones in Trenton and into Belleville, where the Trenton cruiser's chase was joined by a Belleville cruiser. At one point, Irvine drove his car up over the curb onto the sidewalk in front of the police and again in order to evade the Belleville cruiser. Doing this, he almost struck a hydro pole and missed an oncoming car. "Phew, I don't know," said the testifying constable.

The Irvine car with the two cruisers in hot pursuit, took the sidehill leading to the Belleville bay bridge ("Devil's Elbow" to supplier of the magistrate) at a clip, and so across the bridge, and onto the Redners-ville road. Near the end of the Old Albury Road, the Belleville cruiser got ahead of the speeding car and tried to force across the road as a block, but Irvine got out of this by cutting across fields and two-rocks and back out onto Highway 33, where he turned south.

He turned around again on the Second Concession and headed towards Belleville. Twice, while on this dirt road, he turned out his car lights and sidetracked into a farmer's driveway. Both times the cruisers roared past, he drove out again, and ducked into another driveway when the officers re-discovered him.

The third time Irvine used this evasive action, he landed in a farmer's field and his car came to grief on a pile of rocks.

He was arrested by the two officers, however, as he took off on foot, but was felled by a flying tackle by Constable Camp.

"I haven't heard such a story as this in a long time," commented the magistrate.

Irvine was fined $150 and ordered to pay $8 court costs. He has been prohibited from driving on any highway in Canada for two years.

"And if you're caught driving, you'll go to jail without the option of a fine," warned the magistrate.

New Views May Alter CBC Shows

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP)—There could be some new opitions expressed the next time CBC programming comes up before the "no dance in miniature."

This audience is the board of directors of the publicly-owned corporation, a group undergoing a big change because of expiration of three terms of appointment.

Three appointments were made last month and two more are expected to be announced shortly to round out the directorate at its full 11 - member strength.

A main task of the board, made up of the president and vice-president of the CBC plus nine other directors picked from all phases of public life, is to sit in judgement on the program schedule. It does so both before and after, studying future programs given with CBC officials and reviewing broadcasts after they have been aired.

Until the expiration of the two senior CBC officers, appointed for seven years, the nine other board members are nominated for three-year terms by the cabinet. They may be reappointed for a second consecutive term but after that 12 months must elapse before they are again eligible to sit on the board.

Members draw no salaries but get travel expenses and $100 a day while attending meetings.

TERMS ENDED NOV. 15

The vacancies opened up when the second and third members expired last Nov. 15. Stepping down were Mrs. Ellen Armstrong of Calgary, Mrs. Alice Carter of Salmon Arm, B.C., Raymond Dupuis of Montreal, C. S. Delafield of Yellowknife, N.S., and Prof. W. L. Morton of Winnipeg.

Appointments effective Dec. 15 were announced for Dr. Stephen Juba, 57, head of a Winnipeg-born medical doctor who practises in Yorkton, Sask., Andre Raynald, 37, head of the economics faculty at the University of Montreal, and E. B. Oster, 37, a Winnipeg investment firm associate and author.

Remaining members are F. L. Jenkins of London, Ont, D. M. MacAulay of Sackville, N.B., W. W. L. Mercer of Lennoxville, Que., and Roger N. Seguin of Ottawa.

Big-Time Business Operator In Jail, Could Not Post Bond

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Harry Stonehill, 47, big - time business operator whose dealings have put him under an international shadow, was in jail today for lack of $100,000 federal bond.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation arrested the former army sergeant Monday night as he stepped off an airliner from Mexico.

J. Myers Cole, FBI agent in charge here, said Stonehill was arrested on a June 23, 1964, warrant issued by the U.S. court in the southern district of New York.

Cole said an indictment accuses Stonehill of shipping three crates of cigarette manufacturing machinery to Manila, the Philippines, June 12, 1961, on a pretence the boxes contained grain threshing machines.

The FBI said Stonehill is charged with violating the Bills of Lading Act and with conspiracy to defraud.

SETS BOND

U.S. Commissioner Frank Bashi set the Vancouver resident's bond. An assistant U.S. attorney called Stonehill "an active figure in the international business scene," including Japan, the Philippines and Hong Kong.

The federal attorney said Stonehill had applied for permanent resident in Vancouver but faced deportation there. Stonehill's wife and five children returned to theL Vancouver bond from Mexico Monday.

Stonehill was deported from the Philippines in 1962 and went to Vancouver with his family in 1963 after being ordered out of Canada.

He had told Canadian immigration officials he would leave Canada by Jan. 9. They said Tuesday that deportation hearings might be started if he did not.

Mrs. Stonehill said the couple's children have been given permission to stay in Canada until the end of the school year.

Stonehill and an associate, Robert Brooks, were deported from the Philippines on charges of corrupting government officials. Stonehill amassed a fortune estimated at $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 in Manila after the Second World War. He had been a U.S. soldier but stayed in the Philippines after the war.

Most U.S. Senators Support Present Viet Nam Policy

By WALTER MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Often reluctantly, most of the U.S. senators back or prescribe a course in South Viet Nam to chose current U.S. policy—but called for efforts to win American military backing more effective.

Many of them saw it as a temporary measure, a prologue to negotiations aimed at settling the conflict and ending the Communist - beleaguered nation.

There were conflicting undercurrents of Senate sentiment for outright U.S. withdrawal or for expansion of the war. But those views came only from a handful of senators.

Most of the legislators who responded to an Associated Press survey claimed the idea of pulling out, of committing US. combat troops instead of "advisers" or of extending the war into Communist Viet Nam.

All told, 81 of the 100 senators responded to the survey.

In general terms, 30 of them suggested that the United States stick to its present course at least for the present. Many of them called at the same time for steps to improve the results, stressing government reforms and stability in South Viet Nam.

Three others talked of strengthening democratic government in the Southeast Asian nation, but took no stand on U.S. military or diplomatic measures.

Ten senators called for a negotiated settlement now, some joining in a call for international supervision.

Three suggested the U.S. and South Viet Nam step up the struggle, moving it north into Communist territory.

Three spoke out for U.S. withdrawal.

Eight indicted they had no suggestions, and 34 refused to comment at all.

Pay-As-You-Go Good Policy

Mayor J. R. Ellis deserves hearty congratulations for his suggestion that the city adopt a "pay-as-you-go" policy for certain expenditures.

This is the economical way to finance the city's normal "house-keeping" expenditures.

Once we adopt such a policy, and stick to it, we shall get more for our taxes.

Mayor Ellis, in announcing the proposal, briefly outlined the case for issuing debentures for all capital expenditures.

Those who favor this method of financing contend those who are going to enjoy the benefits of the planned projects should pay their share of the cost. Since many projects will benefit citizens for years to come, this means part of the cost should be paid in the future.

There are two flaws in this argument. All of us today are enjoying the benefits of the thrift of our forefathers, who provided us with many services and paid for them. Are we so niggardly that we want to make sure the inheritance we pass on to the next generation is not larger than that which we ourselves received from the generation which preceded us?

Secondly from the purely practical point of view, there are some types of capital expenditures which recur so regularly that they ought to be regarded as normal maintenance costs.

We are unable to become as enthusiastic over the manner in which the Mayor proposes to apply this pay-as-you-go policy as we are over the policy itself.

The Mayor considers the city's share of local improvement expenditures as the best choice for the institution of this "pay-as-you-go" policy. With this we agree; these expenditures are certainly of a type which recur annually.

Unfortunately, as the Mayor sees it, the institution of the policy with respect to local improvements would require that such work be sought by petition by July 1 of the year before the work was undertaken. He argues that it is not unreasonable to require the City Engineer be given six months in which to work out engineering and cost analyses. This sounds reasonable, but let us not forget that the commencement of the work is unlikely to take place until spring at the earliest. On the average, petitions will have to be obtained a full year before the work is commenced.

Is this reasonable? Most of these projects are small, but for that very reason the desire for them may arise unexpectedly. The delay in starting work may increase the difficulty experienced in getting petitions signed. Then, too, in many cases there will be several changes in the identity of taxpayers on a street between the time a petition must be signed and the time the work starts.

Is there no alternative to the Mayor's proposal? Would it not be possible to budget for a certain total "pay-as-you-go" expenditure on local improvement projects each year and then to apportion this sum to different projects on a first-come petition, first-served basis.

This would enable us to enjoy the benefits of eating the Mayor's "pay-as-you-go" cake and still avoid the drawbacks of requiring local improvement petitions to be in a year before work was undertaken.

Tax Reductions

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce has added its influential voice to those raised against the continuing substitution of tax incentives for general tax reductions. Incentives to capital investment are particularly suspect because of the danger of over-reaching. Some companies, encouraged by tax incentives, may establish uneconomic projections which might have to be subsidized at a later date. Others are rushed into investment programs which they would be better off to postpone. Demand for steel and other basic materials is already pressing heavily on supply, causing heavy increases in imports and prices. A general tax cut would give a broad stimulus to the economy as opposed to a concentrated stimulus to investment.

The mature artist is the one who is consumed with curiosity on his death-bed, who takes notice as he soars into the hereafter—the man who believes that his best symphony or landscape or book is not the first one, or the last one, or the most successful one, nor the one nobody could understand, but the next one, the one which will push barriers back just that much further, the one which will provide the answers—but it never does.—Writer David Benedictus.

Separatism In the Home

By Peter Desbarats
in the Montreal Star

"I've been thinking about this associate state idea," she said over the breakfast table.

"Eleve yourself."

His voice, from behind the newspaper, was patronizing, even uninterested, as if he were talking to the cat. It always infuriated her.

"I think it might work," she said.

"Hmph."

He was embedded in the sports pages. She reached over for the first section of the newspaper and started to read the report of the brief presented by St. Jean Baptiste Society of Montreal to the Quebec Legislative Assembly's committee on the constitution.

"Now is the time to unmask this double misunderstanding," she said. "This apartment is inhabited by two persons who will never fuse together. Recognition of this fact demands a radical recrientation."

"Words, words," he said.

"For a long time, this person has accepted the domination of the stronger partner," she continued. "This epoch has ended."

"Times change," he grunted, turning a page.

"I'm not for separation," she said, "but an association with new structures."

"They're not practical," he yawned.

"I've been wondering about the joint account. You know, I've discovered that I'm depositing a lot more than I'm taking out. Wouldn't it be fairer if I controlled my own revenue?"

"They don't know how to handle money," he said, turning to the financial pages. "Never did."

"If I openly opt," she continued, "then I could have my own television. We wouldn't have to fight about programs. I could buy my own books. We wouldn't have so many arguments."

"Let them argue," he said. "It keeps them busy."

"Some things couldn't be split up," she persisted. "Transportation, for instance. We can't afford two cars. And external affairs. It will be easier if we continue to visit our friends together."

"I've got to rush," he said, downing his paper and the last gulp of coffee. "See you at dinner."

The front door slammed.

"Separatist!"... she shouted.

To Your Good Health
Chronic Glue-Sniffer Needs Psychological Help

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Not too long ago I read about the dangers of sniffing glue. Where can I read up on it, or can you write a little about it? — Mrs. F. D.

The public library would have technical information — the general subject with toxicity of volatile hydrocarbons.

But for more immediate purposes, what needs to be known is that such hydrocarbon fumes are dangerous except in dilute amounts.

These hydrocarbons include gasoline, lighter fluid, the badsmelling carbon tetra-chloride, and various related solvents which evaporate readily and are used to dissolve the sticky constituents of fast-drying glues.

In nature, the solvents are much the same as those used in some rust-removing oils, some cleaning fluids and other such products.

A faint whiff of the odor, with plenty of fresh air to dilute the fumes, will do no harm. But, sniffing or deliberately sniffing the concentrated fumes can very quickly do damage, and sometimes the damage is permanent. Death is possible.

If you will notice, a good many useful household products (including such glues and cements as contain this danger) are clearly marked with a warning: "Use only in a well-ventilated place." That means just what it says. A fan (a kitchen ventilator, for example) is a good precaution. Or having windows open in suitable weather. But, of course, keep the inflammable varieties away from fire. Most certainly do not open these products in a small, stuffy room, and above all do not stuff them directly, which can mean inhaling hundreds of times as much of the fumes in a few moments as would be breathed from ordinary and careful use.

The fumes can cause unconsciousness. Or they can be dangerously damaging to the body even though unconsciousness does not occur.

The greatest damage is destruction of blood cells, and degeneration of the liver. The damage can be cumulative, becoming more severe with each exposure to the fumes.

Industrially, the danger has been eliminated by adequate ventilation or other safeguards where needed. But there is no way of protecting people who refuse to protect themselves.

How much damage is done by glue-sniffing as well as sniffing of other hydrocarbons, is difficult to say. The damage may not be recognized until some time afterward.

However, one physician of my acquaintance has had six recent cases resulting from this foolhardy fad of glue-sniffing.

A good many youngsters have behavior problems to start with: many are anti-social, and do the glue-sniffing "for kicks," which is a sorry excuse. Perhaps some have done it on a dare — but at least they would probably have sense enough not to continue the practice.

A chronic glue-sniffer needs help with his psychological problems in addition to such medical support as can be given but remember: The damage can easily go far enough so that it cannot be corrected.

Strictly Personal
Paradox Inherent in All Opinion

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"You're so fond of finding paradoxes in other people's viewpoints," said a college student to me in a bull-session following a lecture. "But what about paradoxes in your own viewpoint? Can you think of any way in which your own position is mocked by its contradictory?"

Indeed I can. A very obvious and important one comes to mind: the question of nationalism versus internationalism. I am utterly convinced that some kind of world government is necessary if humanity is not to blow itself up; and the closer we move to this ideal, the safer we are.

Yet — and this is the paradox at the heart of the matter — it is precisely the nationalism I deplore that has, in recent years kept the world alive for freedom.

Without the resurgence of nationalist movements behind the iron curtain, there would be little hope in our conflict with a monolithic communism. And the new nationalism in India and Africa has just as effectively prevented any one ideology from capturing a large bloc of people as it is defeating them in its tyrannous embrace.

The world should be growing closer; instead, it is fragmenting into nationalistic groups. And it is only this fragmentation that stands as a barrier against world domination by any one creed or dogma.

This is precisely why history is so tenuous and tortuous a subject, both to understand and to apply to current affairs. The dialogues of the last and the right see history as a straightline, clear-cut process, in sharp black and white, in which everything has its opposite, and opposite has its opposite.

In point of fact, however, history is a criss-crossing of trends and tendencies, a blending of opposites, a polarity of tensions between one view and another. To be an intellectual means, I am, should not mean to be blind to the virtues and necessity for nationalism at a given time.

Yet, this is a difficult attitude for an individual to take; to admit that what he dislikes may be imperative. Most of us are encapsulated in our beliefs, and the more we argue for them, the less able we become to see any merit in the opposite beliefs. It is this petrification of the intellect that makes political arguments so tedious and fruitless.

What we need, above all else, is the ability to see the paradox inherent in any given position, and to know that if we relate locally drive that position to its ultimate conclusion, we are driving it to bankruptcy. This may well have been Marx's arrière-pensée in his famous statement: "I am not a Marxist."

Letter to the Editor

Wants Belleville As Depressed Area

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

The Dominion Government's federal tax rebate for industries establishing in designated depressed areas has proved such a potent and effective lure for industrial growth that lagging communities can readily be converted to boom towns by degrees.

Take Brantford as an example. This typical Ontario city which can hardly be termed poor by any stretch of the imagination had merely failed to match the torrid pace of neighboring Kitchener, Waterloo and Galt in winning the favors of new industry. Through government recognition as a "depressed area" and the accompanying tax rebate, Brantford quickly realized the astounding total of 23 million dollars' worth of new plant with resultant benefits to the whole community.

This rapid growth has been so fantastic that the government has lifted the "depressed area" accolade from Brantford and is preparing to bestow it on other less progressive communities.

Why should Belleville not enjoy the same government favors as Brantford?

While Belleville cannot plead poverty, it should not take a good lawyer to convince the government that this city is at least as backward as Brantford used to be in industrial growth. The clincher should be that Belleville, despite one of the largest and best located cities on the Toronto-Montreal line, is the one and only community failing to attract a major new industry in the past 15 years! This and fact should bring the government to tears and great progress to Belleville.

Doug Grant.

Editor's note:—The catch in this is that any property such as this one needs a yardstick. The yardstick used in this case is the percentage of unemployed persons. Belleville does not qualify because our unemployment rate is below that required. The fact that we have not obtained new industries is irrelevant, because the yardstick used is not the growth rate, but the percentage of present residents who are unable to find work.

With a history dating back to farmers' organizations in the late 1870's, mostly the early years of the 20th century saw United Farmers groups in Manitoba, the prairies and in Ontario. In 1919 farmers' candidates entered politics in Manitoba and Alberta. In Manitoba, in 1920, 12 farmer candidates were returned in a general election. But the great drought and depression of 1929-35 weakened all farmers' organizations that had sprung up earlier in the century.

Trenton Company Bids Farewell to Armouries

Regiment Enters New Phase of Training

A proud company of a proud regiment, bowing to the edicts of government, backs a last farewell to a famous training site on Monday.

"A" Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, a militia and wartime household word in Trenton, marched in reluctant farewell along the town streets before paying its last visit to the armouries that has housed the military for so many years.

Due to changes in militia policy, the Trenton armouries along with others in the regimental areas, has been closed.

Enthusiasm and pride in the regiment undampened by the change, all ranks of the Trenton company have decided to continue training in Belleville.

This esprit-de-corps is also evident in other sub-units of the regiment.

Those formerly housed in Picton, Madoc, Port Hope, Millbrook and Norwood will also train here with transportation provided by area headquarters at Kingston.

Trenton's "A" Company marked its first appearance here following its final parade at home on Monday.

Forty officers and men under the command of Captain Stan Dolmes, marched to the Bridge Street armouries for its first night of training.

The company marched to the main door of the armouries where it was greeted by Lieut.-Col. K. D. H. Willcocks, commanding officer, and the Belleville Garrison.

Col. Willcocks said today that the Trenton personnel will be immediately integrated with the Belleville Recruit, Militiamen and other courses.

TRAIN ON MONDAYS

The Belleville and Trenton units will train every Monday night. The remaining sub-units will commence training on Sunday, January 13 and on the second Sunday of each month.

All recruits, militiamen, will continue training in special courses until March 31st when they will be tested. Successful candidates will commence field training on Sundays and Monday nights.

The history of the Trenton armouries goes back to the pre World War II non-permanent active militia days.

At that time the men learned military drill in the gym, etc., in a 40 by 20 livery stable behind the old municipal building east of the bridge.

In 1938 the government leased an old butter factory west of the river as an armoury.

It was here that the gallant men of Trenton's contribution to the famous First Battalion (Plowboys) trained and later fought with the regiment through the campaigns in France, Sicily, Italy and North west Europe.

During the war the Second Battalion unit continued training in the butter factory until the bugles sounded the "cease fire".

Afterwards the factory underwent changes and today the Trenton Royal Canadian Legion building occupies its site.

From 1945 to 1947 Trenton was once again without an armoury. Later due to the efforts of the commanding officer of the regiment Lieut-Colonel Max Porritt and the generosity of the town, the present place of land was made available to the militia.

The army responded by moving the present "temporary" building, and a Support Company of the Hasty Pees was formed with Major Fred Burtt, WO1 Stan Downes and sergeants "Shickie" Simpson and "Doc" Burrough.

ALWAYS FIRST CLASS

Despite inadequacy of accommodation and the lack of the traditional parade square, Trenton has always trained a first-class company.

Always strong in morale and numerical strength it has repeatedly had to halt recruiting due to lack of space.

Last year the company represented the entire regiment in the 13 Militia Group competition and made an excellent showing.

In a directive to his regiment Lieut.-Col. Willcocks says "because we are now expected to field an effective 300-man unit, all of us must expect to qualify fully as soldiers."

"Everyone will be expected to be proficient with the rifle, LMG, Sten, 3.5 rocket launcher, grenades, mines, field defences, etc. Greater emphasis will be laid on tactical training once personnel are through the initial recruit course."

"For more advanced personnel there will be training on the 106 mm jeep; mounted recoil-less rifle, signals and as MT drivers. Specialists will be required in orderly rooms, quartermaster stores and kitchens. Leadership ability will bring NCO courses."

The annual summer camp for all ranks will be held in Camp Petawawa this year, July 4 through July 10th.

Lieut.-Col. K. D. H. Willcocks

Rampaging Rivers Threaten Dozens of Communities

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Northern California's rampaging rivers, fed by new torrential rainstorms and melting mountain snows, again threatened dozens of communities today, including areas hardest hit by the disastrous Christmas week deluge.

Army helicopters evacuated nearly 200 persons living in two areas near the swollen Eel and Mad rivers as flood stages approached. Air force helicopters dropped feed to thousands of starving sheep on barren flooded lands south of Eureka, Calif., centre for flood relief operations.

A rainstorm, driven in some places by a whole gale of more than 80 miles an hour, battered the northern half of the state Tuesday.

New flooding finds California still reeling from the devastation wrought by the floods that started Dec. 20, which spread $1,000,000,000 in property damage and caused more than 40 deaths in five western states.

TAKES BRUNT

This time, California alone is taking the brunt of a low pressure area anchored off Washington.

Disaster authorities warned more than 1,000 residents of the Eel delta and the nearby town of Blue Lake to prepare to flee their homes.

Authorities warned flood victims to beware of rattlesnakes, routed out of hibernation by floods.

The Eel, wildest of the waterways that wrought the Christmas week flood, was expected to crest at 21 feet early today. It once again could pour under water many small logging towns.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD JOHN BOWMAN

Bowman – Miller

A lovely winter wedding was solemnized at a candlelight ceremony on the evening of December 29th at Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, when Patricia Ellen Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Courtland Miller, 227 Bleecker Ave., was united in marriage to Richard John Bowman of Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Bowman. Christmas greens and white commercial 'mums were used to decorate the church.

Rev. H. M. Davis, minister of the church, was the officiating clergyman. Traditional wedding music was played on the organ by Mr. S. Alec Gordon, and the soloist was Mr. Clair Rupnow.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the music of Westminster Abbey processional, dressed in a floor-length gown of white silk velvet and carrying a bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis and feathered carnations.

Mrs. Robert Miller of Toronto was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Janet Miller of Belleville, sister of the bride, and Miss Diane Bowman of Trenton, sister of the bridegroom. The attendants were dressed alike in floor length red velvet, and each carried a white fur muff adorned with a corsage of red roses.

Sheri Lyn Miller, niece of the bride, was flower girl wearing a white silk velvet dress, floor length, with red bow and white shoes. She carried an old fashioned nosegay of button 'mums and red roses.

Mr. Donald Bowman of Winnipeg, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Robert Rider of Kingston and John Miller, brother of the bride.

At the reception in the church parlors the bride's mother received the guests wearing a Royal blue sheath of pure silk, with matching blue accessories and corsage of red Sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom's mother assisted in a gown of peau de soie and lace, in a mink shade, with a corsage of pink roses.

For a wedding trip to Montreal and points east the bride wore a wool suit of royal blue boucle, with blue kid, patent leather purse and shoes, and a corsage of white gardenias.

Out-of-town guests attended the wedding from Winnipeg, Virginia, Sudbury, Ottawa, Kingston, Oshawa, London, Toronto, Peterborough and Trenton.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Bowman will reside in Belleville.

The bride was guest of honor at many showers and presentations, including a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. C. Rupnow; a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. G. Brearley, with co-hostess Mrs. L. A. Kelly, presentation of china given by Mrs. E. Wray with co-hostess Mrs. D. Stanton; a presentation by Mrs. H. Mott, with co-hostesses Mrs. E. S. Fairman and Mrs. H. Trepanier.

Mrs. F. C. Miller entertained at a tea for her daughter, and the bridegroom's parents held a rehearsal party at their home.

Mother's Snooping Does Injustice to Daughter

DEAR DORIS — My mother doesn't trust me anywhere or with anybody. She snoops through all my belongings when I'm at school. I have let her know how I feel about it, but it's of no use. Whenever I receive letters she insists on reading them and opening them before I see them.

This hurts my feelings very much and I have lost most of my respect for her as a result. When she has read a letter she has recently gone to one of her friends and told her of its contents. Please print this in your column because I would never receive your reply. Please give me your advice to this situation. I am 18. — MISTRUSTED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR MISTRUSTED — What started this? Do you fabricate about your doings? Do you steal the things? If you have shown yourself to be trustworthy, she does you an injustice and, indeed, encourages furtiveness.

Ask her when and how she expects you to grow up. And whether she'd like it if you talked about her.

DEAR DORIS — My late husband's sister-in-law and some others disapprove of my remarriage to an older man, who is in the diplomatic service and a bachelor.

His age is our problem, and believe me, if we weren't truly in love we wouldn't be marrying. I don't need a meal ticket. He can afford a housekeeper.

We are both happy in our new relationship — love is wonderful, the second time round. And my two children adore him.

But these beastly one-time in-laws! I was snubbed in church. One couple was quite rude. My doctor says to ignore them, but to do this and still live here is impossible. — IN THE DOG HOUSE.

DEAR DOG HOUSE — There is a peculiar malady which sometimes affects in-laws, virtuously labelled as Loyalty to the Dear Departed, but properly diagnosed as ordinary jealousy. The affected ones can no longer pose as pitying their not-so-helpless widowed sister-in-law.

What floors me is how certain church-going people can stand in judgement and still say their prayers. Such hypocrites help to give the other Heaven-seeking Christians a bad name.

Face the ring-leader — over a cup of tea — with the facts: of your love for her brother-in-law in the past; of your present fiance's regard for you and your children; of the children's need for aunts and uncles; and your hope that her attachment to them will continue to grow warmer and more precious as they grow up.

If necessary, talk it over with the minister. You have a right to respect and a fair deal.

DEAR DORIS — The girl I sought your help for (and got it) is now happily married and they have another baby. He is a real jewel.

I meddled with Cupid a couple of times before and don't care for the responsibility I assumed, but with this couple I asked you about it and then I asked God. It has turned out even better than I had hoped for. Thank God! — GRATEFUL.

DEAR GRATEFUL — Hallelujah!

DEAR DORIS — About "baby showers," when are they held? Are they in order for second and third babies? — NEW CANADIAN.

DEAR NEW CANADIAN — If there is to be one, it is held about a month before the baby arrives. But it is by no means an expected event, and more than one per baby is overdoing it.

It may happen again, for babies number two and three, but this isn't usual.

* * *

Suggested Social Workers Should Speak More Clearly

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) — "cobblede-gook" and pretentious language used by social workers frequently give the impression that professionals in social welfare are remote, insensitive and cold, says a former president of the Canadian Welfare Council.

Mrs. Kaspar Fraser of Toronto, herself an experienced social worker, writes in the current edition of the council's magazine:

"Somehow it is hard for the outsider to believe that a person who writes about a street-corner boy that he is 'lacking in motivation' really cares much about him."

Mrs. Fraser says the general public might pay more attention to the needs and opinions of social workers if the workers expressed themselves more clearly.

"Let me give a few examples. The first is from a social worker who was doing a survey in Toronto before the days of public day nurseries. She happened to be an American, but that is beside the point. Canadians talk much the same.

"Remarking on the large number of children on the waiting list, she wrote: 'Some of these children have been processed for eligibility.'

"When asked: 'Do you mean we don't know whether they should have nursery care or not?' she said 'Yes.'

Mrs. Fraser also tells of an article she read recently about people of small means, who were burdened with debts by the "buy now and pay later" method.

"It was said that they had lost hope, but if they could once get free from debt, their ambition could be reconfirmed,"

The writer, who was made an honorary life member of the Canadian Welfare Council in 1961, believes there is a great need for clear English when speaking or writing about the social sciences because most laymen who concern themselves with such professions as law or medicine do so because they think it is in their own interest.

"They do not feel the same need to take any interest in social matters."

Mrs. Fraser ends her article with this advice to fellow welfare workers:

"I should like to see a copy of Sir Ernest Gowers's Plain Words in the hands of anyone who is likely to speak or write on social welfare. It is short, amusing and, in its paperback form, cheap."

Chinese Food Is Popular

By MARY MOORE

Over the past 2 or 3 years, the requests for recipes for Chinese food have been increasing. But that is nothing compared to the accelerated rate in the past 2 months. What's happened?

I will try to give the recipes for Chinese dishes that are most frequently requested during the next couple of months — starting now.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Baked Pork Chops; Apple Rings; Shredded Baked Harvard Beets; Brussels Sprouts; Lettuce Wedges with Bleu Cheese Dressing; Canned Peaches; Brownies; Coffee.

GARLIC SPARERIBS

Four to 5 lbs. meaty spareribs, 1 cup soy sauce (or less), 1 cup orange marmalade, 3 cloves garlic, minced, 1 teaspoon ginger, ¼ teaspoon black pepper. Combine soy sauce, marmalade, garlic, ginger and black pepper. Spread spareribs in baking pan, cutting them into serving pieces if desired. Pour sauce over ribs. Turn ribs to completely cover with sauce. Keep in refrigerator at least 12 hours. Arrange ribs on a rack in a roasting pan. Roast at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1½ hours, basting frequently with sauce until ribs are glazed golden brown and meat is very tender.

CHICKEN BALLS IN SAUCE

2 raw chicken breasts; 2 green onions, chopped very finely, 1½ teaspoons salt; 1 tablespoon cornstarch; 1 tablespoon sherry or pineapple juice; 2 tablespoons water; 4 tablespoons oil; ¼ cup thinly sliced onions; 1 teaspoon minced ginger; 1 teaspoon sugar; 2 tablespoons Chinese oyster sauce (or shrimp paste); ¼ cup chicken broth; ½ teaspoon pepper.

Discard the skin and bones of the chicken. Chop the chicken and onions very finely. Blend in the salt, cornstarch, sherry and water. Shape into walnut-size balls. Heat the oil in a frying pan; fry the balls until golden brown on all sides. Pour off almost all the oil. Add the sliced onions, ginger, sugar, oyster sauce or shrimp paste and broth. Cook over low heat 2 minutes, stirring frequently. Sprinkle with pepper.

EGG DROP SOUP

6 cups chicken broth; ½ cup minced chicken, cooked; 4 chopped water chestnuts; 2 teaspoons cornstarch; 2 tablespoons water; 3 eggs, beaten.

PRESERVING LINENS

Dear Susanna: I am going to start a hope chest and am anxious to know if there is a way of "preserving" linens that are to be packed away for a few years. Also, any advice you might have on their general care would be sincerely appreciated. — Bev Wyatt

Being an incurable romantic, I will be a pleasure to answer your letter:

If white linens are to be stored for a lengthy period of time, they should first be wrapped in, or covered with, blue paper, to prevent them from turning yellow.

It breaks my heart to have to tell you this next bit. However, here it is. A very special friend of mine, Teddy Maclean, who is really big in linen circles has been buying, selling and storing woollens, silver and linens, in lo, these many years, and she strongly advises against storing white linens in a cedar lined chest or drawers, as cedar oil fumes tend to cause yellowing. Excessive heat should also be avoided.

In the event that linens have become yellow, launder, and lay them out in the sun to dry to re-whiten.

As for the general everyday care of linens, let's take a look at what the experts say:

When laundering, use a heavy suds of pure mild soap. Do not add washing soda or other caustic or alkali solutions, particularly during boiling or at other high temperatures.

Most linens should not be starched because they have their own natural crispness. You must use starch sparingly if you do use it.

Try not to carelessly mark table cloths and serviettes with knives and forks, and don't use linen towels to dry sharp objects such as razor blades . . . the weakened yarns may develop holes during laundering.

When drying linens, fold each piece over the line, and pin the fold. Never hang napkins or table cloths from the corners. Should linen freeze while drying outdoors, handle it with extreme care until it thaws.

Do not crease needlessly Keep folds straight, vary them each time. Table cloths should be folded once, lengthwise, then rolled on a mailing tube or some rounded object.

Here's hoping you have found this helpful, and that all the hopes in your hope chest come true! — SUZANNA

(If you have any hints for running a successful household — or any problems — write to Suzanna, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope when requesting pamphlets.)

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DON GLENDE, MOTHER OF 5

Sometimes new mothers concentrate so hard on the technicalities of baby care they forget to enjoy their babies. Your delight in your baby is one of the great golden gifts you can give. The baby who is talked to (and laughed with) lovingly, develops security and sociability. The baby who is played with happily gains confidence early and learns invaluable lessons in co-operation.

Golden rules for baby care. Book rules are fine as guides but all rules do not fit all babies and any rule is only as good as its flexibility. Golden to good mothering: heed your doctor and your common sense and let your heart take the lead. Happy is the baby whose mother makes adjustments for his (or her) individuality.

Shaping-time spaceships. The fine delicious Gerber Juices, of course! I know you modern mamas think in terms of orange juice for baby's vitamin C. And Gerber Orange Juice is an excellent natural source of this vitamin. But isn't it reassuring to know that Gerber Apple Juice and all the juice concoctions have vitamin C added, too, give your baby the same amount of this important vitamin as Gerber Orange Juice. The refreshing list of said, pleasing flavours also includes Orange-Apple, Orange-Banana and Orange-Pineapple Drink—a delectable variety for baby to enjoy at "sipping-time."

Growth patterns. Your baby grows much faster the first year than the next few put together. That's why he needs protein 2-plenty to help that growth along! The good Gerber Strained Meats are excellent dietary sources of protein, low in fat, ever so easy to digest. Points to remember:

• Gerber Meats are cooked by an exclusive process which preserves the utmost in nutritive values; insures a smooth moist texture.

• They now come in new shapes-shoulder glass jars for easy spooning and convenient refrigeration of unused portions. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Mrs. Marjorie McKenna
75 John St., Belleville says:

"SEEING IS BELIEVING. I SAVED $4.82 AT RITE-WAY FOOD CITY ON A NORMAL TWO WEEK SHOPPING ORDER OVER THE STORE WHERE I USUALLY SHOP."

Mrs. McKenna's new found Rite-Way Food City savings mean that over 52 weeks her savings would be equivalent to one month's free shopping. Mrs. McKenna was selected for the test at random and received no rewards other than the groceries she purchased at her regular supermarket. She made all purchases on the same day.

MRS. McKENNA continues — "There are five people in my household and we're fussy about the quality of food we buy. You can imagine my surprise when I bought the same items at Rite-Way Food City for $4.82 less than I paid at my regular supermarket in town. I matched brands, grades and sizes . . . I'm really sold on Rite-Way Food City."

Exceptional food savings are available every day of the week at Rite-Way Food City — over 6,000 quality items discounted Monday through Sat.

Here is Mrs. McKenna's actual shopping list and price comparisons.

New Forty-Bed Hospital Addition Nearly Completed

PICTON (Staff) — The 40-bed addition to the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital is nearing completion. Various items in the interior are being finalized and the first coat of paint has been applied. The Board has ordered furnishings for delivery at the end of January and the new wing is likely to be ready for occupancy in early February. Construction began last April and has progressed steadily, aided by good weather conditions. It is expected that an official opening will be held. When complete the hospital will have 80 beds and 20 bassinets which will relieve the lack of sufficient accommodation which has been felt.

Barney Hepburn Named Warden Of P.E. County

PICTON (Staff) — The inaugural session of the 1965 County Council was held Tuesday afternoon. Election of the County Warden and naming committees was the chief business. The Reeve of Picton, Bernard (Barney) Hepburn was accorded an acclamation as Warden for 1965. He succeeds Reeve Kenneth Hicks of North Marysburgh. Warden Hepburn is a lifelong resident of Picton. He is the son of Mrs. J. C. Hepburn and the late James Hepburn, ex-M.P.P. and former speaker of the Ontario Legislature. Re-elected Reeve in December election, Warden Hepburn is serving his tenth year on town council — three as councillor, three and one half as deputy reeve, two and one half years as Reeve.

The new Warden is active in many spheres and is manager of the Royal Hotel.

FLAG FLOWN

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Canada's new red maple leaf flag was raised atop the Niagara International Centre's 600-foot observation skylon Tuesday next to the United States' stars and stripes. The Red Ensign had been flying on top of the skylon since Oct. 28, when the first phase of the multi-million dollar construction project was completed.

Prince Edward Juniors have planned a bus trip to Toronto for this event and the bus will be leaving the Department of Agriculture office at 6 a.m. Anyone interested in taking this trip should contact Helen Whitehead, R.R. 1, Bloomfield, or phone Bloomfield 393-5723 on or before Wednesday, January 6th.

Plans have been made to hold the third annual Prince Edward County Folk School from Friday, Jan. 23, to Monday, Jan. 25. The Folk School this year will be held at the Royal Hotel in Picton. The theme or topic will be "Is Change Necessarily Progress?" The delegates to this school will study the role of organizations and their members in our era of change.

Some of the topics that will be discussed are: Why do we need organizations? Are goals of organizations meeting the needs of people? Organizations —too few or too many? Members—why belong, why do they belong? Why don't they belong? Organizations — Co-operation and co-ordination — rural and urban—amalgamation?

Rural and urban organizations are encouraged to appoint delegates. However those who desire may register and pay their own expenses. The school will begin at 6 p.m. sharp for supper on Friday, Jan. 23 and will conclude on Monday, Jan. 25th, following the noon luncheon. The complete cost which includes registration, room and meals will be $25.00 per person. Inquiries about the Folk School should be directed to the secretary, Mrs. George Vincent, R.R. 1, Picton.

The Experts Say

Enjoying Money at Work With Minimum of Risk

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—If you want to make a pile of money in a hurry, a small investment club is not for you.

If you would enjoy finding out how money works, and watching your own investments change, a club is a way to do it with a minimum of risk.

To form one you need 10 to 20 people who can afford to put at least $10 a month each to invest. There is no absolutely right number of people or amount of money, says Violet Cook, partner in the Toronto brokerage firm of Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig. But for amateurs, a small group working with an amount of money each member can easily afford has proven the best arrangement, she says.

Carefully operated, the club will probably make some money, but the main purpose of such groups is education in the fundamentals of investment plus a bit of excitement.

Mrs. Cook says investment clubs should be planned on a five - year or 10 - year basis. "Even if you lose $600 or even half of $600—and it could happen—over five years, it's the cheapest education you can buy."

Once you have members, the next step is to agree on operating rules. "Get everything cut and dried and clear before you start."

You will need to decide how often to meet and to buy, how and by whom buying and selling will be done. Outline clearly procedures for liquidating the club and for paying shares to a member who leaves the club.

BROKER CAN HELP

Any reputable broker should be able to advise you on rules, Mrs. Cook says. "If there is no broker in your community, contact a member of a recognized stock exchange by letter to ask for guidance." Her firm has a printed outline of procedure available.

At the first meeting, officers should be elected and authorized over the signature of each member to act as agents for the club. When the rules are drawn up, agreement to them should be signed by every member.

Because education is the main point of a club, members take turns studying companies the club might be interested in, and presenting a report. There are publications which summarize reports of companies for a start.

Mrs. Cook recommends that a statement be prepared every month of the liquidating value of the club's assets. Also every month the treasurer should check with the broker to get suggestions on new companies to consider, and the latest information on companies already owned by the club.

Speaking Personally

by Gladys Ward - - - Women's Editor

THE GIDDIES

For several years the personnal question has come up at Home and School discussions and at kaffee klatches in the mornings. "Should children be given an allowance, and if so, how much? And should they have to earn it or be given it as a right? And should they be penalised for misdemeanors by withholding part of their allowances?"

From what I have heard and read, most authorities seem to agree that children should be given a definite allowance, a fixed sum, that they can depend upon getting each week. It should not be a matter of earning it, because the work of a household should be a sharing process, with each member doing his share. The mother, for instance is not paid for each chore she does, so much for washing and ironing, so much for cleaning, so much for sewing and mending, or baking, getting meals, washing dishes, chauffeuring the squirt hockey team, etc.

The allowance should not be withheld as punishment because a child should be able to plan his budget, knowing his allowance will remain the same. If there must be punishment it should take the form of depriving him of some treat or privilege, but not taking away his money. This method eliminates the continual whining, "I need a quarter for something."

The opponents of this idea argue that throughout his life a person is paid for the work he does, so a child might as well learn that he has to earn what he gets. This school of thought says, so much for washing the car, so much for carrying the garbage cans out and back, etc, and no work, no pay.

As to the amount of the allowance, that depends on the circumstances. Some parents give an allowance that has to cover all needs, including school books, clothing, etc. Others think it sufficient to allow enough for a show, a swim, bowling, room collections at school, etc., or whatever interests the student has.

Probably parents have to use their own judgments. After all they know their own children best — or should.

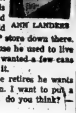
BEFORE AND AFTER

Did you ever study those before and after pictures? Before or after what? Well just about anything — a new hair spray — or some hairdy dandy hairdare jabs — or a new mouth wash — or even a new deodorant that your best friend hasn't told you about.

Here she is before — a real sad sack, mouth turned down at the corners, dreggy hair, no friends, sitting in a corner like Black Horses.

But 30 seconds after — well! Look at her now, Ma, she's dancing. Not only has she got a new swinging hairdo, but her house is completely re-decorated with new furniture, the walls are papered — she's got a whole new wardrobe, and yes, he's that a new husband planing an orchid corsage on her mink jacket? Of course it is.



You'd hardly recognize her, would you? Imagine all this from spraying your hair or whatever.

Who wouldn't run — not walk — to their nearest store to buy armfuls of the stuff! It's a beautiful, easy way to get that new furniture you've been nagging your husband about. Now isn't it? If you can believe what you see on TV, that is.

Husband Too Fond of Canning, Wife Complains

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Husbands being what they are, you'll probably tell me I'd better keep mine. The trouble is he is a canner.

ANN LANDERS

The first year we were married he planted too much Swiss chard. We ate Swiss chard until I podatied — and then he said, "Let's put some up," so we canned.

His next big deal was carrots. It took us four years to use what we canned in one season.

Last year was his big year for tomatoes. He kept bringing in tomatoes — a few bushels at a time until we had over 300 quarts. We had to put concrete shelves in the basement to hold the tomatoes. Right now it looks like an A & P store down there.

I think my husband is nuts like this because he used to live on a farm. I'm a city girl myself and when we wanted a few cans of something we went to the store and bought it.

My husband told me tonight that when he retires he wants to have a big garden and then we'll really can. I want to put a stop to this monkey business now. What do you think? — LOADED

DEAR LOADED — Don't complain, Dearie. Your husband can. Some husbands can't.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This letter is for the young man whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower. He suggested that his fiances (whose ancestors came from Newark and Butte) rise above her "inferior" background.

History tells us that the first colonists consisted largely of ne'er-do-wells, misfits and other assorted characters who found it expedient to leave their homeland — in some instances as quickly as possible.

Some early settlers came to this country to escape religious persecution, and many who did turned around and persecuted those who didn't believe as they did.

Ancestor-hunting can be fun, if done in the proper spirit, but ancestor worship is absurd and has no place in our society.—DESCENDANT OF A SALEM WITCH HUNTER.

DEAR DESCENDANT — Ancestor-hunting can be fun and ancestor worship is absurd but your broad volley aimed at the first settlers is unjustified.

Some ne'er-do-wells and assorted nuts did come over on the first boat but the vast majority of the early settlers were dedicated and courageous men — not a collection of stumble bums.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a girl 15. I have a good figure and a pretty face. I wear nice clothes and I make better than average grades in school. I have a very good singing voice and have had the lead in many musical events.

I live in a beautiful home and my father is a respected professional man. All this sounds as if I should be on top of the world, but I am miserable. The problem is I have no friends.

I have been getting dizzy spells and a ringing in my ears makes me upset and irritable with people. I went to a specialist last week and he couldn't find anything wrong with my ears.

I know this letter is jumbled up but I can't do any better right now because my ears are ringing again. Can you help? — MISS MISERABLE.

DEAR MISS — You don't have ear trouble. You have "I" trouble. The personal pronoun "I" appears in your letter 13 times.

You've worked so hard to impress people with your looks, your clothes, your voice and your home that you haven't bothered to learn what they are like.

The way to get people interested in you is to show interest in them.

Too many starry-eyed lovers do not know the difference. Do you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Before You Marry — Is It Love Or Sex?" enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them, to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

U.C.W. Meeting

STONE CHURCH U.C.W. — The Christmas meeting of Stone Church U.C.W. was held at the home of the president, Mrs. E. Demorest, who opened the meeting with the thought "Love Came Down at Christmas." She told her listeners that Christmas has its simple wonder. "It should be a renewed starting point in a journey of faith as we look to serve Christ, keeping the birth of the babe in Bethlehem always in our minds and hearts on the day when the nations of the earth shall acknowledge the coming of the Prince of Peace, the child of Bethlehem as our Lord and Saviour."

May all accept the guiding light of faith, courage and love, to unite all people of all nations.

Mrs. Everett Phillips conducted the devotional, centring her thoughts around the Christmas story, saying: "If we keep our eyes and hearts on the guiding star, the older one grows the more it should mean to each and everyone, for what happened on that first Christmas day altered the history of the world."

The Scripture lesson was given by Mrs. E. Phillips, Mrs. G. Rushnell, and Mrs. C. Vermilyea, who traced the Scriptures on the growth and life of Jesus Christ.

This was followed by a reading of Mrs. G. Evans.

The business part was conducted by the president. Dinner and quilting will start in January. Election of officers is slated for January.

Mrs. G. Rushnell invited all to her home for the January meeting.

Lunch was served by host ess and her assistants, Mrs. O Chisholm and Mrs. G. Evans.

Minimum Hourly Wages, Labor Unions for Prisoners Recommended by Council

OTTAWA (CP) — Minimum hourly wages and labor unions for jail prisoners?

Why not, says the Canadian Corrections Association.

The association recommended in a statement Tuesday that all prisoners in federal penitentiaries, provincial jails and reform institutions be paid a basic hourly wage of at least 20 per cent of minimum wages prevailing outside.

A bill providing for a $1.25-an-hour minimum wage for 500,000 employees under federal jurisdiction has received approval in principal and will come up for passage after the Commons reconvenes Feb. 16. Provincial minimum wages range from 35 cents to $1.25.

The association, a division of the Canadian Welfare Council, said prisoners should receive wage increases "to reward diligence and ability" and they should get paid whether they produce goods, work on maintenance, take vocational training or undergo therapy.

Prisoners in federal penitentiaries now earn from 25 to 55 cents a working day. They also get "pocket money, a train ticket and clothes on release.

PAYMENT VARIES

Prisoners in provincial jails in Quebec, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island receive no remuneration.

They get $8 a month in New Brunswick Central Reformatory, $2 a month in Ontario, 75 cents a working day in Manitoba prison camps, 10 to 15 cents a day in Saskatchewan, $1 a month to 50 cents a day in Alberta, and 10 cents to $1 a day in British Columbia.

A report prepared by W. T. McGrath, executive secretary of the corrections association, also said prison officials should consider possibility of "limited participation" in labor unions by prisoners.

Such union contacts might provide personal relationships for the inmate after discharge, he said.

He also recommended that prices — made goods be liquidated in open markets such as foreign aid programs, additional Federal-provincial and municipalities.

Ford Workers Ready to Strike On January 15

TORONTO (CP)—The United Auto Workers (CLC) announced Tuesday that 9,000 workers at Ford of Canada plants in four Ontario centres will strike Jan. 15 unless agreement is reached beforehand on a new work contract with the company.

The National Ford Council of the union, now engaged in negotiations with company representatives in Toronto, set the strike deadline for 5 p.m. a week from next Friday.

Workers affected by the order include 4,500 at Windsor, about 3,000 at Oakville, about 200 at a glass plant in the Welland suburb of Crowland and workers at a parts depot in the Toronto suburb of North York.

The workers approved strike action in balloting last November. The Ontario labor department last month released a conciliation board report containing no recommendations, clearing the way for strike action.

RESUMED MONDAY

Ford-UAW talks, which began Oct. 1, resumed here Monday following a tentative settlement of a new three-year contract between the Union and General Motors of Canada.

The 10-day warning of strike action at Ford indicated the union is anxious to allow enough leeway for settlement before Jan. 15.

The 29,500 GM production workers returned to work Dec. 21 after a 16-day strike to enforce demands for better pay and working conditions.

The GM settlement, generally considered as a pattern for Ford and Chrysler Canada Limited, was valued by the union at 58.89 cents an hour, including 30.77 cents in direct wage increases and 16.70 cents in pension improvements.

U.S. Hopes to Grab Larger Slice of Western World Trade

By ARCH McKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Johnson has given fresh emphasis to United States hopes of grabbing a larger slice of the growing Western world trade with Russia and the Eastern European Communist Bloc.

This spells more competition for Britain, France and other allies who have been expanding trade with the Soviet alliance.

There has been ample evidence the U.S., is aware it is missing out, but President Johnson in his State of the Union message last night made specific reference to the subject.

"In Eastern Europe, restless nations are moving slowly to assert their identity," he said. "Your government, assisted by leaders in labor and business, is exploring ways to increase peaceful trade with these countries and the Soviet Union.

"I will report our conclusions to Congress."

WOULD EASE TENSIONS

By peaceful trade, the president means non-strategic items including food, liquor, tobacco and the like.

As expressed by the president more East-West trade is one way of easing tensions, although there is not the slightest sign of relaxing trade barriers with China or Cuba.

More trade may also have value in keeping eyes on means to encourage the spread of independence among the Soviet satellites and maintain the split between Russia and China.

But the outstanding importance from the domestic viewpoint is the Soviet Bloc represents a lucrative and expanding market. And the U.S. can use such expansion. in its balance-of-payments problem.

Luther Hodges, before. he resigned recently as secretary of commerce, complained more than once the U.S. was losing millions of dollars in sales of "cat, drink and smoke merchandise to our competitors in Europe and Japan."

He saw no reason why the U.S. shouldn't have its slice.

Bonanno's visit to Russia in 1963 indicate just what the U.S. feels it is missing. Of freewheeling Joe Bonanno, Brooklyn-born man that $4,000,000,000 Atlantic allies and Japan had such halt.

U.S. sales were the lowest of all at less than $170,000,000.

Canada, a major recent U.S. sale was about $300,000,000 worth of wheat, made with some difficulty last year.

But the U.S. remains opposed to long-term credit deals such as being offered to Russia by Britain and France, among others. But it presumably is prepared to offer some short-term credit.

One radical sign of increasing American competition in the Soviet Bloc is word two private firms have reached initial agreement with Russia to build synthetic rubber and petroleum plants.

This would be the first direct private American participation in Eastern Europe since the Second World War and it duplicates the type of trade procedure being pursued now by Britain, France, the Netherlands, Sweden and others.

Mafia Chieftain Had Connections In Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—It is "quite possible" that Joseph (Banana) Bonanno, Mafia chief certain in the United States, has underworld connections in Canada, an RCMP spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman was commenting on New York press reports that Bonanno, who disappeared Oct. 21 the day before he was scheduled to testify before a rackets grand jury in New York, rules a gangster empire which extends into Canada.

Bonanno didn't stay long in Canada. He was picked up by the RCMP on instructions from the immigration department and charged with perjury for falsely claiming he had no criminal record.

Bonanno left Canada July 30 for Chicago. His Montreal lawyer, Raymond Daoust, has testified at the Montreal inquiry that Bonanno left voluntarily but an immigration department spokesman has said he was expelled.

The RCMP spokesman said it wasn't known whether Bonanno had found it too "hot" to remain in the U.S. or if he had sought entry to Canada. Neither was it known exactly what his underworld connections in Canada might be.

The spokesman said Bonanno, reputed head of the gun - running Mafia" "family" or branch. Bonanno has been named repeatedly at the Inquiry headed by Chief Justice Frederic Dorion of the Quebec Superior Court into allegations of attempted bribery and influence - peddling in federal ministerial aides. The inquiry resumes at Montreal Jan. 12.

Compulsory Arbitration In Hospital Disputes Seen

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the Ontario government is considering compulsory arbitration of labor - management disputes in hospitals as part of its program for the next legislature session.

The newspaper says the government is weighing the possibility that legislation based on the majority recommendations of a royal commission would anger trade unions.

The commission proposed giving the government discretionary authority to impose compulsory arbitration if a petition is adversely affected or a service is threatened or if either party is convicted of bargaining in bad faith.

Harry Simon, the commission's labor member, dissented. Judge C. E. Bennett was chairman of the commission appointed in October, 1963, after a strike at the Trenton Memorial Hospital.

The Building Service Employees International Union (CLC), the union involved in the hospital strike, was the only union appearing before the commission that favored compulsory arbitration.

Of the 23 briefs heard, four favored automatic, compulsory arbitration, 10 opposed and nine would accept arbitration as a last resort to prevent hospital shutdowns.

Last month, Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree said a hospital strike must never be allowed in the province.

Canadian Farms Getting More and More Mechanized And Fewer to Run Machinery

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian agriculture is getting more and more mechanized with fewer and fewer people to run the machinery.

While the trend is to bigger farms, higher production and greater returns, there are fewer farmers. Farm operators outnumber hired help 4 to 1.

In many areas experienced employees to harvest cash crops just don't exist any more.

Farmers often buy machinery because they can't find men, then can't find men to run the machinery.

The issue has led to some legislative head - scraching.

At the agricultural outlook conference here in November the chorus of complaint from provincial farm officials was almost at panic pitch.

It led to a further conference here three weeks ago when federal labor officials were brought in to suggest ways of making farm life acceptable to the man who doesn't own the farm.

SAY WAGES LOW

Ontario's agriculture minister, W. A. Stewart, outlined the problem concisely at the outlook conference. He said it is even difficult to encourage immigration of farm workers. Complaints were that farm wages are low; there is little security in the form of unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation, medical or hospital insurance and no adequate living accommodation.

Legislation now in the making would provide the equivalent of unemployment insurance and of workmen's compensation to farm laborers.

The exact form of unemployment insurance still is under consideration.

Agriculture Minister Haye has shown interest in the method followed in France, based on government contributions of two - thirds against one - third from the farmers.

However, officials note farm wages in Canada are considerably higher than in France and contributions from the workers would not be overlooked.

THROUGH PROVINCES

As for workmen's compensation, any financial aid will have to be through the provinces since they are constitutionally responsible.

The idea would be to encourage provinces by making funds available to pertain portion of the cost. Details still are awaited, but a figure used in discussion by officials at the federal share is 50 per cent of general cost and administration.

Other ideas being considered are a plan to move workers from areas of surplus labor to other areas where there is no labor, and some kind of a scheme to make a new type of mortgage available to farmers to provide living accommodation.

Another possibility is to offer tax incentives to urban dwellers to work on farms during their holidays or go out after work. This would be aimed at fegetable and fruit - growing areas of Ontario and British Columbia.

NDP Headquarters Has Air Of Confidence as the Party Gears for General Election

OTTAWA (CP)—Nobody sings "Everything's Coming Up Roses" around New Democratic headquarters these days but Party Leader T. C. Douglas and Director Terry Grier have an air of confidence and expectancy as the party gears up for a general election this year.

Mr. Douglas has been telling party workers:

"If you give us 70 seats, we are going to turn Parliament upside down; if you give us 170 seats, we are going to turn Canada rightside up."

He says the party, founded in 1961, is "at the stage now where we could make a major breakthrough politically."

He considers a lot of Liberals and Progressive Conservatives are disillusioned with their previous party allegiance and are ready for a change.

Mr. Grier is making no election predictions but he says a variety of forecasts in recent months give the party between 40 and 75 seats.

Mr. Grier says the NDP's finances are more stable now than in the 1963 and 1963 pre-election periods. Membership is 60,000, up about 15,000 since the 1963 election, and party activity is stepping up at the constituency level.

Mr. Grier said: "Should a general election be called in the spring, we should be in better shape than for the last two elections."

The New Democrats have been working hard to convince the voters they are a necessary alternative to both the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives.

They feel they scored on that line in a federal by-election in the Waterloo South, winning the three constituency seats in Ontario in a three-cornered fight.

Prospects of a rough, tough parliamentary session are seen by Mr. Douglas.

He said in an interview Tuesday that, if the Liberal government doesn't investigate serious charges made against it and the "unsatisfactory state of affairs in immigration and justice," the New Democrats are prepared to make a confidence.

He reiterated the demand he made in the Commons before Parliament adjourned last month that Prime Minister Pearson appoint a royal Commons committee to explain "misleading the Commons about the case involving Lucien Rivard, wanted in the U.S. on charges of narcotics smuggling. This referred to Mr. Pearson's statement Nov. 23 that Justice Minister Favreau had advised him only a day or two earlier of charges of bribery and coercion against ministerial assistants and his later statement that he was first advised Sept. 2.

Mr. Douglas said the New Democrats want clarification of this and other aspects of the affair and of immigration cases in which persons were ordered deported but were found "hanging around two or three years later."

"Alleged improprieties and scandals have lessened the government's enthusiasm for going to the country (in an early election). They'll weigh that against the possibility it might get worse.

"I don't think we've got even a corner of the lid off. A lot of things are going on that don't fit together. You get a feeling of evasiveness."

He said he would like to know whether two RCMP officers who were ordered retired from the service remained eligible for pension "to keep them in comfort or to keep them in silence."

He referred to the case of Superintendent Rene Belec and Sub-Inspector J. M. Pelletier, whose dismissal was reported to have been recommended by RCMP Commissioner George McClellan but who were ordered retired instead.

Mr. Favreau replies on this subject had been "the kind of answer we were getting after Nov. 23 in the Rivard case when we had to extract information piece by piece from him."

Mr. Douglas said his party also wants a further statement from the government on the case of the Sefkind brothers who fled to New York leaving behind more than $20,000,000 debts."

Furniture purchases By State Secretary Lamontagne and immigration Minister Tremblay from Sefkind companies were only a "small part" of the matter.

Mr. Douglas said he can't see the resumed session winding up for five or six weeks after MPs return. No new session should be started before the Canada Pension Plan and National Labor Code legislation are approved.

He said he expects a new session will start immediately after the current one prorogues. During it the New Democrats will take the stand that tax cuts are needed to stimulate the economy.

Problems of Sports Fishing Discussed at Symposium

OTTAWA (CP)—About 150 biologists and economists dealing in grappling with sport fishing in Canada Tuesday and found their prey an elusive one. They are attending a three-day symposium on the economic aspects of angling.

The keynote address, prepared by one American and delivered by another, summed up the problem:

"All the signs presently available seem clearly to point to a much greater demand for sport fishing in the future."

Dr. J. L. Kenchen, an associate of Dr. Marion Clawson who is director of the Ford Foundation's resources for the future research institute in Washington, read the address on the latter's behalf.

He asked "are fish necessary for fishing?"

Relatively few sports fishermen valued their catch primarily as food. Salmon perhaps had greater value for food than for other kinds but "many fishermen are unaware of their fish, because they will not eat them."

It was this "fishing for fun" that had brought the boom to fishing. Figures on attendance in U.S. parks and other areas were up 10 per cent.

He divided anglers into three groups: the smallest was the "highly informed" about all aspects of fishing; a larger "active sportsmen, interested in fishing but not obsessed by it"; and the largest group that fishes mainly "as an incident to being out-of-doors, either for themselves or their children."

The latter group's attitude to fishing "may go far toward determining the financial support for public fishery programs."

He suggested studies of fish-

Union Nationale Will Be Absent In Byelections

QUEBEC (CP)—Liberals and Independents will contest two provincial byelections Jan. 18 but the Opposition Union Nationale will be absent from the field.

Nominations for the races closed Monday. The independent candidates filed their papers with election officials shortly before the deadline.

At stake will be Legislative Assembly seats for St. Maurice and Terrebonne Counties, vacated last year by their Liberal holders.

Declining any part in the byelections, Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson said the contests came too soon after Christmas and involved undesirable winter campaigning.

He added that the Union Nationale will be holding its convention March 19-21 and does not want to be distracted from its "essential tasks" of organization.

Contesting Terrebonne as an independent against Liberal candidate Denis Hardy will be Lucien Dulnde, a Montreal salesman.

Facing the government party's Jean-Guy Trepanier in St. Maurice will be Independents Henri Paquet and Bernard Deschenes.

Lionel Bertrand, former minister of tourism, fish and game, won the Terrebonne seat for the Liberals in the 1962 general election with 28,901 votes, a majority of 8,186 votes over his Union Nationale opponent.

Former Attorney - General René Hamel took St. Maurice in the same election with 15,694 votes, which gave him a margin of 3,224 over the Union Nationale entry.

The Liberals now have 64 seats in the 95-seat assembly and the Union Nationale 30. There is one independent.

Mr. Bertrand was appointed to the Legislative Council, Quebec's upper house, last year, while Mr. Hamel resigned from the assembly.

Final Berth for Historic Warship

DESTROYER MUSEUM — The former Canadian destroyer Haida lies at her berth in Toronto harbor after arriving in the city under tow from Halifax. The ship was bought by a group of Toronto men known as Haida Inc. It will be turned into a floating Royal Canadian Navy museum. (CP Photo)

Need $250,000 to Enshrine "Haida"

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP)—For a fellow who'd never been aboard anything bigger than the steel ship Sam McBride of the Toronto harbor ferry service, Neil Bruce has been churning up quite a wash in nautical circles since embarking on HMCS Haida in her last days in the Canadian navy.

Her visit as in motion a wave of nostalgia that has seen Haida —perhaps Canada's most famous ship of the Second World War—rescued by an eyelash from the cutting-up torches and started on her way to becoming a memorial to Canada's part in the Battle of the Atlantic.

The air piled and a group of other lovers of the sea traditions—mostly landsmen — have scraped up enough cash and credit to buy the old warrior from the navy and have her towed to Toronto. Now they are eyeing a goal of $250,000 to enshrine her permanently in a cement berth complete with such trappings of her old war as remain and with facilities for telling her segment of the navy story.

It's a lively yarn. Haida met the enemy from the bedevilled Murmansk convoy run to the close-in waters of the German held French coast to the broad reaches of the Atlantic. She got her share of trophies, and more. And she was, as they said, a lucky ship and a good ship to sail in.

HUNTED TROUBLE

The British-built Haida, commissioned in 1943, found her sharpest action the next spring as part of the 10th Flotilla, a composite group of British and Canadian vessels attached to Operation Tunnel. This was a trouble-hunting force assigned to search out and destroy as much enemy warfare material as possible before D-Day to cut down resistance to the invasion armada.

During this time, she was in on the sinking of about 20 enemy vessels, four of which were destroyers, one a submarine, and a third another smaller coastal escorts or merchant ships.

In one of Operation Tunnel's sweeps along the French coast, another Canadian ship in the flotilla, Athabaskan, was sunk in a night action with two German destroyers. Haida destroyed one of the enemy pair and chased the other out of range.

The spot was five miles off enemy-held coast and under the guns of coastal batteries. Haida picked up 38 Athabaskan survivors and, when dawn forced her to move out of range, left her motor cutter with a crew of four volunteers to hunt for more. The small boat, pursued part of the way by three German minesweepers, got away after fishing eight more seamen out of the water.

Haida spent an uneventful D-Day patrolling on the fringe of the invasion path but found action a few days later when she and a British destroyer sniffed out a Nazi submarine in 360 feet of water while on patrol south of Land's End. Two hours of depth-charging brought the raider to the surface, where the destroyers promptly sank her.

About a month after D-Day, Haida suffered the worst mishap of her career while she was with a cruiser-destroyer force that was picking off ships in a German convoy that it came upon off the French coast at night. One of her own shells exploded in a gun and killed two gunners. Haida continued the job on the convoy, and six of its seven ships were disposed of.

Later, her work included supplying Free French forces with arms and ammunition in the Bay of Biscay area. In this region, too, she captured a couple of small German naval vessels trying to run from Brest in the guise of fishing craft.

Shortly before the German surrender, she switched to the Murmansk convoy run—where she had served earlier—and on the final homebound leg had a last close shave. A torpedo narrowly missed her, and another passed close to her sister tribal craft, Iroquois. A British frigate was sunk.

After that, Haida went into drydock to refit for the Pacific war. She came out too late for that, but years later got into action in the Korean conflict. She ranged up and down the enemy coast beating up trains, factories and other shore targets.

Her most notable peacetime feat came in November, 1949, when she rescued 18 United States airmen whose B-29 bomber went down in mountainous seas 300 miles northeast of Bermuda.

CRUISE STARTS IT

By 1963 she was a nautical dowager and nearing the end of her active life when Neil Bruce's brother Ron, who once served in Iroquois and now was a Sea Cadets officer, took him for a short cruise on Haida during a spell of reservist training on the Great Lakes.

The airman heard Haida's story from her officers, promptly began a romance with the ship and became convinced she should be preserved. He came across several others who were thinking along the same lines—Allan Howard, of Toronto Marine Museum; Norman Simpson, a former navy officer turned lawyer, and Peter Ward, a reserve navy lieutenant and military editor of The Telegram. They recruited others.

Haida Inc. came into being through the free legal work of Mr. Simpson and Jack Graham, another lawyer who joined the group. Neil Bruce began a series of trips between his home at nearby Streetsville, naval headquarters at Ottawa and Halifax, Atlantic coast navy headquarters.

Expectations had been that Haida would be in reserve until late 1964, but the group was jolted last winter when the navy's economy drive speeded up and it was announced Haida was being declared surplus and for sale almost immediately.

There was frantic action by Haida Inc., complete with visit to Defence Minister Paul Hellyer and the chief of naval staff. It probably did the Haida-worshippers no harm that the naval chief at the time was Vice-Admiral H. G. (Hard-Over Harry) DeWolf, Haida's skipper through most of the war. (Rear Admiral E. P. Wallace, deputy chief of operational readiness in the new integrated command at Ottawa, was the second of Haida's two wartime commanders.)

SAIL NOW, PAY LATER

Haida was destined for Crown Assets for disposal, but the government eventually turned her over to the group on the easygoing terms of $20,000 spread over 10 years, the first payment due a year after delivery. She was delivered at Sorel, Que., last August after a tow from her berth at Sydney, N.S., with a detour to the Halifax dockyard for a quick once-over.

Getting her to Toronto was going to cost some $7,500 on the barrelhead. McAllister Towing Company of Montreal quoted a rock-bottom price of $6,000 for the haul and then knocked off $1,000 for sentiment. Another $2,500 was needed to insure the crew for the trip up the St. Lawrence Seaway and the ship for her first year in Toronto. More money was needed for a watchman.

A friendly bank came up with the cash, but it's all costing the group $256 a week so far.

The crew problem for the trip was solved when three days' special duty was authorized for three officers and 13 reservists from HMCS York, Toronto's naval division. The part-time sailors paid their way to Sorel and bored the destroyer through the long series of canals to Toronto.

When the new is high next spring, tugs will take the Haida from Pier 6 to a spot on the waterfront on the edge of Coronation Park, a Metropolitan Toronto park dedicated to servicemen who fell in the Second World War. The city has advised Haida Inc. that it will be happy to have the old ship there as part of the memorial.

When there is enough money in the kitty, a concrete mole will be built to separate Haida from Lake Ontario. Later—about $250,000 away from Neil Bruce's first cruise—the water will be drained out and the basin filled with concrete to leave the fighting old lady high and dry with her memories.

Pearson Will Visit Johnson On January 15

WASHINGTON (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson will visit President Johnson informally Jan. 15, the White House announced Tuesday.

Presidential press secretary George Reedy said the visit will be "an informal call and discussion" as Pearson returns to Ottawa from a Florida vacation.

Pearson had indicated before leaving Ottawa that he intended to stop at Washington on his way back "to speak to some officials."

It was expected also he would meet some other U.S. administration leaders but no firm list has been drawn up yet, it was understood. Some probable names are the Vice-President-Elect, Hubert Humphrey, Defence Secretary Robert McNamara and State Secretary Dean Rusk.

There was speculation that Pearson might want to discuss the long negotiations to work out some sort of free-trade system between the two countries in autos and auto parts.

It had been hoped to wrap up these negotiations before Christmas and get the matter before the U.S. Congress as soon as possible but, if this has been done, it has not been announced.

The informality of Pearson's visit, described by one official as a "kitchen-door call," will contrast to the official visit Jan. 12 of Prime Minister Sato of Japan, who will be the first foreign leader formally received here in the new year.

Hodge, Crozier ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Meet in Montreal

Two Leading Goalies Eye $250 Prize

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tonight marks the half-way point of the National Hockey League schedule and the league's two leading goaltenders are most head on at the Montreal Forum to decide who gets the $250 prize as best netminder of the first half.

Charlie Hodge of Montreal, the defending Vezina Trophy winner, has 79 goals against him in Canadiens' 34 games and Roger Crozier of Detroit Red Wings trails with 82.

While their teams clash in Montreal, Toronto Maple Leafs will be playing the Black Hawks in Chicago and New York Rangers will be at home to Boston Bruins.

Chicago, Toronto and New York have already played their 35th games and their goals-against totals are 98, 91 and 106, respectively.

The only other netminder playing his 35th game tonight is Eddie Johnston of Boston, who has been scored on 213 times so far.

Tonight's performances may also affect all-star ratings for Hodge and Crozier, since both are prime candidates for the first-half teams.

Crozier, although fair goals behind in Vezina Trophy competition, has a better personal record than Hodge. In the 2314 games he played, he allowed 77 goals against 945 shots from the opposition.

BAD GAME HUNT

Two goals were scored on an empty net when Crozier had been pulled out, and the other four came in the 8-3 disaster Dec. 26, the last time Detroit visited Montreal.

To give Crozier a rest, coach Sid Abel played substitute Carl Wetzel, who gave up four goals before he was pulled out after the first 20 minutes.

Hodge's personal record is 78 goals-against for a total of 790 shots in 33 games. Lorne (Gump) Worsley filled in for him in Chicago on Armistice Day and held the Hawks to one goal for a 4-3 Montreal victory.

Not counting Worsley's contribution, Hodge personally has allowed an average of 2.36 goals a game, compared with 2.30 for Crozier.

With the last game of the first half approaching, Boston received the disheartening news that their top scorer, Dean Prentice, will be lost to them for the season.

Prentice was injured in Chicago Dec. 27 on a breakaway attempt when Stan Mikita hauled him down from behind. X-rays Tuesday confirmed that Prentice has a broken bone in his back and must remain inactive for eight weeks.

Boston coach Milt Schmidt called up Ellis Goldsworthy of the Junior Niagara Falls Flyers as a replacement.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Don't raise your boy to be a soldier. Teethe him on football—not a bayonet. Don't coddle him with hockey sticks, boxing gloves, or soccer boots in his crib days. Give him a half-dozen ball-point pens.

For he won't be able to sign a $400,000 contract with a sword-point or a hockey blade.

Take the case of Joe Namath, the boy born with the Midas passing arm. He recently signed his name to a parchment that fairly glittered with gold. The New York Jets will pay Joe $100,000 a year for three years, lost in a $100,000 bonanza—and, if is reported, hand him $5,000 a year for the rest of his life.

Namath is reported to own the same football qualities as Johnny Unitas, rated the best quarterback in Uncle Sam's football country, or the world for that matter.

Those, Webb Ewbank, the Jets coach says, are size, quickness, a wonderful arm, a quick delivery, courage and the ability to make the big play, plus reactions a lot of quarterback could never learn.

It seems to me that is a helluva lot of hay to feed a young colt who will be turned out to the professional pastures against the roughest, toughest chargers in the business.

The fact that Namath has a bad knee is regarded lightly by the Jets. He was set at action part of the 1964 season because of the knee, but the 'lets' medicos are confident that surgery can restore the knee to sound condition by next June. Torn cartilage on both sides of the joint will be repaired.

If Namath survives the football wars until he reaches the age of Y. A. Tittle, or a Lou Groza, his bank account should reach the seven-figure mark.

Other famous sports figures have reached the millionaire circle—but they got there the hard way. None kicked off his career with nearly a half-million guaranteed for the safety spot box.

Jockeys Eddie Arcaro and Johnny Longden reached as millionaires. Willie Hartack is another. Gene Tunney made more than a million in his two fights with Jack Dempsey, and has made a lot more since. Dempsey is a millionaire today.

Joe Louis made more than four million but wound up broke because of income tax evasion. Sugar Ray Robinson earned millions, but had investments, taxes and other things took most of it away.

Floyd Patterson and Ingemar Johansson are in the heavy money brackets. Billy Petrolle who never owned a title, is rated a millionaire because of wise investments. Today he is a bank president in Fargo, North Dakota.

Millionaire baseball players are a rarity. The big salaried boys of the old days, like Babe Ruth, collected huge salaries for those times—and blew the most of the money.

Casey Stengel is the only seven-figure baseball figure alive today. Ty Cobb was another, but neither Cobb nor Casey made their pile through the front office pay cheques.

Cobb was given a tip-off to get in on the ground floor of a popular soft drink, scored heavily and later made a bigger tally in California investments. He died leaving $7,000,000.

Ole Case never reached the rich circle, although he made a lot managing the Yankees. But he had a Midas touch with investments. He owns a couple of banks, or is it oil wells, or both.

Baseball bonus babies were the talk of the sports world not too long ago. A lot of youngsters receiving fabulous sums for their signatures. And in some cases the signature was all they had.

Golf has produced and is producing millionaires like Palmer, Nicklaus and such. History claims that Walter Hagen and Sam Snead lucked away a million or so in the leaner days.

Professional hockey will never produce millionaires in the player ranks. King Clancy is reported as once saying, "I've been a player, a referee, and coach, but if I was in the game to make money I'd like to be a club owner. "They've got it all."

MONTREAL (CP) — Czechoslovakia's national hockey team posted the first victory of its Canadian tour Tuesday night by edging team of junior players from the Ontario Hockey Association and the Saskatchewan Junior League 3-2.

The European team lost 4-3 last Sunday to Canada's national team. The all-star team Tuesday night was made up of players from three farm teams of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League—Montreal Junior Canadiens, Peterborough Petes and Regina Pats.

A third - period goal at 7:50 by leftwinger Jaroslav Jirik broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Czechs the win.

The Czechs were aided by tight defensive work and strong goaltending by Vlado Dzurilla who made a total of 36 saves.

Chuck Goddard made 31 saves in the first 30 minutes of the game for the All-Stars and Fernand Rivard made 15 in the last half.

Other Czech goals were scored by defencemen Rudolf Potsch and rightwinger Jan Klapak. Rightwinger Jim Paterson of the Peter pats and leftwinger Craig Patrick of Canadiens were the All-Star marksmen.

OPENS THE SCORING

There were 8,272 fans on hand to watch the Canadiens open the scoring at 8:52 of the first period. Paterson drilled a 30-foot, partly screened shot between Dzurilla's legs. Andre Lacroix and Guilfoyle, two other Petes, set up the play.

Jan Klapak tied it up at 14:32 on a goal-mouth scramble, but the Canadians regained the lead on Patrick's counter with less than a minute to play in the period.

Frank Huck and John Vanderkruyt were serving Canadian penalties when Potsch's blue-liner knotted the score 2-2 at 19:58 of the middle frame.

The Czechs were never seriously threatened in the third period. Jirik scored the winner on a sizzling backhand shot fired at an angle from about 15 feet out.

The Czech coach said the Canadian team "were very young and very well prepared."

Junior Canadiens coach Scotty Bowman, who handled the Canadian team, said "they (Canadians) looked pretty good. "You can't expect much more with a bunch of boys who haven't played together."

Suggest Five-Country Loop

International Hockey League

MELVILLE, Sask. (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has approached Russia with a proposal for an international amateur league involving the top five contending countries, Gordon Juckes, CAHA secretary-manager, said Tuesday.

Juckes said in a telephone interview, the CAHA proposed a league involving the United States, Canada, Russia, Sweden and Czechoslovakia to the Russians during last week's tournament at Colorado Springs, Colo. Canada finished last behind the Russians and Czechs.

He said Russian officials planned to discuss it further with Sweden and Czechoslovakia when they return home. It was hoped the matter would then be brought before the International Ice Hockey Federation at its annual meeting in Tampere, Finland, during the world hockey tournament in March.

Juckes said the plan involves a 24-game schedule for each team. Canada would make a European tour playing each of the European teams three times; the teams would play three games in each country in the United States with the U.S. Nationals.

Each European team would make a tour of Canada and the United States, playing three games in each country.

Requests Federal Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Philip Hart (Dem. Mich.) said Tuesday he will renew his fight to place big - time professional boxing under federal regulations in the United States.

Hart said he is working on a revised bill, a proposal that be urged in the last Congress, to create the post of national boxing commissioner, with wide powers to license and regulate the conduct of pro boxers, managers, matchmakers and promoters, and to police the sport in general.

"It's the one hope for making boxing a clean sport and restoring public confidence in it," Hart said in a statement.

Riteways Nip Cobourg 1-0

Belleville Riteways earned a closely-contested 1-0 novice exhibition victory over Cobourg in the Lakeside centre last night.

The teams battled through two scoreless periods before Belleville snatched the decision with a third-frame singleton.

The Riteways play host to Wellington in an OMHA novice game at Memorial Arena tonight. Game time is 8.00 p.m.

At seven o'clock, Belleville Rollins peewees tangle with their strong Napanee counterparts.

Mortson took over as coach four games ago and the Oaks have won all four since. They still sit in fourth place in the five-team league, but now only two points separate them from the third-place Woodstock Athletics.

Mortson scored once and assisted on five other goals Tuesday night as the Oaks defeated Galt Hornets 5-3.

In junior senior game, the first - place Guelph Regals down Woodstock 6-3.

LEAD 4-0

At Galt, the Oaks were ahead 4-0 in the first two periods. Carl Hyrmers scored two and Moe Galand and Jack Prince one each.

Bob Pole and Joe Malo picked up two goals each for Guelph. Pete Bethal and Rick Hay got the other two.

Ted Power, the Athletics' player-coach, scored all three Woodstock goals.

Campbell Versus Lindsay

MONTREAL (CP)—President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League is to make a complete report today on the outspoken criticism of Terry Ted Lindsay, who claims he received unfair treatment in an NHL game against Toronto Maple Leafs last Saturday night.

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

Lindsay, a veteran left-winger of Detroit Red Wings, drew $75 worth of automatic fines when referee Vern Buffey handed him a misconduct penalty and then a game misconduct with 50 seconds left to play.

Both he and his coach, Sid Abel, were fuming after the game.

"I'm going to tell Sid not to pay the money," Lindsay said. "And I'm not going to sit for Campbell's kangaroo court either.

"If they want to make something of it, they can do it in a regular court and I'll have my own lawyer."

ABEL IN CHECK

Abel held himself in check. "I am not going to say anything because it doesn't do any good," he said.

Campbell said that since the game he has talked to Lindsay, Abel and Detroit owner Bruce Norris, and has received a verbal report from the referee.

But presumably he wanted to do some more investigating because he held off his report until today, when Lindsay and his teammates come to town for a game against Montreal Canadiens.

In his Saturday night outburst, Lindsay said his teammates could corroborate his charge that Buffey swore at him during the game.

"I suppose his report won't say anything about that, but our players can back me up. They heard him."

Campbell, a lawyer, was not impressed by Lindsay's threat to fight the fines issue in a regular courtroom. He said:

"You don't think he's serious, do you?"

TORONTO (CP)—Doug Canavan's foursome from Charlottetown rolled up the most impressive score of the opening round matches of the Tournament of Champions bonspiel here Tuesday night a 15-4 win over Bob Magie's Duluth, Minn., rink, reigning Unified States champions.

Cameron, along with vice Alan Smith, second George Dillon and lead Bob Dillon, pulled into a 4-1 lead after four ends then put it out of reach with a big six-ender.

The match was one of three that failed to provide the nearly 2,500 curling enthusiasts with a down-to-the-last-rock finish. Alberta's Hec Gervais provided a minor upset in romping to a 13-3 win over Lyall Dagg's British Columbia rink former Vancouver and Murray Roberts, from Uniontown, Ont., downed the Canadian high school champion-ship rink skipped by Bob Ash of Kirkland Lake, Ont., 11-8.

In the only squeaker on the opening night's draw Ernie Richardson's rink from Regina edged Harold Lerner from Winnipeg 9-7 when the Manitoba skip missed a take-out shot on the final stone with three rocks counting.

In today's morning round, Cameron meets Ash, Roberts meets Magie, Dagg plays Lerner and Richardson meets Gervais.

MEETS RICHARDSON

In the afternoon third-round play, Cameron plays Richardson, Lerner meets Magie, Gervais goes against Roberts and Dagg faces Ash.

P.E.I. meets Ontario in fourth round evening action while B.C. plays Saskatchewan, Northern Ontario meets the U.S. and Alberta meets Manitoba.

Cameron set the stage for his big end when he drew to the button with five stones already sitting in the house. Magie, in his efforts to squeeze by several rocks sitting in front of the house, failed to curl his stone around a P.E.I. guard and fell short.

Gervais' win was a mild upset over the 1964 Canadian and world championship rink from B.C. The Albertans opened up a 4-0 lead in the first end and remained well in front throughout. Dagg's rink scored singles in the second and fourth ends but a three-ender by Gervais in the sixth gave the Alberta four a 9-2 lead.

Ash's rink were definite sentimental favorites against Roberts crew, but while they gained the plaudits of the fans with some fine takeouts and draws, the high school youngsters were simply no match for the veteran rink when it came down to the final stones to count.

Gap Closing On AHL Top Scorer

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wayne Hicks is still the leading scorer in the American League, as he has been almost all season, but he's running scared.

Quebec Aces' veteran right winger, whose early - season runaway matched that of his club in the AHL's Eastern Division, had 41 points, from 17 goals and 24 assists, in the AHL's weekly statistics released Tuesday.

That gave him a bare two-point lead over his four closest challengers — Ivan - main Ed Hoekstra, Ted Hampson of Pittsburgh Hornets, Pete Stemkowski of Rochester Americans and Art Stratton of Buffalo Bisons.

Another point back, at 38, was Len Lunde of Buffalo, who leads the league's goal-scorers at 22. Stratton's 32 assists are the league high.

Gerry Cheevers of the Americans leads the goaltenders with a 2.44 goals - against average and shares the shutout leadership with Ed Chadwick of Buffalo at three.

Fred Glover, 37 - year - old player - coach of Cleveland Barons, is the penalty leader with 118 minutes.

Victoria Unbeaten In Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The magic charm that fell into the hands of Victoria Maple Leafs several weeks ago continued to work Tuesday night as they dumped Portland Buckaroos 4-1 to stretch their Western Hockey League unbeaten streak to seven games.

Vancouver Canucks, meanwhile, ended a winless streak at nine games when they edged visiting Los Angeles Blades 4-3 in overtime.

In the only league action scheduled for tonight, first-place Seattle Totems visits Los Angeles.

Standings were unchanged Tuesday. Seattle has 45 points, five more than Portland, and Vancouver is third with 36. Los Angeles has 33, Victoria 31 and San Francisco Seals 27.

Will Seek Fair Catch, Blocking

VANCOUVER (CP) — Use of the "fair catch" and unlimited blocking on punt returns will be sought by British Columbia Lions at the Canadian Football League rules committee meeting.

Herb Capozzi, general manager of the Grey Cup champion Lions, said Tuesday Canadian players "aren't returning punts any more; they're just catching them and getting hit."

He said statistics show that "the average return goes down every year. The play has become dull — just a kick and a catch and a tackle.

"The only excitement comes if the guy happens to fumble."

Suggested rule changes are mailed to all CFL clubs, then discussed by the rules committee at a meeting usually held in late January or early February.

Rangers Put Czech On List

WINNIPEG (CP) — Vaclav Nedomansky, 21, a forward on the Czechoslovakia national hockey team, has been placed on the New York Rangers' negotiation list, it was reported Tuesday.

Denis Ball, Western Canada director of player personnel for the National Hockey League club, said Nedomansky was listed after the Czech visit here. Canada defeated the Czechs 4-3 in an exhibition contest Sunday. Nedomansky got a goal.

"I'll tell you, this guy really impressed me," Ball told a reporter. "He first caught my eye during their Saturday afternoon workout.

"I kept my eyes on him all Sunday afternoon. His goal came on a major league shot."

Once on the Ranger list, the club has the exclusive right among NHL teams to negotiate for Nedomansky's services.

The fifth - place Rangers last fall signed the Swedish star, Ulf Sterner, to a professional contract and he is with Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League, a step below the NHL.

Jail Pitcher 'Signed' for Long Term

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The baseball team at the Kansas Penitentiary got encouraging news Tuesday — Fireball Jackson's coming back.

Fireball, a place more formally known as Isaiah Leon Jackson, was sentenced to 10 to 21 years after he pleaded guilty to a charge of armed robbery of a taxicab driver.

It was while serving an earlier term for robbing a gasoline station that Jackson gained the reputation of having won more games and struck out more batters in one season than any other pitcher in the 100-year history of the penal institution.

In September, 1963, Jackson was paroled.

A year later, after he had pitched for Reno, Nev., in the California State League, he was arrested for the taxicab robbery here.

Jackson, who pleaded guilty Tuesday before District Judge William J. Burns, explained he came home broke and longing for luxuries he had become accustomed to in organized baseball. The holdup netted slightly over $40.

Young Keon Signs With Marlboros

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League announced Tuesday they have signed Jim Keon, 18-year-old brother of Dave Keon, star centre with the parent Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

Marlboro coach Jim Gregory said Keon had received a hockey scholarship at the University of Michigan, "but I guess he didn't just fit in as a scholar."

Young Keon, in contrast to his brother who is one of the NHL's smallest players, is five feet 11 and weighs 182 pounds. He used to play for Neil McNeil Maroons in the former Metro Junior A League in Toronto.

Gregory also said defenceman Jack Chipchase will likely be the next Marlboro to receive a professional tryout, probably with Victoria Maple Leafs of the Western Hockey League.

Paul Laurent had a three-game tryout with the Leaf farm team in Victoria and Bert Selby played in two weekend games for the NHL club, scoring a goal in the game Sunday against New York Rangers.

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Alouettes traded young players for old Tuesday in a five-for-three swap with Hamilton Tiger-Cats that brought the Als a long - sought prize — quarterback Bernie Faloney.

Both Eastern Football Conference clubs figured to profit by the trade—the Als seeking to inject some life into an anemic backfield, and the Ticats looking for young but proven players to plug holes left by retiring linemen.

With Faloney, 32, the Ticats gave up defensive halfbacks Ralph Goldston, 34, and Jackie Simpson, 29.

In exchange they got Billy Ray Locklin, 27, who plays either offensive guard or defensive end; guard Dick Walton, 23; defensive halfbacks Billy Wayte, 26, and Ted Page, 22; added Don Clark, 27, an all-star halfback who retired prior to last season.

The average age of the Ticats involved in the trade is 32.5 years, the Als 25.

Alouette coach Jim Trimble, who came to Montreal from Hamilton in 1962, feels that the Als will benefit from the trade for at least three seasons and possibly more.

THREE GOOD YEARS

He said Tuesday night that, while male athletes normally hit their peak at 28, Faloney "has three excellent years and possibly more ahead of him."

In Hamilton, coach Ralph Sazio "couldn't really say how much longer Bernie has to play."

Jake Gaudaur, Ticat general manager, said his club had 11 men who were 30 or over and six men who were 33 or over at the end of last season.

Retirements were imminent, and the Ticats were concerned that they might have to start the new season with too many raw recruits. They had plenty of depth at quarterback with Canadian Frank Cosentino and import Joe Zuger.

Alouette owner M. E. (Ted) Workman said that in Faloney the Als got "the one commodity missing in recent years in the football formula for success."

The "commodity" referred to was quarterbacking, position that has been weak ever since Montreal lost its popular signal-caller Sam Etcheverry four years ago when a trade with Hamilton—also for Faloney—fell through because Etcheverry insisted he had a no-cut clause in his contract and refused to report to Hamilton.

Argonauts To Hire New Coaches

TORONTO (CP)—Bob Shaw, head coach of Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, said Tuesday he hopes to hire two assistant coaches for the 1965 season when he attends the National Collegiate Athletic Association coaches' convention in Chicago this weekend.

Cliff Speegle and Jimmy Dunn, Argo assistant coaches for the last two seasons, will not be returning to Toronto.

Argos will thus have an entirely new coaching staff for 1965, Shaw took over as head coach when the management fired Nobby Wirkowski after the 1964 season, following the team's second consecutive last - place finish.

Speegle will be assistant coach under former Calgary Stampeder head coach Bobby Dobb at Texas Western University in El Paso. Dunn now is at his home in Maine and it is not known whether he has had any offers for the coming season.

"I have a line on a couple of assistants and I hope to sign them when I'm in Chicago," Shaw said Tuesday. He moved here during the new year's holiday from his former home in Regina.

World Not the Same Since Bomb Dropped Says Huntley

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The decision to drop the first atomic bomb on Japan may have been, as Chet Huntley said, the "most important decision of our time."

But almost 20 years later, it is still debatable and debated.

NBC, in one of its White Paper programs, devoted 90 minutes Tuesday night to the circumstances surrounding the decision by president Harry S. Truman. The story was told primarily by persons close to the development and use of that terrible weapon, with the notable exception of Truman himself.

From James Byrnes, who was secretary of state, to Gen. Leslie Groves, who directed the top - secret development of the bomb, we heard repeatedly that the decision was made completely on the ground that it would end the war quickly, thus saving American and allied lives.

Advisers all along the line agreed on the necessity of dropping the A-bomb on Japan, which still was resisting fanatically. But most of them had grave reservations.

"We knew, of course, the world would not be the same," said Dr. Robert Oppenheimer. So the bomb was dropped, more than 100,000 Japanese were killed, and, indeed, the world has not been the same.

Promoters Sue For $400,000

MIAMI (AP) — Promoters of the Cassius Clay - Sonny Liston championship fight filed suit for $400,000 against its sponsors Tuesday, claiming that amount is the balance of a $625,000 prefight guarantee.

Inter-Continental Promotions Inc., of Chester, Pa., brought the action in federal court against William B. MacDonald Jr., of Miami Beach and the New Amsterdam Casualty Co.

The suit alleged that MacDonald paid $224,000 of $625,000 guaranteed Inter - Continental which held exclusive contracts with Clay and Liston for promoting the fight.

It says the balance, plus interest, from MacDonald and the casualty company, which insured a performance bond agreeing to pay up to $300,000 of the difference between the live gate and the $625,000 guarantee.

The championship fight was staged Feb. 25, 1964. Liston failed to come out for the seventh round and lost his heavyweight crown to Clay.

STAMPS NAME COACH

CALGARY (CP) —Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference Tuesday named Dick Monroe, 42, from the University of Idaho as an assistant coach. Monroe has been coaching for 16 years at high school and college levels and was top assistant to coach Joe Andros at the University of Idaho.

Gould Believes 'Live' Concerts Will Disappear

Pianist Glenn Gould believes that live concerts will disappear with this century, and although he says he remains in the 1900s, he intends to hasten the day by giving up live performances himself as soon as he has filled his present commitments.

His thoughts on this subject, along with those expressed by others in the music world, will be heard on a special Sunday night presentation, Dialogues on the Prospects of Recording, Sunday, January 10 at 8:05 p.m. E.S.T. on CJBQ radio.

"I think the hi-fi enthusiast who wants to rave and rhapsodize about what he hears can enjoy music much more fully than the concert goer," says Gould, "and I don't agree with musicians who claim that the extension of music to all facets of our life will weaken man's appreciation of it. Too much music would be more inclined to stimulate appreciation than dull it."

On the program, Gould's own witty and well-informed opinions will be further enlivened by the candidly expressed views of Schuyler Chapin, assistant director of the Lincoln Centre for Performing Arts; John Hammond and Paul Myers, producers at Columbia Records; Marshall McLuhan, director of the Institute for Culture and Technology, and professor at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto; Diana Menuhin, wife of violinist Yehudi Menuhin; Robert Offergeld, music editor of Hi-Fi Stereo Review; American concert pianist Leon Fleisher; and Norfolk (Va.) businessman Ludwig Diehn whose hobby is writing symphonies.

With Gould, they will discuss the question of whether the recording industry should try to duplicate the sound of the concert hall, or whether it should attempt to reproduce music in a different fashion; the future role of the artist-performer, critic and engineer; and the degree of satisfaction the artist is likely to derive from performing for an unseen audience.

The various conversations will be illustrated with music examples chosen from the works of Lukas Foss, Dick Rasijnaknes, Frank Martin, Henri Pousseur and Igor Stravinsky.

Contented Bing Irritated By 'He's Mellowed' Story

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bing Crosby, who seldom gets ruffled at anything, evidenced irritation over a recent magazine story that said he had mellowed after years of being a difficult star.

"Hell, I haven't changed in 40 years," he muttered.

His claim seemed true as he strolled about the set of The Bing Crosby Show, tossing quips to members of the cast and crew. His face was lean and unlined, his manner affable. At 60 he presents the figure of a man content with his life and work.

Unlike his earlier career, Bing lives and works in different worlds. He and his wife, Kathryn, and their three children live at Burlingame, south of San Francisco.

The system has worked out very well, he said. "I fly down here on a jet Monday morning and I fly back on Friday afternoon. I live near the airport, so that's no problem. The flight takes 45-50 minutes. It's just like commuting from Long Island to Manhattan.

DOESN'T FIND IT TOUGH

"I do that for a couple of weeks and then I get a week off. So it isn't tough doing this show at all."

Why did he move north?

"Actually I'm here more than I used to be when I had a home in town," he said. "But I moved up north for a little quieter living. Los Angeles is doing great things, such as Buff Chandler's new music centre, which is a magnificent accomplishment. The city is getting bigger all the time—a little too big for me.

"I like it up north. I can drive downtown in a few minutes and walk around and get to know the storekeepers—even the lunkespers, too. It's nice to feel that you are part of a community."

CHARGED WITH THEFT

TORONTO (CP)—Five members of striking Guelph unit on strike at the three Toronto daily newspapers were remanded on $200 bail each when they appeared in courts Tuesday, charged with theft of papers and newspaper delivery boxes. The Globe and Mail circulation department said bundles of papers have been stolen every day since members of the Typographical Union (CLC) walked off their jobs last Aug. 9.

Madoc

MADOC — The National Hockey League Oldtimers will visit Madoc this Friday night at 8.30 p.m. when they will play an all star Intermediate team from this area.

Among the oldtimers will be such great stars as John Henderson, Gus Mortson, Bob Goldham, Tod Sloan, Gus Bodnar, Sid Smith, Harry Watson, Brian Cullan, Ron Hurst, Murray Ezzard, Gary Collins, Jack Hamilton, Pan Irwin, Wally Stanowskiid and others.

Mrs. Velma Carman was elected president of the St. John the Baptist Anglican Church W.A. at the annual meeting on Monday at the home of Mrs. Sandra Gordon. Other officers are vice-president, Mrs. Irene Ross; recording secretary, Mrs. Ann Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Barton; Living Message, Mrs. Elvi Brownson; Dorcas, Mrs. Hugh Empey; prayer partner and devotions, Mrs. Kay Thompson; sunshine and telephone, Mrs. Lois Nickle; Little Helpers, Mrs. Sandra Gordon; education secretary, Mrs. Mickey Delange.

Plans were discussed for a members' pot-luck dinner for Feb. 1st and for a congregational supper on Feb. 24th. The annual Valentine tea will be held on Feb. 10th. The World Day of Prayer will be held in the Madoc Pentecostal Church on March 5th.

Installation of officers was set for January 24th at the morning service.

World Not the Same Since Bomb Dropped Says Huntley

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The decision to drop the first atomic bomb on Japan may have been, as Chet Huntley said, the most important decision of our time."

But almost 20 years later, it is still debatable and debated.

NBC, in one of its White Paper programs, devoted 90 minutes Tuesday night to the circumstances surrounding the decision by president Harry S. Truman. The story was told primarily by persons close to the development and use of that terrible weapon, with the notable exception of Truman himself.

From James Byrnes, who was secretary of state, to Gen. Leslie Groves, who directed the top - secret development of the bomb, we heard repeatedly that the decision was made completely on the grounds that it would end the war quickly, thus saving American and Allied lives.

Advisers all along the line agreed on the necessity of dropping the A-bomb on Japan, which still was fighting fanatically. But most of them had grave reservations.

"We knew, of course, the world would not be the same," said Dr. Robert Oppenheimer.

So the bomb was dropped, more than 100,000 Japanese were killed, and, indeed, the world has not been the same.

Promoters Sue For $400,000

MIAMI (AP) — Promoters of the Cassius Clay - Sonny Liston championship fight filed suit for $400,000 against its sponsors Tuesday, claiming that amount is the balance of a $625,000 prefight guarantee.

Inter-Continental Promotions Inc., of Chester, Pa., brought the action in federal court against William B. MacDonald Jr., of Miami Beach and the New Amsterdam Casualty Co.

The suit alleged that MacDonald paid $224,000 of $625,000 guaranteed Inter - Continental which held exclusive contracts with Clay and Liston for promoting the fight.

It asks the balance, plus interest, from MacDonald and the casualty company, which issued a performance bond agreeing to pay up to $300,000 of the difference between the five gate and the $625,000 guarantee.

The championship fight was staged Feb. 15, 1964, Liston failed to come out for the seventh round and lost his heavyweight crown to Clay.

Gould Believes 'Live' Concerts Will Disappear

Pianist Glenn Gould believes that live concerts will disappear with this century, and although 25 years remain in the 1900s, he intends to hasten the day by living—as a performer—to himself as soon as he has filled his present commitments.

His thoughts on this subject, along with those expressed by others in the music world, will be heard on a special Sunday night presentation, Dialogues on the Prospects of Recording, Sunday, January 10 at 8:00 p.m. E.S.T. on CJBQ radio.

Glenn Gould is hi-fi enthusiast who varies the range and tone of what he hears can enjoy music much more fully than the concert-goer," says Gould. "I don't agree with musicians who claim that the extension of music to all facets of our life will weaken man's appreciation of it. I think music would then be more inclined to stimulate appreciation than dull it."

On the program, Gould's own witty and well-informed opinions will be further enlivened by the candidly expressed views of Schuyler Chapin, assistant director of the Lincoln Centre for the Performing Arts; John Hammond and Paul Myers, producers at Columbia Records; Marshall McLuhan, director of the Institute for Culture and Technology, and professor at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto; Diana Menuhin, wife of violinist Yehudi Menuhin; Robert Offergeld, music editor of Hi-Fi Stereo Review; American concert pianist Leon Fleisher; and Norfolk (Va.) businessman Sidney Dlehn whose hobby is writing symphonies.

With Gould, they will discuss the question of whether the recording industry should try to duplicate the sound of the concert hall, or whether it should attempt to reproduce music in a different fashion; the future role of the artist, tape-editor, critic and engineer; and the degree of satisfaction the artist is likely to derive from performing for an unseen audience.

The various conversations will be illustrated with music examples chosen from the works of Lukas Foss, Dick Raaijmakers, Frank Martin, Henri Pousseur and Igor Strwinsky.

Madoc

MADOC — The National Hockey League Oldtimers will visit Madoc this Friday night at 8:30 p.m., when they will play an all star Intermediate team from this area.

Among the oldtimers will be such great stars as John Henderson, Gus Mortson, Bob Goldham, Ted Kloen, Gus Bodnar, Sid Smith, Harry Watson, Brian Cullen, Ron Hurst, Murray Ezzard, Gary Collins, Jack Hamilton, Ivan Irwin, Wally Stanowicki and others.

Mrs. Velma Carman was elected president of the St. John the Baptist Anglican Church W.A. at the annual meeting on Monday at the home of Mrs. Sandra Gordon. Other officers are vice-president, Mrs. Irene Ross; recording secretary, Mrs. Ann Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Barton; Living Message, Mrs. Elvi Brownson; Dorcas, Mrs. Hugh Empey; prayer partner and devotions, Mrs. Kay Thompson; sunshine and telephone, Mrs. Lois Nickle; Little Helpers, Mrs. Sandra Gordon; education secretary, Mrs. Mickey Delange.

Plans were discussed for a members' pot-luck dinner for Feb. 1st and for a congregational supper on Feb. 24th. The annual Valentine tea will be held on Feb. 10th. The World Day of Prayer will be held in the Madoc Pentecostal Church on March 6th.

Installation of officers was set for January 24th at the morning service.

Contented Bing Irritated By 'He's Mellowed' Story

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bing Crosby, who seldom gets riled at anything, evidenced brief irritation over a recent magazine story that said he had mellowed after years of being a difficult star.

"Hell, I haven't changed in 40 years," he muttered.

His claim seemed true as he strolled about the set of The Bing Crosby Show, tossing quips to members of the cast and crew. His face was lean and unlined, his manner affable. At 60 he presents the figure of a man content with his life and work.

Unlike his earlier career, Bing lives and works in different worlds. He and his wife, Kathryn, and their three children live at Burlingame, south of San Francisco.

"The system has worked out very well," he said. "I fly down here on a jet Monday morning and I fly back on Friday afternoon. I live near the airport, so that's no problem. The flight takes 45-50 minutes. It's just like commuting from Long Island to Manhattan.

DOESN'T FIND IT TOUGH

"I do that for a couple of weeks and then I get a week off. So it isn't tough doing the show at all."

Why did he move north?

"Actually I'm here more than I used to be when I had a house in town," he said. "But I moved up north for a little quieter living. Los Angeles is doing great things, such as Buff Chandler's new music centre, which is a magnificent accomplishment. The city is getting bigger all the time—little too big for me.

"I like it up north. I can drive downtown in a few minutes and walk around and get to know the storekeepers—you, the innkeepers, too. It's nice to feel that you are part of a community."

CHARGED WITH THEFT

TORONTO (CP)—Five members of unions currently on strike at the three Toronto daily newspapers were remanded on $200 bail each when they appeared in courts Tuesday, charged with theft of papers and newspaper street boxes. The Globe and Mail circulation department and bundles of papers have been stolen every day since members of the Typographical Union (CLC) walked off their jobs last July 9.

Death, Hunger Roam Western Cattle Ranges

Alberta, Saskatchewan Are Short of Fodder

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Death and hunger are stalking the cattle ranges of Alberta and Saskatchewan with increasing energy in brutal winter weather.

The deaths of more than 800 cattle have been reported in southern Alberta's short-grass country, where ranges, normally almost clear in winter, now are covered with 18 inches of snow.

In parts of Alberta and Saskatchewan livestock feed is in short supply and selling at as much as twice the usual price. Stock watering is a growing problem in southern Alberta.

Livestock officials said Wednesday the industry faces worse feed shortages, thinspreds more cattle deaths and permanent injury to many animals from exposure during the next few days.

The Edmonton weather office said Wednesday night changes are taking place in the upper reaches of the air mass covering the Prairies and these might foretell some moderation Friday. Temperatures have been as low as 30 degrees below zero for four weeks.

TWO PROVINCES ESCAPE

Government officials in Manitoba and British Columbia said Wednesday their provinces so far have escaped any cattle deaths or feed shortages. But a spokesman in B.C. said problems could arise if unusually cold weather persists along the West Coast.

There were no reports of producers trying to unload cattle to avoid high feed bills.

Alberta officials said most cattle deaths were in the Medicine Hat, Brooks, Hanna and Coronation areas. A Calgary official said the figure of 800 deaths could be exaggerated.

Charles Kennedy of the Calgary stockyards said up to 15 cents a day are being sold there as "distress" cattle because they have been left on feed or other injuries due to the cold.

Britain Facing Inflation

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Lulled by the Labor government's assurances that it soon will be able to work out agreements to keep prices steady, Britons are suddenly shocked to find that, instead of stability, their country is threatened by serious price inflation.

An increase in milk prices may be the next blow to hit housewives at a time when skyrocketing costs for food and other family needs.

Economic Minister George Brown dashed off letters Wednesday to a number of trade associations demanding reasons why prices have been increased for scores of grocery items and other consumer products.

In London's northeastern suburbs, where he is campaigning in a by-election, Foreign Minister Patrick Gordon Walker assured voters that a prices review body, which the government is trying to develop will stop all "improper" price increases.

Soon after it came into power last October, the Labor administration stepped up the extra 15-per-cent tariff on imports of manufactured and semi - manufactured goods. It increased the gasoline tax and boosted the central bank's interest rate to the peak seven per cent.

While negotiating with labor and management to support a so-called "incomes" policy, designed to hold the line on prices, profits and wages, unions demanded and got higher wages in a number of industries.

British industry found its cost burden increasing. Road haulage fees and railway fares went up. So did prices for furniture, clothing, glassware and hundreds of grocery items.

Sabotage Vessel In Port

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) — A British minesweeper has seized an Indonesian sampan alleged to have been used in the bombing of a Liberian freighter in Singapore harbor Wednesday, the Malaysian government announced today.

Guns on the two men on board the Indonesian boat was captured. The other was believed to have escaped.

The Liberian - registered Oceanic Pride, a 9,442-ton cargo ship, was damaged by an explosion just above the waterline as it lay anchored about 1½ miles offshore. Damage was slight and there were no casualties.

Police said about 12 pounds of explosive had been placed in a water discharge outlet.

An official statement said the Indonesian saboteurs had managed to slip through Malaysian patrols by sailing into Singapore harbor Wednesday aboard the sampan.

However, on their return passage they were intercepted by a British minesweeper and both men dived into the water to escape capture.

One of the men was picked up, but strong tides submerged the other and he drowned.

Wednesday's incident was the latest in a series of raids launched by Indonesia against the Malaysian Federation, which groups Malaya, Singapore, Sarawak and Sabah (North Borneo).

Ever since its creation in September, 1963, the federation has been denounced by Indonesia's President Sukarno as a neo-colonialist plot designed to maintain British influence in Southeast Asia.

Sukarno embarked on a policy of "confrontation" toward the new state, which he vowed to crush.

Malaysian Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman Wednesday called for immediate aid from the UN and the British Commonwealth against the threat of an attack from Indonesia.

Indonesia Quits UN

JAKARTA (AP) — President Sukarno announced tonight Indonesia's withdrawal from the United Nations.

In taking this decision, Sukarno has ignored world-wide appeals, including his allies and friends in the African - Asian camp, to keep his country in the world organization.

The spokesman at UN headquarters in New York said no formal notification has been received yet of the withdrawal.

Addressing a rally held to condemn foreign military bases, Sukarno—to the cheers of the crowd—declared:

"On Jan. 7, 1965 at 2230 hours (5:30 p.m.), I declare as follows: In my announcement a few days ago I said that if Malaysia becomes a (UN) Security Council member, I will order Indonesia to walk out of the United Nations. Now since Malaysia has become a Security Council member, I declare that Indonesia has walked out of the United Nations."

Kingston Host to Politicians At Macdonald Anniversary

OTTAWA (CP)—Federal politicians will join political figures from Ontario and Quebec in Kingston next Monday to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the birth of Canada's first prime minister.

The celebration in the city where Sir John A. Macdonald began his political career as an alderman comes nearly 100 years after his greatest achievement, Canadian Confederation. It will take the form of an elaborate civic-state dinner sponsored by the Kingston Historical Society.

But in Ottawa, little outward interest is being shown in the birthday anniversary, and there has been newspaper editorial criticism of the lack of Canadian interest generally in the first Father of Confederation.

The dinner bill is being paid by the federal and Ontario governments and the City of Kingston. Prime Minister Pearson earlier accepted an invitation to attend, but is sending Privy Council President George McIlraith and Revenue Minister Benson to represent the government.

Mr. McIlraith will be Mr. Pearson's personal representative at the banquet. Mr. Benson, the Liberal MP for Kingston and junior member of the cabinet in seniority, will also represent the administration.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, a devotee of Macdonald history, plans to attend.

Premier Lesage of Quebec has been invited and nominated Provincial Secretary Jean Arsenault, the province's chief ceremonial planner, as his representative.

Lieutenant-Governor W. Earl Rowe and Premier John Robarts will represent Ontario, along with several cabinet ministers. Former premier Leslie Frost also will attend.

Macdonald was born in Glasgow and emigrated to Canada with his parents at the age of five. He went to grade school and studied law in Kingston, which he represented in the legislature of United Province of Canada before Confederation, and in the Parliament of Canada after 1867.

Historians now say that even with the conciliatory concessions made by reform leader George Brown in 1864 after a

Nursing Homes To Be Aided

TORONTO (CP) — Welfare Minister Louis Cecile of Ontario announced a new set of regulations for the province's nursing homes Wednesday under which the province will pay an increased share of the cost of providing nursing care for welfare cases.

The changes will be retroactive to Jan. 1 and will be official when they appear in the Jan. 9 edition of the Ontario Gazette.

If municipalities wish to continue receiving grants for the care of indigents in their nursing homes, they must adopt the new regulations in their own bylaws.

The announcement by Mr. Cecile came on the same day as testimony by Burrell D. Morris of the Associated Nursing Homes of Ontario before a government committee that many nursing homes in the province have been forced to reduce accounts so they can receive more money.

Mr. Morris testified before the legislature's select committee on aging that there are many nursing homes in Ontario guilty of what he termed "gross profiteering."

FEED SCRAPS

He said many homes put bills submitted to welfare agencies, have relatives' names on payroll lists, and feed scraps off others' plates to blind people in the homes.

Under the new plan announced by Mr. Cecile, the province will pay grants of up to $160 a month for the care of indigent receiving extraordinary nursing or medical services and a maximum of $115 a month for those requiring no special care. The former grant was a maximum of $80 a month for both classes.

Under the new plan, however, homes must maintain adequate accounts and records. In addition, standards are set for, space, heat, toilet and bathing facilities as well as diet.

The new regulations will also include a uniform bylaw for nursing homes recommended by Queen's Park five years ago and adopted by many municipalities in the province.

They also urged tighter licensing laws and more severe penalties for infringement of regulations.

AREN'T EFFECTIVE

"Tender, solicitous slaps on the wrist are totally ineffectual with drivers," they said. In the repeated situations where substandard nursing homes have been allowed to continue in manner of disobedience to prescribed standards under successive licences.

"Greedy fakery is still in style."

Mr. Morris is the operator of a nursing home in Grimsby, Ont., and president of the Associated Nursing Homes of Ontario. He said that since the bylaw passed by Queen's Park, nursing homes have improved "tremendously."

However, he said, sub-standard homes still exist. The shortcomings of many homes are readily apparent.

He said nursing homes are sometimes a place to live rather than a place to die.

"Some homes which make profits up to 40 per cent use blind patients the scrapings of the plates of others. This accusation is taking steps to overcome these atrocities."

Johnson To Ask Major Change In Money Supply

Would Stop Requiring Gold for Bank Reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson tentatively plans to ask Congress to eliminate the gold backing on part of the expanding United States money supply, it was learned today.

The plan would make an additional $5,000,000,000 in gold available for future increases in the money supply or to meet international obligations.

It calls for elimination of the legal requirement for a 25-per-cent gold backing on reserves that form the basis of the U.S. banking system.

The move would be only the second major change in relationship between money and gold since the U.S. went off the gold standard in 1934.

Banks must keep a certain percentage of their deposits in federal reserve banks. In turn the federal reserve must maintain a supply of gold equivalent to 25 per cent of these bank reserves. It is this legal percentage that Johnson favors repealing.

RATIO GOES DOWN

The ratio of gold to currency and reserves has gone down in recent years for two reasons: A steady, moderate expansion of the money supply to keep pace with a growing economy, and a decline in the gold stock due to a deficit in the international balance of payments.

"It is obvious that something will have to be done," one authority said. "Even if our gold stock remains stable, we will need more money to take care of our domestic needs."

Nov. 30, U.S. currency in circulation totalled about $34,600,-

Generating Capacity Will Triple

By ALEX MORIN

OTTAWA (CP)—The increase in Canada's electrical generating capacity in 1965 will almost triple last year's increase, Resources Minister Laing forecast today.

In his annual statement on the national power situation, Mr. Laing also foresaw further additions "within the next few years" that will add another 17,000,000 kilowatts of hydro, thermal and nuclear electrical energy to the current total output of 26,900,000 kilowatts.

He said the forecast did not include "the vast potential that will eventually be developed on the Hamilton, Columbia and Nelson rivers and other major river systems in Canada."

Mr. Laing said the rescheduling of several large units originally projected for 1964 resulted in most of the difference between his forecast of 1,240,000 kilowatts and the 818,000 kilowatts actually installed during the year.

For 1965 he forecast new generating capacity for 2,100,000 kilowatts. There would be 1,200,000 kilowatts of new hydro capacity and 900,000 kilowatts of thermal (or fuel - produced) capacity.

The 1964 increase was made

Lower B. C. Mainland Expecting Another Storm of Rain or Snow

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lower British Columbia mainland, still digging out from a three week period of heavy snowfalls, is expected to be hit today with a storm bringing strong winds and either rain or snow.

The area has escaped heavy snow for a week and temperatures have climbed above the freezing mark. Roads in metropolitan Vancouver were mostly clear Wednesday for single-lane traffic at least, and major area highways were bare.

A yardstick of the discord during the last month was a report Wednesday on unemployment, showing it 30 per cent higher than the level of year ago.

No over - all estimate was available, but the Carpenters Union said only 300 of 2,400 members were working in the lower mainland. An estimate more than 1,500 loggers had filed unemployment insurance claims since Dec. 16.

All schools in the greater Vancouver area were to be open today in up to 60 per cent of them. Elementary Valley students will remain home for the fourth consecutive day.

A small relief logging camp at Draney Inlet, 250 miles north of Vancouver, radioed it was growing short of food supplies. A helicopter was expected to fly emergency supplies before the end of this week. The camp has been isolated by 12 miles of four-inch-thick ice.

At Schoonmaker on Harrison Lake, 60 miles east of Vancouver, a storekeeper reported a missing hard rain may be growing short of food Snow in the area was reported six feet deep. Employees of a logging camp were to search for two Indians.

Ice mud on the tracks were the apparent cause of a derailment of Ashcroft in the B.C. interior of the CNR's transcontinental Passorama. None of the 150 passengers was injured, but the train was expected to arrive here today 12 hours late. Three diesel units and a baggage car left the tracks.

William Ramsell, sales manager for one of three major dairies in greater Vancouver, said routes were almost back to normal.

"The fellows have been coming in dog tired . . . in places we would leave milk at a toy house to supply a number of families, and they have to be walked blocks from their trucks up hills and down hills," he said.

The B.C. Safety Council warned walkers to "forget their pride and carry a cane."

Shoe and department stores reported a run on rubber footwear but other businesses suffered.

Recreational businesses complained that the severe weather conditions had taken the color and fun out of the area's tourist slogan: The Evergreen Playground.

B.C. homeowners were warned they cannot expect insurance to cover losses if floods damage their property when the snow melts. But some experts have said the snow won't melt fast enough to cause any general flooding.

Success Seems Near in Attempts To Solve Viet Nam Govt. Crisis

SAIGON (Reuters)—A breakthrough in attempts by South Vietnamese civilian, military and Assembly leaders to solve the 2½-week-old government crisis appeared to have been made, informed sources said today.

The sources said negotiations were moving towards a satisfactory conclusion based on the following conditions:

1. Release of members of the high national council—the provisional legislature—arrested by South Vietnamese generals in their power play Dec. 20.

2. Assertion of the civilian government's authority and recognition of it by the military.

3. Provision for the early selection of a constituent assembly that will replace the ousted high n a t i o n a l council with a larger membership.

Meanwhile, a deflated mass of 1,500 people staged an anti-government sit-down strike on the main bridge in the Buddhist stronghold of Hue, central Viet Nam, today blocking all traffic, according to reports reaching here.

Hue was virtually paralysed by a general strike. Anti-government leaflets and a strike by school boys in Saigon also reported today a mounting pressure against the government continued.

Johnson Asks Medical Care For Elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson proposed today a broad health insurance - health care program that includes a suggestion that the federal government pay part of the basic operating costs of medical and dental schools.

Johnson, submitting a message to Congress on the Nation's Health, plugged first for enactment this year of medical insurance for those 65 and over under the social security program.

He made the message his first one on a specific subject in the new session, thereby giving it high priority.

"I believe this year is the year when, with the sure knowledge of public support, the Congress should enact a hospital insurance program for the aged," the president said.

Johnson called, too, for a five-year program of grants "to develop multi - purpose regional medical complexes for an all-out attack on heart disease, cancer, stroke and other major diseases."

4 Teen-Agers Die in Jail Due to Fumes From Furnace

PAYSON, Ariz. (AP)—Carbon monoxide poisoning caused the deaths of four teen-agers in the Payson jail, a county official ruled Wednesday after an autopsy.

The deaths blocked this report communities in the mountains of central Arizona.

Pathologist Dr. Alfred Mussafia ruled yesterday carbon monoxide poisoning was the cause of the Tuesday morning deaths.

Authorities said they will continue their inspection of the butane gas heating system in the jail. The inspection began Wednesday when two investigators were overcome while checking the heating system.

Sheriff's Deputy Lyman Peace and the rescue squadron director Ed Rim were overcome while in the jail. They were taken to hospital and given oxygen before being released in good condition.

The four were arrested Monday for investigation in the theft of some beer. They were placed in the jail on orders of juvenile authorities.

Deputy T. L. Meredith, who found the victims in a cell, said "I was never so shocked in my life."

The dead, all Payson high school students and all described as popular with their classmates, are:

Clifford Greenleaf, 18; Kenny Haught, 15; John Watkins, 16, and Blaine Schroeder, 16.

Jones said the four were among seven teen - agers arrested in Payson in the last week-end following a wave of break of petty crimes. The other three previously were released to their parents.

Meredith said he found the youths dead when he took their breakfast in at 7:30 a.m. A doctor was called 30 minutes later.

Jones said the youths complained they were not informed of the deaths until several hours later.

Sheriff Elton Jones said Meredith had checked on the boys "sometime in the early hours of the morning," but would not give a specific time.

Robert Watkins said he went to the set of offices in which the jail is located Tuesday morning to pick up his entrance plate tags in another office. He was unaware that his son was dead in a cell only a few feet away.

Anglers' Catch Bigger Than Commercial Fishermen's

OTTAWA (CP)Anglers fishing in waters off the United States coasts in 1960 caught 80 per cent as much cod as commercial fishermen there, three times as much mackerel and 15 times as much flounder.

Dr. Lionel Walford, director of Sandy Hook Marine Laboratory for the U.S. department of the interior, quoted the statistics at a symposium on the economic aspects of sport fishing.

He said results of a 1960 survey were "astonishing" and showed that sport fishermen were booking larger catches of most fish than commercial fisheries.

He called for more statistical studies to facilitate creating a "natural history of the species." Sport fishermen had a lot of questions and at present answers "can't be bery satisfying."

Dr. T. G. Northcote of British Columbia's fish and game branch, whose topic was freshwater sport fishing, said more consideration should be given to "obtaining maximum sustained recreational value from the resource and less to sustained yields of fish."

He also wanted improvement in the attitudes of those late for research; more critical, experimental research, particularly on population dynamics of sport fish; attempts to measure a sport fishing quality, and more true management in the "sense of purposeful manipulation and control of sport fishing environments, populations and fisheries."

Earlier the biologists and economists discussed the economics of sport fisheries management.

Dave Young of Manitoba's mines and resources department said policymakers want to know how sport fishing compares with symphony orchestras or other leisure pursuits. To justify a project, the administrator must know its worth in relation to other schemes of a broadly similar nature.

"He wants to know the man hours spent fishing at a given location and the hours spent listening to the orchestra."

The symposium discussed ways of putting a price tag on sport fishing but couldn't agree.

The esthetic nature of fishing "just to stand and stare," as one delegate put it — was the block.

To fill gaps in the statistical knowledge of game fish, Professor A. D. Scott of the University of British Columbia suggested enlisting the anglers themselves. He noted the help amateurs provide in the fields of astronomy, ornithology, meteorology and other sciences.

"Why couldn't fishermen help biologists? They could collect water samples, report on levels, interview visiting fishermen."

Sailor Died of Brain Injury Suffered in Accidental Fall

KINGSTON (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the death of a St. Catharines sailor recommended Wednesday that shipping personnel provide better supervision of docked ships and that hotel employees act more promptly when handling intoxicated persons.

The five-man jury ruled that James Edward Thomas, 40, died of brain injuries and exposure suffered in an accidental fall while he was intoxicated.

Thomas' body was found Dec. 19 aboard the Keyzbey, docked here for the winter, by assistant shipkeeper Ernest Blow. Blood and matted hair were found nearby, where the man is believed to have struck his head.

Evidence showed Thomas had been drinking heavily aboard ship before leaving Dec. 13 to check into a Kingston hotel, where he continued drinking. He left the hotel Dec. 17 at the request of Assistant Manager Alexander Gaudreau.

Thomas was last seen alive by a taxi driver later that night.

Coroner W. H. Patterson said seven doctors gave testimony and at times disagreed on the effect alcohol would have had on Thomas' body. He felt the man should have been brought to the attention of a physician.

Thomas's body was fully clothed except for his trousers, when found in a public washhouse adjacent to the Confax, a ship he had served on as second cook before being paid off Dec. 10.

Evidence indicated Thomas had broken into his own cabin, drank more liquor and then, for unknown reasons, was walking aboard the Keyzbey.

The jury recommended ships be kept tidy at all times, that better supervision be maintained in ships during and after the time crews are paid off, and that hotel employees act prudently when they encounter intoxicated guests.

Around the Teel

Congratulations are in order to the Mac White rink of Dr. McCorquodale, Ron Benn and Bill Lewis of Trenton RCAF in winning the Highfield trophy at the Oshawa bonspiel that concluded on Wednesday night. The local rink defeated Les McMullen of Unionville in the final game. The boys all received medal grills for their efforts and all report a most enjoyable bonspiel.

Also coming in for congratulations is the rink skipped by Mrs. Anne Acton that was just nosed out for district honors at Peterborough.

On Saturday the first Curling spiel will be held with sixteen rinks in action. The company's representative, Al Hardy, has donated a beautiful trophy for his event and there will be good prizes accompanying the trophy. Goldie Livingston is chairman of the spiel with Archie Roe as drawmaster and umpire. Five out-of-town rinks will compete and the list was soon filled after the event was posted. There will be three games of eight ends each and scores will be posted on a point system.

On the eight o'clock draw in the morning W. Spinella of Quinte will play Charlie Cox. T. A. (Art) Carruthers will tackle Dr. McCorquodale, Dick Beare will meet Bob Barlow of Trenton and Ernie Williston will tangle with N. Burroughs.

On the 9 o'clock draw Don Keeler of Picton will meet Mac White of Quinte, T. Bernard of Quinte will meet Hazen Staley of Quinte, C. Williamson of Toronto mets Gil Wamboldt and M. McFaul of Marmora goes against Bob Alexander of Quinte. Good curling fellows.

Already 52 of the 64 rinks that will compete in the Quinte Spiel the last of the month have forwarded entry to the manager, Bruce Cardy of Trenton and everything is up to another grand time for the curlers. The spiel will run for four days over the opening ceremonies at the Quinte Club on Thursday night, January 28th. Ken Pinder is chairman of the hotels representatives in the committee and practically all of the plans have been completed. A banquet will be held on Thursday evening for the curlers and on Sunday afternoon a buffet dinner will be served to which the wives and sweethearts are invited. Splendid entertainment will be provided at both functions. Curling will take place at the Trenton Curling Club, the Trenton Curling Club and the RCAF Trenton Station. Four sheets are available at each rink.

Extended Period To Validate Driver's Licence

Automobile drivers who for some reason have had their licences temporarily gave up driving and thus never did secure their licences, may still have their licence applications validated.

Originally December 31st was the deadline for having 1965 driver licence application forms validated, but the Department of Highways has now extended the period.

George Olsen, local licence issuer, says that people's forms received in the mail may be validated at his office.

The date for new licensing system adopted drivers' licences now expires on the driver's birthday instead of the end of each year, and with forms mailed out from the Toronto office.

The deadline for purchasing 1965 auto licence plates this year is February 28th.

And there will be no extension.

Trenton Town Records Second Best Year for Building Values

TRENTON — Trenton's second best year on record for building values was 1964, according to a report released yesterday by building inspector Willis Anderson. Best year, as far as actual dollars are was 1962, when values were set at $2,382,544. Totals for 1964 are $2,003,843, but last year was a more representative year, as in 1962, one million of the total was credited to the technical addition to the high school. Last year's building was more widespread. In 1964, 221 permits were issued. In 1962, 197 permits were valued at $1,377,956.

New housing (which included apartments (3), a four-plex, a tri-plex, 13 semi-detached and 58 single family dwellings), additions to dwellings and dwelling repairs, accounted for $1,353,248 of the 1964 two million dollar total.

One industrial addition was valued at $63,600.

Seven commercial buildings, three commercial additions and 21 commercial repairs were valued at $213,323, and three new institutions, three additions to existing institutions and one institutional repair were valued at $633,272.

One new parks' board building was valued at $2,800 and 36 garages at $13,205.

There were nine demolitions, not valued and permits were issued for the installation of seven new sidewalk sections.

Values by the month were: Jan., $119,650; Feb., $84,600; Mar., $82,900; Apr., $140,790; May, $159,920; June, $106,725; July, $261,910; Aug., $62,677; Sept., $364,700; Oct., $130,300; Nov., $258,500; Dec., $50,350.

Murray Twp. Council Takes Office

TRENTON — During a five-and-a-half hour inaugural meeting Wednesday afternoon, Deputy Reeve Douglas McMaster, deputy reeve Gerald Ross and the members of Murray Township council, Leo McAuley, Harry Lafferty and Raymond Wilson took their seats in office.

Council has embarked upon an ambitious road building program and Tuesday afternoon passed a by-law to allow for the borrowing of $100,000 for that purpose. The most worthy phase of the program will be the completion of the subgrade and grading off Highway 401 to Highway 33. A new bridge will be built across railway lines south of the Telephone Road. While council must find the $100,000 to get the project under way, government "kick-backs" will be 100 per cent in monthly grants as payments, once the work is underway.

A third, and this time a "must" bridge, is being proposed for the township building, which council means to make the township's Centennial project, and this is just off Highway 401 on the new suburban road. Other suggested locations are in the vicinity of the township equipment shed on the village of Wooler.

Wherever the location, council will soon make up its mind in order to qualify for a $10,000 Centennial grant. Arrangements for raising the remaining cost of $20,000 for the building have been made.

000,000 and bank reserves $19,-000,000 and $20,000,000 in gold out of a total of $15,-500,000,000 has been set aside as back currency and bank reserves.

Thus, eliminating the gold backing on bank reserves there would be $5,000,000,000 in gold (25 per cent of $19,-500,000,000).

Highly - placed sources said Johnson feels further increases in the money supply will be needed and he is looking for signs; point to a fifth straight year of business expansion.

Although there is no think of money only as the currency they hold in their pockets and banks, economists regard bank accounts as an even more important medium of exchange.

EXCHANGE FREES

On a strict gold standard, currency may be exchanged freely for gold. Since 1934, only official foreign governments have this privilege of exchanging dollars for gold.

The exchange privilege has given the dollar unparalleled prestige abroad.

Asked if the proposed move would cause any loss of confidence in the dollar either at home or abroad, an official said: "This would make more gold available to meet international requirements. Also the strength of the currency depends primarily on the economic strength and good faith of the issuing country—and we have an economy of $623,000,-000,000."

Car Expenses Must Be Listed Says Department

OTTAWA (CP) — The revenue department is going to tighten up on taxpayers who use their automobiles for business purposes.

An information bulletin was issued Wednesday showing taxpayers how they must submit claims for automobile expenses. No longer will they be able to claim a simple fixed percentage of total car expenses for business purposes.

The department made the move after making a survey of expense - account living. The results of the survey are still being analyzed, Revenue Minister E. J. Benson said Wednesday that "it soon became clear that a serious problem was occurring in the area of automobile expense claims."

He said in a statement "there has been a growing tendency for persons who use their own cars for business and pleasure—such as professional persons or commission salesmen—to claim a fixed percentage of their automobile expenses year after year.

"In most cases these percentages bore little relationship to the actual miles travelled on business or to the number of miles for personal use."

The information bulletin tells taxpayers that in future it will be necessary to list the total miles travelled each year, and for a breakdown of the miles travelled for business and pleasure.

It says a detailed list of all automobile expenses should be attached, including gas, oil and lubrication, repairs, tires, insurance, licence fees, capital cost allowances and any other expenses.

If all the expenses total, say, $1,000, and the taxpayer can attribute half his total mileage to business purposes, then he can claim $500.

FILM FOR MILLIONS

MONTREAL (CP)—Canadian travel films were seen by more than 128,000,000 U.S. TV viewers and another 7,000,000 saw them through library bookings during the first nine months of 1964, says the National Film Board. The NFB distributes both its own productions and other Canadian travel films.

New Immigration Policy Being Proposed by Minister

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament in 1965 may be asked to approve a new immigration policy designed to attract more qualified immigrants to this country.

Immigration Minister Tremblay made such a commitment in the Commons last August. However, he was not specific about what may be done to change the present or Conservative predecessors.

Successive ministers of immigration have been promising a new deal in immigration ever since the Conservative government took office in 1957. However, present policy is almost unchanged from that framed for more than two decades.

The Immigration Act and regulations last were amended by Parliament in June, 1953, during the Liberal administration of Louis St. Laurent. In that year Parliament removed a racial clause from the act and regulations under which the government had had the power to prevent the entry into Canada of any person it didn't want.

Changes in immigration policy in recent years have been accomplished by amendments to regulations under the act. This is done by cabinet order-in-council and does not require legislation.

AGREE ACT UNFAIR

Basic requirements in the regulations were made in 1962 during the Diefenbaker administration. They provide for entry into Canada of any persons regardless of race or color provided they have the skills and qualifications necessary for them to become absorbed in Canadian economic and social life.

Members of Parliament from all parties agree that the Immigration Act, in many respects, is unfair and discriminatory. They also agree that the minister of immigration has too many discretionary powers.

Mr. Tremblay has said the Conservative government has found reforms are easier described than made.

One of the main problems is to grant prospective immigrants the right without harming security arrangements Canada has with other countries to ask for information on undesirable immigrants and to refuse entry to such persons.

The present Liberal administration apparently has found a way around these difficulties.

Mr. Tremblay told the Commons in August that he plans to ask Parliament to amend the Immigration Act to make possible a new, aggressive and positive policy to attract newcomers to Canada.

He said Canada has reached the point where such a policy should be adopted to attract immigrants and facilitate the movement of people who want to come to this country.

NEW APPEAL BOARD

The minister did not say when he would propose the amendments. He said this would be done following a complete reform of the administration of his department's services.

This reform likely will be announced early in 1965. If the government plans to go ahead with its proposal to amend the act this probably will be done at Parliament's 1965 session.

At the same time, the government will propose the establishment of an immigration appeal board which would be independent of the department and the minister of immigration. Rulings of the present appeal board can be upset by the minister.

The act or regulations also may be changed in 1965 to take care of a problem created by a Supreme Court of Canada decision. The court ruled in a 6-3 decision that the minister of immigration does not have unlimited powers to order deportation.

The court's decision referred to persons ordered deported who are granted permission by the minister to remain in Canada for a stated period of time. It said that if such a person is still deported during the period the minister cannot after the expiration of the period rule that the deportation order be enforced.

MORE IMMIGRANTS

Meanwhile, increased efforts by the department to persuade more qualified immigrants to come to Canada are starting to pay off. The flow of immigrants for 1964 will exceed 100,000 for the first time since 1960. Arrivals totalled 104,111 in that year and declined to 71,689 in 1961, 74,586 in 1962 and 93,151 in 1963.

The 1964 immigration year was highlighted by charges in the Commons that the rights of foreign nationals have been abused under the Immigration Act. Opposition members said many of these nationals—mainly seamen in Canada illegally—have been kept in jail for weeks and months without real justification.

Toronto lawyer Joseph Sedgwick was appointed by the government to investigate all allegations about the maltreatment of aliens held in jail for long periods before their cases were dealt with or before being deported.

No Easy Solution For North's Problems N.W.T. Tour Reveals

By STUART LAKE

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP)—Will another Louis Riel rise up in the Northwest Territories and lead Indians and Eskimos in rebellion against the white man's rule? Will the northern natives to live under conditions that wouldn't be tolerated in the provinces?

Are the churches playing a destructive rather than a constructive role in the North?

And in all the visions of the northland's future — and the bright tomorrows that may result from stepped-up education programs, what of the adults of today? Must they live out their lives in shabby housing without proper sanitation, adequate heating and electricity?

These were some of the questions asked by a group of prominent Canadians after an eight-day swing through the North with members of the Northwest Territories council.

Prime reasons for the 4,000-mile trip that started at Hay River in the Mackenzie region and ended at Frobisher in the Baffin Island in time for the Parliament of the North's winter session were to give the newly-elected governing body a first-hand look at the special problems in the Arctic.

It also was designed to make the natives more aware of their democratic rights and other social events were held in most settlements visited by the group with time allotted for the presentation of formal briefs, questions and answer periods and informal discussions.

FACE TOUGH PROBLEMS

Accompanying council members on the tour were Walter O'Neil, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Federation of Labor; Dr. Cyril Greenland, Young, editor of the Ottawa Citizen; Paul Deacon, editor of the Financial Post; Dr. Richard Glover, director of the human history branch of the National Museum; Diane Rowley, governor of the Arctic Institute; Dr. Gordon Rothney, head of the Boreal Institute of the University of Alberta; deputy minister Ernest Gross, and other officials of the northern affairs department.

Tour members agreed there is no easy solution to the complex problems of bringing the North from its present undeveloped-country status into the era of the high standards enjoyed by the smallest of communities in most Canadian provinces.

The feeling expressed was observed on the faces of many of the natives.

They hesitated to ask for the most trivial help from the government and found speaking in public a painful embarrassment. Some of the touring party wondered how long it would be before one of the brighter students now in the network of schools in the North lit a match under the people and sparked a demand for a better life.

The schools, populated with the bright and happy faces of the young, seemed to hold out the most hope. Also impressive was the spit and polish of the government hostels, set up in communities where children who had to leave their settlements to attend the schools.

PEOPLE QUESTIONED

But concern was voiced about the policy of dividing the school — on one side the Roman Catholic, on the other those of the Protestant faith.

Others questioned the government policy of overspending the staggering capital cost of the Crown-owned power plants, and the high prices of serviced building lots.

Civil servants from "the outside" who are sent to the North live in serviced homes under government subsidy. Yet government officials thought the great bulk of the native population could not afford the cost of flush toilets, running water and electric lights or become accustomed to living with them.

But where would the low-income group get the money to pay for the same services now common to settlements such as Fort Rae? Or the $120 for the combined services in Inuvik?

"The viewpoints are fresh but they contain nothing that hasn't been discussed over and over again in the department," said one northern affairs official.

How About 'I Have Lost My Phrasebook?'

By ALAN WALKER

NICOSIA (CP)—"Wail, I am looking for the phrase in this book," says the feckless tourist in the back seat. He reads it and then perhaps he points to: "I am lost," or "I have lost all my possessions."

Pity the poor visitor. If foreign language phrasebooks are any indication, he can never expect to lose their possessions or themselves with great regularity. They are hopelessly dated and to ask blankly: "How much is that in dollars?"

Or: "Where on Cyprus speak English but folk from afar usually try to learn at least the rudiments of the language if both the island's languages. If they plunge deeper into their phrasebooks they are apt to find sounding complaints along the lines of:

"This is not fresh. This does not smell very nice. This has too much fat on it."

VITAL QUESTIONS

The books expect that one of the first questions a tourist will ask is: "Is it safe to drink the water from the tap?" After that, it moves on to: "Where is the police?" and "I think the waiter would need to say sadly: "I have left my watch, my ring, my ring, my shoes, my Canadian soldiers serving with the United Nations peace keeping force have also written books printed by the United States government. Civilians, too, have written books but these have been known to fail, find special delights within.

"Please write some terms or I will fire," is a good opening gambit. If he co-operates then you can move on to this sort of conversation-starter:

"Tell the truth and you will not be hurt" is the first there is always: "You will be rewarded. The U.S. government will pay you."

Books intended for civilians take the reader through a terrifying series of misfortunes enough to put you off travelling before you leave your home.

Trouble is, of course, you never know when you have to say: "I cannot fasten my seatbelt." If you are going to help you will naturally ask apprehensively: "Will it be rough? Will it be dangerous?" Or perhaps you'll pany of 352,000 kilowatts of hydro and 436,000 kilowatts of thermal power.

The statement said the advances in transmission potential affect consideration of a power grid that would tie the various power systems together. Studies are continuing with the province to determine the physical and economic possibilities of establishing a trans-Canada grid.

Nuclear power will make its first commercial appearance in 1965, with the completion at Douglas Point, Ont., of a 200,000-kilowatt plant by Atomic Energy of Canada Limited. An experimental plant has been operating at Rolphton, Ont., since 1962. Toronto will have a plant producing 1,080,000 kilowatts by 1971.

Hydro increases in 1965 forecast by provinces include 130,000 kilowatts for Ontario.

More than half of the thermal power increases will be in Ontario. Apart from the 200,000 kilowatt nuclear power increase there will be a 300,000 kilowatt increase at the Lakeview generating station near Toronto.

Union, Company Officials Are Continuing Talks

TORONTO (CP)—Union and company officials will continue talks Thursday in contract dispute of 9,500 Ford of Canada workers in Ontario who are scheduled to walk off their jobs Jan. 15.

A spokesman for the United Auto Workers (CLC) said he could make no statement on whether progress had been made in the two days of meetings between the union and company officials.

Negotiating committee talks Wednesday apparently centred on a walkout by an undetermined number of workers in the company's assembly plant at Oakville early Wednesday.

The company contended that they were being made to do overtime work by the company before the Jan. 15 strike deadline. The company sent most of the other night shift workers home.

When day - shift workers reported for work Wednesday, cuts were cleared by police and the plant operated normally for the rest of the day.

Workers affected by the proposed strike are at four Ford plants in Windsor, Oakville, Welland suburb of Crowland and the Toronto suburb of North York.

In Oakville, the company said it will be necessary to work more over-time during negotiations. It also announced that it will not take any disciplinary action against the men who walked out.

Raise Holstein Male Calves For Prime Beef

AGASSIZ, B.C. (CP)—There's something about beef-bred bulls that Holstein calves should be served between bread.

Agricultural scientists at the federal experimental farm here in the Fraser Valley have been experimenting with Holstein-to a popular North American dairy breed—to raise the male calves for high-class beef instead of breeding.

They found that by feeding the calves high energy rations to concentrate rations they were able to produce high-grade beef, which, they say, could profitably, will financially benefit, eventually, by raising the animals for beef.

Dr. R. J. Forest, the project director, says the full results of the tests will not be complete until 1966.

About 200 Holstein male calves are born each year in the Fraser Valley. Almost half of these are destroyed because they generally end up as lowly hamburger, gourmet-speaking.

Dr. Forrest said that if the meat from these bulls was suitable for other than veal or hamburger, it would represent a five-week beef supply in the bulk, lower mainland market alone.

Two Regional Jails Will Be Built in Ontario This Year

TORONTO (CP) — Work is expected to start this year on the first two of a series of Ontario regional county jails that will be unique on the continent, Reforms Institutions Minister Allen Grossman said Wednesday.

The first jail is expected to be built jointly by the counties of Northumberland, Durham, Victoria, Haliburton and Peterborough.

The second is planned to serve the city of Hamilton and Wentworth and Halton counties, Mr. Grossman said in an interview.

The first group of counties that builds such a regional detention centre will make North American history, he said. The jail will have maximum and minimum security cells under one roof and will be a multi-county project.

The province will pay half the cost of construction, Mr. Grossman said.

HELD MEETING

Members of the five county councils met in Peterborough last November to recommend a single regional jail. Friday, they will meet in Toronto with the reforms institutions' office to discuss plans.

The jail will cost an estimated $1,295,100. It will replace the Sarnia, Lambton, Kent, 500. Hamilton and Wentworth, which share the 90 - year - old Barton Street jail. Officials say start a new jail last year, but the department asked them to include the Barton Street jail, he said Mr. Grossman.

Halton has a 97-year-old jail in Milton which county officials are expected to scrap in favor of the new plan.

Tuesday, officials of Brantford and Brant County councils, Mr. Grossman said, will meet with local interested officials to discuss the proposed jail but the department has asked them to consider including a Children's Aid Society. Oxford and Waterloo counties, Lanark County and Ottawa are contemplating replacements of the county jail that both use. The ministry and Renfrew County is considering a new jail.

The regional detention centre scheme has been discussed with Ontario county and municipal officials for more than a year but their discussions will be held this year.

Mr. Grossman said he is surprised at the ready acceptance of the idea. "It was frankly exploratory," he said in Toronto.

Ontario and the City of Kingston to help bear the cost. No cost estimates have been given on the project until later this year.

period of bitter political rivalry with Macdonald, no country could have brought about agreement among the representatives of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario to achieve Confederation.

Macdonald has been likened to George Washington as the father of the country. But Macdonald's birthday was not many years without recognition.

Back-benchers in Parliament have worked unsuccessfully to declare Jan. 11 Macdonald Day. But although successive Conservative and Liberal governments, the bills have died on the Commons order paper for want of a nod of approval from the cabinet.

There are few public monuments to him. A mountain northeast of Glacier, B.C., was named after him in the 1890s but is marked on only one series of official maps of Canada.

The federal government has been considering an appropriate recognition of Macdonald's contribution to Canada, and is negotiating with the Province of

Economic Growth

A report in the November issue of the Ontario Economic Review that the growth rate of labor income in Eastern Ontario was the highest for any area of the province in the decade from 1951 to 1962 makes interesting reading.

Before we rejoice too much, though, we ought to consider some relevant factors.

The rate of growth would, in part, be dependent upon the level of wages at the beginning of the period under consideration.

Secondly, we in the Quinte district, though we can congratulate Eastern Ontario on its good fortune, do not share in it. The province is divided into ten economic regions by the Department of Economics and Development. Eastern Ontario, in this division, starts at the western boundary of Frontenac County. Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward, Hastings and Northumberland counties are not in the Eastern Ontario district, but are in the Lake Ontario district. Labor income in this district increased at a slower rate, though still above the average.

A more meaningful table, though, might be that dealing with the distribution of labor income throughout the province. The Lake Ontario district, stretching from Lennox and Addington on the east to the eastern boundary of Ontario County on the west, received 3.6 per cent of the total labor income in 1962, compared with 3.5 per cent in 1951. Not much increase there. Meanwhile Metropolitan Toronto's share increased almost two per cent, from 41.1 per cent to 42.9 per cent. This exceeded the increase for Eastern Ontario, where income rose less than one and a half per cent, from 9.5 per cent of the total to 10.9 per cent. And, of course, all increases had to be offset by equivalent decreases in other areas. The Lake St. Clair region saw its share of the provincial total drop from 7.7 per cent to 6.1 per cent. The Niagara region's share declined from 15.4 per cent to 13.3 per cent.

In the light of these figures, we think it still holds true that too many of the province's new industries are being absorbed by Toronto and too few by the remainder of the province.

Shrewd President

Some experts maintain that the average man uses only a small proportion of his brain capacity. In other words, he is capable of achieving much more than he ever attempts.

Support for this theory would appear to be provided by the records of a number of statesmen in recent years. Elevated to the high pinnacle of world to places of high responsibility and trust, they have proceeded to exhibit much greater ability than their past records would have justified us in expecting.

A case in point may well be President Lyndon B. Johnson. Here is a man whose reputation was that of an accomplished wheeler-dealer, rather than of a shrewd statesman, until an assassin's gun suddenly burdened him with the most difficult task in the world.

He filled the vacancy caused by President John F. Kennedy's death in a most acceptable manner during the remainder of Kennedy's term.

Now, however, in his own right, by the overwhelming vote of his fellow Americans, his inaugural "state-of-the-union" message suggests that he may be as shrewd a statesman as he is a politician.

In large measure, President Johnson concentrated on domestic problems. It may be argued this is precisely what one might have expected of a man whose main concentration in the past, has been to get himself and members of his party elected to office. But may it not be that this concentration on domestic problems is exactly the course which is most likely to produce solutions in international problems?

Our own concern over the threat of communist expansion diminishes quickly when the Russian leaders give us some indication they are busy with domestic problems. Exactly the same reaction may be reasonably expected of the Russians when President Johnson focuses his attention, and the attention of his nation, on internal affairs. Thus, President Johnson may be said to be promoting a relaxation of international tensions in the most effective of ways, by providing an alternative program in which progress can be achieved while the world waits for time to heal some of the existing wounds in the international field.

We have come to a period in the history of this young country when premature dissolution seems to be at hand. What will be the outcome? How long can the present fabric last? Can it last at all? All these are questions which surge in my mind and to which dismal answers suggest themselves.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1891 in a letter to Edward Blake.

Not All Heart Defects Corrected by Surgery

To Your Good Health

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: We recently lost our son at age 11. He was born with a misplaced valve in his heart. In the short years he lived his general health seemed good; however, specialists said nothing could be done for him. But I'd like your opinion. Have you ever seen or performed an operation for this condition? What do you suppose happened? No autopsy was performed. He just fell, and that was it.—Mrs. R.B.C.

I'm not a heart surgeon, so I have watched but not performed heart operations. A good many but not all heart defects can be corrected by surgery. Some types of operations are successful in as much as 99 per cent of the cases.

Yet in other types, risk remains extremely high, or there is no way of correcting the defect. I have to guess at what might be meant by a "misplaced valve," because this could signify various things.

I would infer that the defect was not correctible. Great as the achievements of heart surgery are, some defects remain beyond our powers to treat. They may be clearly diagnosed, and the heart may be able to function for some years, yet final and sometimes sudden failure of it may be inevitable.

In cases like yours, I can only express sorrow that you lost this little boy and regret that his problem was one that has not yet yielded to surgery.

Even though an autopsy was performed (much can be learned from such autopsies) it is probable that the nature of the examined your son can still give you a reasonably accurate explanation of how his heart must have failed.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am now 67 years old and all through the years I have needed help in elimination. I have used mineral oil, milk of magnesia, suppositories and enemas. Now I get abdominal cramps after their use and it lasts a long time. Please tell me how to overcome this. — C. S. K.

If you were 10, 20 or more years younger, I would suggest that you read my booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." (For any others who may wish this booklet, send 25 cents in coin and an unstamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.)

However, at your age, in the 60's, I recommend that you give a thought to the possibility that something else may be the trouble other than a reaction from the use of laxatives.

Long - continued use of such so-called aids to elimination can result in spasm of the bowel, such as you describe. But so can more serious troubles, one of which is malignancy, or cancer.

Thus, for you C. S. K., I urge immediate medical examination including X-ray and proctoscopic studies. This could be a time at which immediate treatment could save you from dangerous peril.

For younger people who are failing or have fallen into the habit of thinking that they have to "take something" regularly to help elimination, I certainly suggest reading my booklet. There are right ways and wrong ways to combat constipation, and the wrong ways lead to greater troubles, sooner or later.

Dear Dr. Molner: I would like the name and address of the woman who has glaucoma, and her doctor's name also. My brother has this trouble. — Mrs. J.

Sorry, but my rule in the column is exactly the same as the rule of privacy which is in effect when you talk to a doctor in person. The doctor does not talk about your problems, conditions or circumstances without your specific permission to do so.

Names and addresses of people who write to me are confidential. I do not disclose them.

Attention all women! For the pamphlet, "The Pre Menstrual Blues," write to Dr. Molner, enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover printing and handling. This pamphlet may help you!

Strictly Personal
Policemen Difficult To Portray

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

There's something topsy-turvy in a society like ours, where people introduce us to others by our first names — because they haven't known us long enough to recall our last names.

I can't remember the last time I saw a uniformed policeman on the stage who looked and acted believable; for some reasons, actors always ring a false note when portraying policemen.

Whether Sundays depress or delight you depends almost entirely on the kind of day Sunday was for you as a child; the psychiatrist, Fenecci, as a matter of fact, designated a certain group of his patients as suffering from "Sunday neurosis."

Passing a vegetarian restaurant, I thought of Sir James Barrie's remark at his club when he looked down at Bernard Shaw's dinner plate: "Tell me, how are you going to eat that or have yet?"

Country dwellers often act as if "the city" were a late and perverted development in the history of mankind and suggest that we ought to return to our "natural" origins; but, actually cities have existed as long as civilization has, and the very word "civilization" comes from the same root as "city."

Has any member of the staff of a corporation ever included a rustic entry, "Mistakes Made During the Past Fiscal Year"? I'm convinced such corporate candor would give more confidence and a greater sense of "belonging" to most stockholders.

The finest and tersest rebuke to sentimental hypocrisy was given by Alice, when one of the Wonderland characters remarked that the Carpenter was nicer than the Walrus because he cried more when they were eating the oysters. "Yes," replied Alice, "but he ate a lot more oysters than the Walrus."

Mechanists who reduce human life to a matter of levers and muscles and nerve ends are as ridiculous as a grammarian would be who insisted that every word of "Hamlet" is in the dictionary, and therefore the dictionary is a creative work of great literature.

Too few of us have the wry frankness of Clarence Darrow, who once said in a speech: "I have suffered from being misunderstood, but I would have suffered a hell of a lot more if I had been understood."

Nothing is harder than being the son of a successful rich man who believes that his business acumen qualifies him as an authority on human relations.

Hellyer Deserves Marks For Giving Services Tools

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A tip of the Services cap to Defence Minister Paul Hellyer and his five-year- billion-and-a-half-dollar program to give the Armed Forces, at last, at least some of the tools to do the job.

Hats off to this political Organization Man because, in this seemingly strangest of Federal Governments, he has beaten back the Dream Merchants.

Hellyer, because of integration, compulsory officer retirements and other hard-to-take economies, may not be exactly beloved by the Forces. But they must give him marks for standing out what, for most of a better name, might be called the "Distinguishers" of the Services.

These are the Do-Gooders, the World-Savers, the Wide-Eyed Ones believed in the Federal Government who believe that Canada would be better protected by a great army of Foreign Aiders and Peace Corpsmen than by the forces.

For there are those of influence in the Administration who would like to see the Defence Budget converted from purposes of defensive war to what they propose would be offensive peace.

Nonsense, you say?

OFFICIAL RECORD

Consider then, the recent report on disarmament that the Canadian Government, this same Federal administration, made to the United Nations.

In a sentence it makes clear that the Government would like nothing better than to get rid of the Armed Forces, provided, of course, other nations did the same.

"...the total elimination of all existing defence forces and expenditures today would involve a shift of resources which would only one-seventh as great as required in the demobilization after the Second World War."

It reads the report, the second of two that the Federal Government has had drawn up, "This can be ascribed only to sloppy driving habits. Result — a traffic jam.

Now comes the point about police direction of traffic at intersections, particularly Belleville policemen's knowledge of this chore is obviously limited. As long as they are there anyway, waving their arms in wild, indefinite gestures, why not turn off the lights entirely during their presence and really wave cars through? This is done in other cities and it works.

I will bet any person ten dollars, the winner to donate same to a worthy charity, that fifty motorists will be stopped at random, given a driver's test impromptu by a qualified person, and less than ten per cent would pass it.

This is food for thought by those in authority. Let it be acted upon, maybe in a year's time instead of a haphazard tangle of poorly driven and poorly controlled vehicles, our busy intersections would become unclogged and free-flowing arteries. This can be a reality, with proper timing and proper driver direction.

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt met at Casablanca, Morocco, 22 years ago today—in 1943—to draft plans for the furtherance of the Allies' war effort. Letter to the Editor

Police and Drivers Said Incompetent

Ontario Intelligencer.

What was once a mere "traffic problem" in the city of Belleville has now become a major disaster.

This condition can be attributed to two things — firstly, sloppy driving habits and, secondly, poor police direction.

I will endeavor to illustrate both points as clearly as possible.

As an example we will take any three-lane street, Dundas Street East, for instance. A car making a left-hand turn, according to the rules of the road, is supposed to pull as far to the centre of the road as possible, leaving room for oncoming traffic to pass. This also enables following traffic to continue on unobstructed. I have made it a point to observe this, and to my dismay eight drivers out of ten do not know how to make a proper left-hand turn. This can be ascribed only to sloppy driving habits. Result — a traffic jam.

Now comes the point about police direction of traffic at intersections, particularly Belleville policemen's knowledge of this chore is obviously limited. As long as they are there anyway, waving their arms in wild, indefinite gestures, why not turn off the lights entirely during their presence and really wave cars through? This is done in other cities and it works.

I will bet any person ten dollars, the winner to donate same to a worthy charity, that fifty motorists will be stopped at random, given a driver's test impromptu by a qualified person, and less than ten per cent would pass it.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

80 YEARS AGO

Jan. 7th, 1885

The bell of the historic Hallfax clock is ringing two hours again, after being silent since the mechanism was wrecked in the explosion of 1917. This dispatch does not explain the delay in the repair work until another war was in progress. The clock is a unique one, so far as this continent is concerned. Queen Victoria's father, the Duke of Kent, when in command of the military establishment there about 140 years ago, was responsible for the installation of the clock. He adopted this means of rousing the citizens who, in his opinion, stayed too long in bed. But the Duke himself was not disturbed, as he lived out in the country.

30 YEARS AGO

Jan. 7th, 1935

Inauguration of the city council took place this morning at the city hall and many citizens were in attendance, including the mother of His Worship Mayor-elect C. O. Tice. She has passed the 80th year of her life and this occasion was the fourth consecutive time she has witnessed the installation of her son as mayor of this city. The mayor was escorted to the chair by two new aldermen, Ald. Richard D. Arnott and Ald. Glen Thompson. R. J. W. W. J. Walker, recently appointed minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, opened the meeting with prayer. Mayor Tice delivered an excellent address to the council, setting forth the position of the city and the prospects for the coming year. At the closing of the address a vote of thanks on behalf of the council and citizens was tendered by Ald. T. Y. Wills. The resignation of J. V. Doyle from the Board of Health was accepted with regret and the clerk was requested to forward a letter of appreciation to Mr. Doyle for his good work as a member of the Board during the past seven years.

Stretch Foot 400 Miles

Ottawa Journal

To someone who thinks of a good microscope as one that will set city lawyers afire on a sunny day the revelation of the powers of a new electronic microscope with a television attachment is almost beyond the capacity of ordinary imagination. It has been easy enough to accept magnification that made a human hair look like a railway tie, or the edge of a razor blade (even the extra sharp ones) as hills and valleys. But this new monster is said to be so powerful that it is capable of magnification up to more than two million times. This still doesn't mean much until the scientists explain that two million times makes a one-inch paper clip 32 miles long and a man's foot 400 miles. Why anyone would want to see his foot under those conditions is rather beyond us. But no doubt the scientists have strange worlds they want to conquer and a neutron or two need all the size they can get.

Supreme Court to Consider Design of Brassiere Frames

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP) — The design of brassiere frames will occupy the attention of the all-male Supreme Court of Canada at its winter term starting Jan. 27.

This subject matter will come before the court in a patent infringement case involving S. and S. Industries Incorporated of New York City and Hops-Koch Products Registered of Montreal.

The case is of a type which is frequently difficult to adjudge due to the complexities of the subject matter involved.

S. and S. Industries will appeal to the Supreme Court against a judgment of the Exchequer Court of Canada declaring null and void a Canadian patent for brassiere frames granted to S. and S. Industries in 1956.

Last year Hops-Koch Products asked the exchequer court to declare the patent invalid on grounds of lack of novelty and invention and ambiguity of specification. The company said it had been manufacturing brassiere frames of a similar design for 10 years.

The court ruled in favor of Hops-Koch Products, holding that the patent was invalid up to the essential requirement of containing in the specification a full description of the invention and of its operation or use as contemplated by the inventor. Had these descriptions must be correct, full and free from avoidable obscurity or ambiguity.

S. and S. Industries will ask the Supreme Court to declare the patent valid and issue of an Exchequer Court ruling that Hops-Koch Products is entitled to damages to be established by the registrar of the exchequer court.

The New York company will contend that the subject matter of the patent is a brassiere frame of flat steel wire of arcuate shape having a ratio of longitudinal extensibility to lateral flexibility. This would give stability to the wire when worn so that spiral twisting does not take place.

S. and S. Industries disputes the finding that there is any ambiguity about the specifications for its product.

It says the specifications state clearly that the wire for the brassiere frames is produced from a particular metal alloy and made into an article which will follow the natural curves of the wearer without irritation, giving the necessary lift were needed, yet resilient enough to support a load of reasonable proportions.

Merchants Now Displaying New Canadian Flag

PICTON (Staff) — Store windows in Picton are beginning to display the new Canadian flag. These new red and white flags are being sold and this is the first appearance of the new flag. Local citizens have mixed feelings with regard to the new flag and merchants say the new flag is not as yet a very good seller. To date only small flags have been seen but it is expected that in the near future larger sizes may be obtainable. The recently proposed flag containing three maple leafs which was on the market has now become the object of collectors and souvenir hunters, who want to pick up the available flags before they disappear. In fact according to one local merchant these are selling in greater quantities at the moment than the new flag.

Pleads Guilty To Theft of $800 Camera

PICTON (Staff) — In Magistrate's Court Wednesday, Murdock Taylor of the township of Hillier pleaded guilty to a charge of causing a disturbance and was fined $10 and costs by Magistrate T. V. Wills. Harry E. Shurtleff pleaded guilty to a charge of dangerous driving and fined $30 and costs of $4. 21-year-old Edward E. Robinson, who pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while impaired was fined $60 and costs.

Also appearing in court were three men originally charged in the same theft of articles from the residence of John Syrett, Picton. A charge of theft against one of the men, Robert Cook of Belleville, was dismissed by the Crown Attorney, L. Nethery. The other two men appearing, James E. Nolan and Raymond Hart both appeared. Nolan, 27, pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing the items, namely a 16-mm camera valued at $800; a 35-mm camera valued at $35 and an electric shaver $10. Nolan was remanded for sentence in one week. Raymond Hart, age 22, also charged with theft in the same offence pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by judge and jury. His case was remanded until January 20.

During the hearing of evidence in the case Constable George Wright of the Picton police force, who investigated the thefts said that the three men had been left alone in the house for a short time while the owner of the articles went out. The items were discovered missing when Mr. Syrett returned to his home.

The movie camera was discovered in a Toronto pawn shop. The camera valued at $800 had been both pawned and sold for a total of $65.

Regular Service Glenora Ferry Now Operating

PICTON (Staff) — Regular Ferry service between Adolphustown and Glenora on Highway 33 has been resumed as of Thursday last. For the past three weeks only passenger cars have been allowed to use the "Quinte" ferryboat, which has been operating across the quarter mile stretch of the Bay of Quinte. The restrictions were placed on the service after the water level became so low that the larger ferry, the "Quinte Loyalist," was close to hitting bottom. The larger ferry was taken out of service and the ban on vehicles larger than cars instituted while dredging was carried out at the docks and alterations made to the docks themselves. The Department of Highways which operates the toll free ferries put the large "Quinte Loyalist" back into service and dropped the load restriction a week ago. No further measures are thought necessary during the remainder of the winter.

Mother, Widow Of President Praise Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—The mother and the widow of President John F. Kennedy have written Prime Minister Pearson to express appreciation to the Canadian government for naming a mountain peak on the Yukon-Alaska border for Mr. Kennedy.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy also expressed deep appreciation for Canada's "extraordinarily generous contribution" of $100,000 for the John F. Kennedy Library at Cambridge, Mass.

"This would have meant so very much to the president—to know that the people of Canada had chosen to perpetuate his memory by honoring him in their own country—and then in supporting the library which was one of his most cherished dreams," Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy said.

Steel Hits New High

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The U.S. steel industry set a string of records in 1964, the industry's second good year in a row.

Production seemed to a new mark that was expected to total about 127,000,000 tons when final figures were in. This would easily surpass the old record of 117,000,000 tons in 1953. Output in 1963 totaled 109,000,000 tons.

Profits were up for most companies. It appeared some producers would reap record income for the year.

And steelmen, who have been spending money on new plants and equipment almost with a passion, are reported to have plunked down $1,000,000,000 for capital improvements in 1964, another record.

But some steel observers say the significant thing of 1964 wasn't the production record, the profits or the spending, but rather the realization that the once - retreating industry was moving ahead again.

For the first time in years, steelmen said they detected signs of success in a long-term struggle against competing materials and the steel industry's own old ego.

The brightening picture stems in the adoption of new production and processing ideas through the spending of millions upon millions of dollars for modernization — a vast, research-oriented program that seemed destined to carry the industry to sparkling heights in the years to come.

The big crunch dates back to 1960, the year the record 115-day steel strike ended. It picked up additional steam following the spic clash with the government over a steel price increase in 1962.

The only dark spot in the industry was another increase in foreign steel imports. The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated imports hit a record 6,000,000 tons, up 900,000 tons from 1963. The institute said American steel exports increased a little over the 1963 figure of 3,200,000 tons.

Christian Drama Council Aids Church-Theatre

DEAR DORIS — You say church and community groups often ask for help with dramatic programs. Here are some facts about us which may be helpful:

DORIS CLARK

The Christian Drama Council is an unique church-theatre organization serving all churches and other interested groups across Canada. Its purpose is "to foster the art of religious drama as a medium for the expression and communication of Christian truth."

In other words, we assist churches and other groups in the wide, wise use of plays, with a Christian impact, ensuring, as far as is possible, that such plays are both good theology and good theatre.

The Council operates a library of plays for its members, for reading purposes only; conducts theatre workshops, gives lectures and courses and seeks out new plays and playwrights.

For information about the Council, contact Christian Drama Council of Canada, 302 St. Clair Avenue West, Toronto 7, Canada. — GORDON PARKER, National Director, C.D.C. of C.

DEAR MR. PARKER — Thank you. I note your newsletter urges groups to use your library, whether they live in Newfoundland, B.C., the Yukon, or some point in between. Also that there is a continuing increase in performing groups, with two new plays in process of creation to keep the ball rolling. More power to you!

DEAR DORIS — My problem is that I weigh 164 pounds and I was wondering if that was too heavy. We have one baby girl and want more. I am 21 years. What should I do to get thinner? — MARRIED FOLKS.

DEAR MARRIED FOLKS — If you are one person, female, and less than six feet tall, you are overweight.

At 21, such a weight is a threat to baby-carrying and future health. Write in for my Simple Reducing Diet, enclosing ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR DORIS — My boy friend is nice but funny in a way. He talks of marriage all the time but is a big flirt. When I flirt with a boy or even say hello he is jealous.

How could I tell him that we are not going steady and to not boss me around? — JOLIO.

DEAR JOLIO — If you can't say it, write it. Some boys act like big shots and roll words like marriage around on their tongues just for the sensation.

DEAR DORIS — It is often necessary to call someone's attention when you want to make an introduction. A man may just have arrived at a party and you want him to meet a few people so you take him around the room.

First, you may have to call the attention of a lady. Then comes the problem. Do you say: "Mary, I'd like you to meet," etc? If not, how do you switch it around so that you don't end up talking to yourself; and conversely, if you are taking a lady around to introduce her and you have to draw the attention of a man, do you say: "Bob, I'd like you to meet. . . . "?

You must say his name first because you must gain his attention; and one of these must be wrong. — DILEMMA.

DEAR DILEMMA — You introduce him to her (only exceptions being if he is elderly or outstanding, like a prince or prime minister or president of the company she works for). So you do indeed speak her name first: "Mary, I'd like you to meet . . . "

If Bob is too involved to be noticing what goes on, jar him loose with "Bob, may I have your attention for just a minute?" Then proceed with, "Mary, may I introduce . . . " etc.

* * *

Confidential to KATHY — Hunt until you find a group which will bring some wholesome influences into your life. This might be at a Y.W.C.A. or church group, Girl Guides or C.G.I.T. You need an undemanding adult to talk to and teen-agers around you who are not carried away by physical sex.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — There is a boy who takes me out sometimes. When we are with a group we have a lot of fun, but when we go anywhere alone it is a boring evening. I do not think it is fair that he should continue to think I like him the same way he likes me.

He has asked me to go to a show and dinner afterwards. I don't think I should go, but my mother thinks it would be wise to go. — DON'T KNOW.

DEAR DON'T — Group dates are a grand way to have fun, and I go for them. At the same time, it's folly to expect every couple-date to be terrific.

Better you should practise making conversation and being interesting yourself. "Only a bore is bored."

DEAR DORIS — I have a handicapped uncle living with me. He had a stroke two years ago and lost his speech. The doctor says he will never get it back. He gets a Disabled Person's pension.

He is getting harder to live with every day. He has lost all interest in everything. Just sits in the kitchen all day long drinking coffee and smoking. He has his own room and I have suggested that he get some hobby and stay in his room part of the time but this infuriates him. He's always under foot.

I can say the most innocent thing to him and it will drive him into a rage and although he cannot speak otherwise he can string off a long streak of profanity. Since I have three young children I don't feel it's right for them to hear their mother called all sorts of filthy names. With him around I'm a nervous wreck and my husband and I seem to be constantly quarrelling. Could you tell me if there is any institution to put this sort of person in? — UNHAPPY HOME.

DEAR UNHAPPY — The tensions must be terrible. To have an unhappy male under foot; to be tensed for a blast of profanity; to feel pity as well as despair at being caught in a situation which threatens your home — it's really tough!

On his part, he is desperately frustrated with his inability to talk. This leaves him with all sorts of emotional upsets boiling inside. He has given in to his uselessness, but when you ask him to remove himself even further from your human company by staying in his room, this is too much for him.

There are homes for the infirm, for the incurable, for the aged, right across Canada. There is occupational therapy for those who can use it. The family agency or rehabilitation resource near you can guide you to the help you need.

SAVING SILVER

Dear Susanna: I wrote to you with regard to the care and storage of linens (I'm the girl who is starting the hope chest) but neglected to ask you about silverware.

Will it tarnish if stored away over a period of time, say two or three years? If so, how should I care for it? Again, your help will be very much appreciated. — Bev Wyatt

Since hope chest items, especially silver ones, are as precious as gold, you are a wise girl to want to take proper care of them right from the outset.

Yes, silverware will tarnish over a period of time when stored, so don't let silver plate get too brown before cleaning, because it will wear thin with too much hard rubbing. It is better to check it every four to six months. Maybe a brushing up with a silver cloth will do.

On the other hand, sterling silver will take plenty of cleaning and rubbing (it should, it costs considerably more) and will last a lifetime.

You will be interested to know though, that silverware can be stored in tarnish proof bags bought at the jewellers — one piece per bag. The silver must be clean and cool before placing it in the bag, and be sure there are no finger marks. It is a good idea to wear an old pair of cloth gloves.

There is also a tarnish proof material by the yard with which you can make draw string bags, or you could just wrap pieces in squares of the material.

At this point we encounter the same word of warning from Trudy Maclean. Silverware should not be stored in cedar lined chest or drawers. The oil or fumes will tend to tarnish the silver just as it browns the linens.

Of course, there are also wonderful products on the market now, that make it possible, after one application, to leave silverware exposed to the air for several months without the worry of it tarnishing. These are worthwhile investigating.

Let's see now, we've looked after preserving linens, and we have investigated the care of silverware — perhaps later on I could help out with a few suggestions for the care and preservation of a husband!

"NOW they tell us!"

German Stollen Is Fruit Loaf

By MARY MOORE

We overdid. We baked and baked so much we overflowed the schedule and space.

But since I made such a beautiful German Stollen and since it was so lustily consumed, I'm hoping you will make and enjoy it in mid-January just as much as you would have done at Christmas time.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Turkey Soup (see Monday); Crusty Rolls; Sliced Cucumber, Tomato and Onion Rings with French Dressing; Apple Dumplings with Lemon Syrup (see Tuesday); Tea.

SUNDAY

Garlic Spareribs (see Wednesday); Fluffy Rice; Braised Celery and Green Pepper; Toasted Bibb Lettuce, Endive and Tomato Salad; Turkish Delight Cake (see Friday); Coffee.

GERMAN STOLLEN

As you know, this is comparable to a yeast-type coffee cake and should be served as you would sweet rolls. It is a large fruity, nutty, sweet loaf that is sliced.

1 package granular yeast; 1 teaspoon sugar; ¼ cup lukewarm water; ½ cup scalded milk; ½ cup sugar; ½ cup shortening; 1 teaspoon salt; 2 eggs; 4½ cups sifted all-purpose flour; ½ cup chopped blanched almonds; ½ cup chopped citron peel; ¼ cup sliced maraschino cherries; 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind (optional) additional sliced cherries and nuts for topping.

In large mixing bowl soak the granular yeast in the lukewarm water with the 1 teaspoon sugar for 10 minutes until it is foamy. Meanwhile sift and measure flour; measure remaining ingredients and scald milk. After the yeast soaks 10 minutes add the shortening, the ½ cup sugar, salt and scalded milk which has been cooled to a little warmer than lukewarm. Stir to start shortening melting. Beat in eggs. Add 2 cups of the sifted flour and beat to mix thoroughly — then add 2½ cups more flour, reserving ¼ cup flour, your kneading board. Knead 100 times. Grease bowl, return dough to it, turn it over to grease top, cover and let rise until well doubled (or let rise overnight in cool kitchen). Punch down dough and knead into it on floured board, the blanched almonds, citron peel, sliced cherries and grated lemon rind (if used) — kneading it again 100 times. Form into cresent-shaped loaf, place diagonally on buttered cookie sheet and let rise, covered with tea towel, until well doubled. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 35 to 40 minutes. Do not burn bottom. Cool on cake rack.

When cool, ice all over top and sides with this Frosting: Beat well together 2½ tablespoons soft butter, 2 cups icing sugar and 3½ tablespoons milk. Decorate Stollen all over top with sliced maraschino cherries, sliced blanched almonds and citron peel. Beautiful!

British Girls Abandoning Nylon Hose

LONDON (Reuters) — British male connoisseurs these days have been complaining that there is hardly a pair of sheer nylon-encased legs left in London streets.

While Moscow girls are being publicly scolded in their press for shivering out the winter in flimsy nylons, their British sisters who inspired this vanity have gone to the opposite extreme.

The mums, and even the grandmothers, have followed their teen-age daughters into thick Victorian style woollen stockings, vividly patterned knee socks or heavyweight striped tights.

The craze has spread like wildfire throughout Britain. A five-minute spelling session in any provincial town would produce glimpses of vivid tartan, checked, or flower - patterned leg coverings.

Beetles—the insect variety—fir trees, spiders and spades are all being sported on shapely, and not so shapely, limbs.

Most glamorous winter legwear of all are the crepe lace stockings, demure in cream, subtle in brown or downright sexy in black that are worn to soccer matches or parties.

Why the sudden stocking revolution? Most women agree that apart from the extra warmth they bring extra attention.

And this year's fashion for ankle instead of knee-high boots makes some substitute essential.

Hair Coloring Demonstrated To Members of Sorority

The fifth meeting of Beta Sigma Phi Chapter PHI PSI, was held on Monday, January 4th, at the home of Miss Donna Mathews.

During the past month and through the festive season the members have been busy in many ways. A Christmas dance was held on December 11th and was enjoyed by all who attended.

The club sponsored a raffle on a Christmas turkey to raise money for their Christmas project which was to help a needy family at Christmas. The girls gathered and wrapped gifts, prepared a food basket, a Christmas tree, and delivered them to the family on December 23rd. The members had fun doing this and had a great deal of satisfaction knowing that they had given to a good cause.

The club purchased U.N.I.C.E.F. cards and sent them to the Hastings County Manor to brighten their Christmas and help a good cause at the same time. The girls plan to save old Christmas cards and send them to the children who are hospitalized.

Present at the meeting on Monday was Mr. Bud French, proprietor of the French Salon of Hair Design. Mr. French showed a film on hair color and hair design by Clairol. After the film Mr. French answered many questions that girls had in regards to hair coloring and hair problems in general. Refreshments were served following the film, by the hostess Donna Matthews and co-hostess Jane Freestone.

Pack Your Bag With Knits Suggestion of Company

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — How to leave home and like it was part of the program arranged for more than 200 fashion writers here for the New York Couture Group's spring previews.

Pack your bag with knits was the suggestion from Dow Chemical Company. It had in mind knits made from a chemical fibre called Zefhrome which wash, dry instantly, stay pleated, won't wrinkle, and weigh next to nothing.

To prove just how far a girl can go with a little money and a suit case full of knits, models paraded through the audience Tuesday in knit pants suits, knit daytime dresses both hoodie and sophisticated, knit sexy dinner dresses, elegant knit formal - wear — and for the woman who changes her mind, chic knit at-home clothes.

Some, like the red-and-black headstock check with black crocheted hemline and a lacy-looking dinner gown, made much of the handcrafted look. But other knits were subtly woven to resemble woollen tweeds and jerseys.

USES WOOL

In the showings by Originals, a cloth coat house with prices like fur, the stars were confection - colored Shetland wool coats so light they consume less than 32 ounces of baggage allowance of the girl who is going places.

Designer Jo Copeland locates the back slippers of her dresses down the side shoulder blade, rather than that unreachable area along the spine.

Miss Copeland also has created action shirts. Sleeveless blue cut blossoms top swinging skirts with deep pleats at the side. Shirts to suits are done pleated all around, or double pleated back or front, but they lie neat and flat from waist to hip bone to emphasize (good) waistlines. Hems just covered the knees.

Did you know that Napoleon Bonaparte who wrote between 50,000 and 75,000 letters or dispatches, lost his empire through a carelessly-written letter? Teen-Age Canada today looks at the vanishing art of letter-writing.

Art of Letter Writing Lost Through the Years

By JACK HUTTON

"What a shame," the English teacher was remarking sadly. "No one seems to sit down and write an old-fashioned letter anymore. It's a dying art.

"Students write correct letters in class, no doubt of that. But how many go on to make their letters an honest and possibly artistic expression of themselves?"

Honest? Artistic? How much, I wondered, is expected of someone who merely sits down to find how a friend is surviving the winter in Flin Flon, Manitoba.

At that precise moment I was introduced to the best book I've yet read in 1965 — The World's Great Letters, edited by M. Lincoln Schuster and published by Simon and Shuster in New York.

READ THIS

The year is young, admittedly. But anything else, even a James Bond novel I've overlooked, will have to be a classic to beat this one. If you haven't your library card from 1964 rush to find this book.

Did you know, for instance, that Napoleon Bonaparte lost his empire, his second wife and eventually his freedom because he was careless enough to include battle plans in a brief letter to his wife? The letter was intercepted.

You will find in this book a letter written in white-hot anger by the novelist Robert Louis Stevenson, defending a priest whose reputation was attacked after his death in a leper colony.

Stevenson, who had visited the colony and wept at the condition of the sick, called his family together after writing the letter and told them their future was ruined if he mailed it. He fully expected to be sued for libel.

His family told him to press on if he believed he was right. The libel action, incidentally, never appeared. But a monument stands to the memory of Father Damien because of Stevensons' letter.

TWO LEADERS

Compare the reactions of two leaders to the plight of families who lost sons on the battlefield — Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany and Abraham Lincoln of the United States.

The Emperor, after hearing that a mother had lost nine sons wrote to her: "His Majesty the Kaiser bears that you have sacrificed nine sons in defense of the Fatherland in the present war. His Majesty is immensely gratified at the fact, and in recognition is pleased to send you his photograph with frame and autograph signature."

Lincoln, on the other hand, wrote a letter to Mrs. Lydia Bixby that still serves as a model of its kind. (It came as a shock later to hear that two of Mrs. Bixby's sons, supposedly killed, had deserted. But that didn't detract from Lincoln's letter.)

The president wrote (in part):

"I feel how weak and fruitless must be any word of mine which should attempt to beguile you from the grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the republic they died to save."

LOST ART

The truth is, and I'm afraid we have to admit it, that the art of letter-writing was finely honed in earlier centuries but isn't today.

Bonaparte alone wrote or dictated somewhere between 55,000 and 75,000 letters or dispatches. Many were burned in Russia but more than 40,000 have been printed in one form or another.

I've always felt that the king of letter-writers must have been the French author, historian, poet and philosopher Francois Marie Arouet, better known as Voltaire, who lived between 1694 and 1778.

Voltaire, often called the "Prince of Scoffers," somehow found time to write to all the famous men of his time while turning out his prose, poetry and plays. And that doesn't count the numerous ladies who discussed the state of their hearts with him.

HIS QUALIFICATION

If you want to read an unusual application for employment, cast your eye over a letter which Leonardo Da Vinci wrote to the Duke of Milan in 1482. ("I can make armoured wagons carrying artillery, which shall break through the most serried ranks of the enemy.")

A most unusual book about a dying art. If you've time for one more New Year's resolution, find time to persue it some time in 1965. Your time won't be wasted.

Picton Guards Adopt Turkish Tyke

By ALAN WALKER

TRAKHONAS, Cyprus (CP) — Mascots come in all shapes and sizes. Canadian soldiers on Cyprus have several and one is a curly-haired Turkish tyke just four years old.

He is "owned" by No. 1 Company, Canadian Guards, but little Ali Munir suspects he really owns the company.

When the Guards arrived from Picton, Ont., they found they had inherited more from the Royal 22nd Regiment than just the tricky job of keeping Greek and Turkish Cypriots from each others throats. Young Ali was part of the deal too.

So Maj. Dave Hanson's company willingly took over the job of feeding, clothing and amusing the shy refugee boy whose family was forced out of nearby Omorphito when fierce fighting erupted nearly a year ago.

Guardsman Rod Courtney, 29, of Prince Albert, Sask., lifted Ali up and tried to get him to display his command of French and English—about six words of each—for a reporter.

But Ali wasn't having any. His large brown eyes strayed warily over the intruder in civilian clothes and then he buried his head in Courtney's arms. The soldier laughed and put Ali down. The child dashed around the corner to his playmates.

"He sure is bashful," Courtney said. "It took him about two weeks to get used to us when we arrived.

"I see along fine with him now though. I guard the gate and see more of him than others I suppose."

HELPS WASH JEEPS

The gate is entrance to an abandoned flour mill in which the Canadian company, serving with the United Nations peacekeeping force, has taken up position. Ali more or less has the run of the place.

"We drive him around in jeeps a bit and he helps wash them," Courtney said. "Anybody who goes near them thru is bound for a soaking though."

When mealtime rolls around Ali fetches his private army issue plate and cutlery — which some soldiers affectionately call "gut wrenches"—and joins the company. He sits at a small table by himself.

Sometimes the playful youngster and his Turkish friends lower military standards of discipline a bit too much, however.

"When he misbehaves, then we banish him for two or three hours," said Cpl. Ted Mason, 24, of Halifax.

Occasionally a new gate guard doesn't know Ali and the boy has trouble getting inside the mill yard.

"But he's a clever rascal and he always sneaks in anyway," said Lieut. Harry Norris, 42, of London, Ont. "He waits outside until a vehicle drives up and then when the gate slides back, Ali is inside as quick as a wink."

All lives in what were the mill offices, with his parents, four brothers and a sister. His father owned a coffee shop in Omorphito but lost it when the Greek-Cypriots forced Turkish - Cypriots out of the area.

"We have our hands full with Ali," said Gdsm. Courtney, "but we try to do what we can with the rest of the family. We hand over what clothing we can and usually send Ali home after meals with some milk and food for the others."

Ann Landers

Friend's Information Is Completely Ill-Founded

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A friend of mine who ought to know, told me recently that when a husband dies, all the family debts, such as department store bills, time-payments on appliances, cars and house mortgages are automatically cancelled — provided each account is under $450.

I had never heard of this before, but my friend assures me it is true. Will you please tell me if my friend has correct information? — LEARNING EVERY DAY.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR LEARNING — Your friend does not have correct information and I hope you will set her straight at once. Women have been known to kill their husbands for a lot less.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Don't tell me to see a psychiatrist. If I could afford a psychiatrist I wouldn't be writing to Ann Landers.

We have four children under ten years of age. My father-in-law lives with us, and he is the problem. He works nights and hangs around the house all day telling me how to cook and clean. He is a retired Army man and has told our kids all the dirty jokes from the last three wars.

When I try to discipline the boys he butts in and takes their side. He slips them money and lets them puff on his cigarettes for "laughs."

I've told my husband how I feel but he says he doesn't want to offend his dad by asking him to move. My father-in-law is in good health, has a nice income and could live anywhere. What he pays us each month comes in handy, but he be happy to do without it. Please give me some help. — MRS. OVER-RULED.

DEAR MRS. — Your father-in-law should live elsewhere. The welfare of your children comes first and you can tell your husband I said so.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We promised our daughter that when she was 16 she could begin to date. Well, Arleen had her 16th birthday two months ago and now we must install a second telephone to handle her social life.

She has a date lined up every Saturday night for the next three months. My husband and I don't know what to make of it. She already has a date for the Easter Bunny hop and a Prom date for May. Is this normal?

Arleen is an honor student and excells in languages and math. She practices the piano regularly and does her share of housework. She goes only with boys we know and they all seem to be gentlemen. We can't think of a reason to curtail her dating except that we are afraid it is not good for a girl to be so popular at this age. It may hurt her reputation.

Any suggestions? — MOM AND POP.

DEAR M. AND P.—You shouldn't be asking for advice; you should be giving it. A Mom and Pop who can raise the kind of young lady described in your letter are to be congratulated.

I see no reason for you to be concerned about Arleen's popularity. So long as she sticks to the rules and behaves herself it would be unfair to restrict her.

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What to Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Commonwealth Secretariat May Be Named

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The question of taking job of preparing the foundations of a Commonwealth secretariat began quietly behind closed doors Tuesday and ar informant said the outlook is optimistic.

He suggested that when all the talking is over and the framework completed, it is possible that a Canadian or a New Zealander may be named as the first — general or the new forum.

Some "tricky issues," are still to be resolved, he said, but the first session had begun Tuesday indicated "a general desire to be helpful and reasonable."

The new body would be designed to lighten the loose Commonwealth partnership along lines that could increase the flow of aid to the new members. It would not be designed to function as a new political or economic bloc.

VIEWS VARY

Difficulties involved include varying views on the scope of the proposed secretariat and whether it could threaten the independence of each Commonwealth member country. The new African members are sensitive about political intrusion from the more industrialized countries.

The exploration of building the secretariat is being undertaken by senior officials from 20 countries working under instructions issued by the prime ministers who met here last year.

The experts likely will conclude their meeting next week and report back to their respective governments. The decision then will be made whether the secretariat should be set up at once along suggested lines or whether it should be worked up for consideration at the next prime ministers' conference, possibly in July.

Fitness Council Now Organized For Coming Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Fitness Council, with 13 new members, will probably hold its first 1965 meeting here in February to consider requests for the $3,000,000 it allocates annually to fitness and amateur sport. The exact date of the meeting has not been set.

The 30-member council meets two or three times each year to decide how the grants should be allocated under its program. It makes recommendations to the minister of health.

The council was established in 1943, and about half its membership changes each year when some 15 of the two-year memberships terms expire. Along with the 13 new members appointed Monday, two terms were renewed for another two years.

The new members are: Edgar House, St. John's, Nfld.; Clair Buckley, Halifax; Dr. J. W. Meagher, Fredericton; Louis Chasse, Quebec City; Georges Labrecque, Quebec City; Rene Beliste, Montreal; Robert Peterson, Preston; Dr. Hugh Morris, David Ouchterlony, Toronto; Charles L. Raleigh, Toronto; Dr. Lorne W. Wheeler Vaughan, Ottawa; Dr. Wilfred Pelletier, Sault Ste. Marie; Dr. Arthur Johnston, Winnipeg.

The two members whose terms were extended are Robert D. Freese of Calgary and Kenneth P. Former of Montreal.

Mr. Farmer, former chairman of the council, will be succeeded in that position by James Worrall of Toronto, whose term still has a year to run.

Other members whose terms do not expire until next year are:

Earle Nicholson, Charlottetown; Mary Barker, Ingonish, N.S.; Morris Tkachuk, John W. Davies and Rev. Marcel de la Sablonniere, Montreal; Robert LeBel, Grand Chambly, Que.; Jack L. Edwards, Kingston, Ont.; Paul Veyssey, Hamilton; Dr. Paul Hauch, London; Dr. Max Aveve, Winnipeg; Dr. W. Lorne Grace and Dr. J. E. Merriman, Saskatoon; Dr. Maury Van Vliet, Edmonton; and Father David Bauer, Burnaby, B.C.

The 13 outgoing members are:

Louis Armstrong, Yarmouth, N.S.; Mrs. Malcolm Collum, Saint John, N.B.; Vern Bradley and Charles Mayer, Montreal; Dr. Roch Lachance, St. Damien, Que.; Andre Morency, Quebec City; Harvey McFarland, Picton, Ont.; Miss Margaret Lord, Bobcaygeon, Ont.; Dr. R. Bud Foster, Toronto; Right Rev. J. O. Anderson, Winnipeg; Allan McGavin, Vancouver.

ASKS FURTHER STEPS

LONDON (AP)—A plea for further delay in steps to unify the Anglican and Methodist churches was made editorially Wednesday in the Methodist review. "A plan for unity must not become the instrument of division," the article said. "A decision on the Anglican-Methodist proposals, whether affirmative or negative, that was carried by a narrow majority would be disastrous."

POSSIBLE SITES FOR NEW CANAL — United States President Johnson, in proposing action to improve the shipping link between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, has mentioned four possibilities: redigging the present Panama canal to eliminate locks and increase capacity; a canal 140 miles long, cutting through Costa Rico and Nicaragua; a 58-mile Sasardi-Mori Panama route; and a 95-mile Colombian route paralleling the Atrato River. Experts estimate the cost for a sea-level channel would range from $620,000,000 for one of the Panama routes to $1,900,000,000 for one through Nicaragua. (CP Newsmap)

CANADIAN EQUIPMENT

This would apply particularly to Australia and New Zealand which have defence commitments in that area. It is understood that Canada would not be drawn direct involvement in a war though Malaysia could expect to get contributions of Canadian equipment.

British concern over the situation deepened when Indonesian withdrew from United Nations after Malaysia got a seat on the Security Council.

A British informant said Wilson now has placed the issue in the hands of the Commonwealth secretary, though action will be considered at the UN and other political quarters in the hope that the Soviet Union and others close to Indonesia may help ward off open conflict.

As a precaution, Britain has already ordered about 1,200 troops from the Far East and The Sun said Tuesday that another 1,000 troops have been placed on the alert for air transport into the area within seven days if the threat against Malaysia increases.

STATE OF READINESS

Ships are being taken out of mothballs and a portion of the British Pacific fleet has been brought to a state of readiness for Far East duty if necessary.

These bombers could use both Singapore and Australian airbases. One report suggests that if the bombers have to make a long flight to the Far East, they would be refuelled over Canada.

Wilson had discussed the situation with the cabinet immediately on his return from a yuletide holiday. The Sun said one question discussed was whether British troops should engage in "hot pursuit" of Indonesian guerrillas into Indonesian waters. The Sun said it is unlikely that the British government will provide aircraft to strike authorities or guerrillas in any way that could, by itself, provoke all-out war.

Wilson Feels Sukarno Will Order War Against Malaysia

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Wilson is reported to be increasingly convinced that despite all reassurance, President Sukarno may order an all-out Indonesian war against Malaysia, involving Britain and the Commonwealth in a costly clash that could spread throughout Southeast Asia.

While Wilson made no comment on the deteriorating situation, sources close to him suggested that Britain may thread all caution to the winds and launch an attack, hoping to draw support from Communist China.

While still battling grave economic problems at home, Wilson has given the assurance that Britain will stand by Malaysia, though it is understood that if war comes, British ground troops and Commonwealth countries would carry a share of the heavy burden.

Will Not Attend Kingston Dinner For Macdonald

KINGSTON (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson says he will not be able to attend a dinner here Monday to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the birth of Sir John A. Macdonald.

In a letter to Lt.-Col. Louis Fiset, president of the Kingston Historical Society, Mr. Pearson said he hopes the organizers will understand his reasons for declining. He will be in Florida at the time, his only opportunity to take a vacation because of pressures of business in Ottawa.

It had been announced last month that Mr. Pearson had accepted an invitation to attend the dinner.

Mr. Pearson will also visit President Lyndon Johnson in Washington on his way from Florida back to Canada.

Col. Fiset said Tuesday that although Kingston officials are disappointed by the prime minister's decision, they see nothing amiss.

"He has been under severe strain and hasn't enjoyed a holiday for a long time," Col. Fiset said.

WAS CONDITIONAL

He added the prime minister had accepted the invitation to attend with the proviso that he would show up if nothing turned up to make it impossible.

Plans for the dinner have been under way in the making and officials of the historical society, the City of Kingston and the Ontario government have been working on it.

On his side to Jan. 11 Pearson said the prime minister has taken a keen interest in the event, "even to the extent of material support." He said Mr. Pearson had initiated the purchase of Bellevue, a Kingston house in which Sir John once lived, to develop it as a shrine.

Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker will attend the dinner, as will Ontario Premier Robarts and former premier Leslie Frost and his wife. Mr. Robarts also celebrates his birthday Jan. 11.

Prime Minister Pearson declined Friday Mayor-elect Frederic McGrath to take his place at the dinner. Revenue Minister Benson, himself living in Kingston, will also attend.

In another development Tuesday, Quebec Premier Jean Lesage also sent his regrets and designated Provincial Secretar- Wm. Tetley to attend in his place.

Sir John was born in Glasgow but came to Kingston at the age of five in 1820. He became a political career here at an alderman.

A Tragic Couple Who Gave Belleville a Gallows Party

By HARRY MULHALL

The mid-century migration of Victorian settlers to the greener pastures of Upper Canada had many an anguished personal sequel.

But, in the annals of the era, none was more dramatically tragic than the brief New World chronicle of Richard and Mary Aylward. Seeking peace and plenty, they died in violent public ignominy in Belleville a century ago.

Yet today, the shame of their end rests not so much with them as their times.

Convicted of murder, they were hanged side by side before thousands of their fellows, many of them blind drunk, all of them victims of mass morbidity.

As seen by contemporary reporters, their short existence in Canada and their macabre deaths now reveals a rounded social cameo of their environment.

Central figure of the grim episode is Mary Aylward. It was by her hand that she and her husband came to the public gallows. At first a figure of public outrage, she evoked such compassion when she died at 23 leaving three infant orphans, that one newspaper was moved to laud her "noble conduct."

It was she who set down the prelude of the bleak tale, writing from her cell in Hastings County jail on the eve of execution.

The story began in Ireland of the Black Forties — its people reduced to a desperate remnant by famine, where each blighted potato crop signed a new harvest of hatred for an imperial landlord.

BORN IN IRELAND

Mary O'Brien was born at Arpatrick, County Limerick, her childhood spanning that disastrous decade. In 1852, then 12 years old, she and a brother joined the great trans-Atlantic flight of her countrymen and immigrated to a sister in Connecticut.

Four years later she married Richard Aylward and, in 1856, the young couple crossed the border and took up residence with his aunt near Guelph. The same year they moved northeast through Upper Canada, or Canada West as it had been designated, and settled near Kaladar. In 1861 they finally shifted to the "unfortunate place" — the northern townships of Hastings County.

They began breaking land on the Widow Montegagle Township line where land grants had attracted other hopeful pioneers. Their immediate neighbors—divided by a two-acre field—was the family of William Mann who had arrived two months earlier.

At first all went well and life among the settlers—linked in common endurance—was cordial along the bush. Gradually, however, it seems the bleak hardships endemic in their way of life and the bitter personal backgrounds of many immigrants, manifested itself in human relations. And the dark wards appeared at the centre of it.

Bickering broke out, violent threats were made, mischief-making and quarrels ensued.

Mary Aylward charges one incident when, two days after her confinement with child, three neighboring settlers broke into their shack, beat up her husband and kicked her in the stomach.

The situation apparently was not helped any by malicious gossip which, at one point, she believed accused her of abnormal relationships with her husband.

DENIES FABRICATION

Before her death, she felt compelled to deny in a published letter "the calumnious fabrication, namely, that my dear husband and I were brother and sister."

The closer the neighbor, the more temperamental the situation, it appears, and a grave breach developed between the Manns and the Aylwards. It finally came to a head over allegations by Aylward that Mann's hens were trespassing in his grainfields.

Early in May, when there was still room on the ground and nothing to be cut, the Aylwards appeared at a neighbor's to sharpen a scythe. It fact, it had been earlier borrowed from the Manns' new bride, as events a week later proved.

The fatal incident in the whole disarray of neighborhood acrimony occurred May 16, 1862. It went like this:

As an argument developed over Munro's hens again flecking Aylward grain, Aylward secured off the grindstone and ran to his shotgun point. Munro grabbed the gun; Aylward snatched a double-barrelled pistol from his bosom—only to have it knocked from the hand. Young Munro stooped to pick it up, Aylward fired the shotgun in his direction from the hip, exploded painfully, but not seriously.

The young settler's wife stepped in. Snatching up the scythe Mary Aylward dashed from the house and felled the elder Munro with a blow.

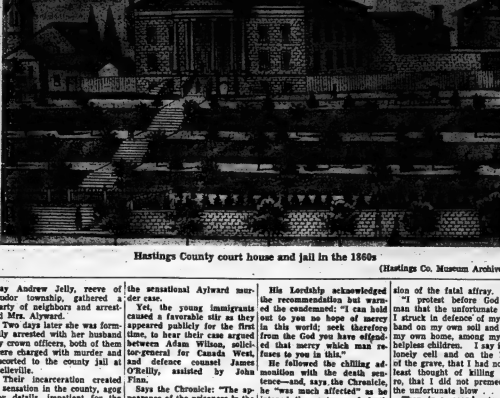
The action turned a sufficiently serious altercation to deadly tragedy.

Viciously slashed about the shoulder and head, Munro dragged himself home across the field, took to his bed—and died 12 days later.

While the incident provoked consternation in the settlement, no action was taken immediately. Feeling against the Aylwards ran high in the pioneer community, but it was not until Munro's death that the formal processes of society bestirred themselves.

At first the young Irish couple were not fearful of any consequences.

Testimony at their trial in Belleville quoted a boastful Mary Aylward describing to her neighbors the results of the struggle with the old Almighty to increase the elder Munro's pain. Her husband, she said, had told the son and "he is not dead, I hope he is."



The irishness of that sally was to help pin a gallows together.

Yet even the victim himself apparently demurred in taking any action against the couple, as suggested by a neighbor at Munro's deathbed.

"When I said the parties ought to be arrested he (Munro) said he had no desire interfering with them," John Rouse, the lone defence witness, testified at the trial.

WOMAN ARRESTED

Some 12 days later news of the settler's death raced through the township. That day Andrew Jelly, reeve of Tudor township, gathered a party of neighbors and arrested Mrs. Aylward.

Two days later she was formally arrested with her husband by crown officers, both of them were charged with murder and escorted to the county jail at Belleville.

Their incarceration created a sensation in the county, agog for details, impatient for the trial—anticipating its conclusion.

For if justice weighed the scales against the accused it would mean a double hanging to be witnessed.

And such it proved—although the public had to patiently bide its time to fall when the Assizes would sit.

The opening of the sessions, however, had a preliminary shock in store for the public —and an ominous prelude for the Aylwards.

Immediately preceding their trial, in the first week of the Assizes, a Belleville man named Morris Moorman went before Chief Justice William B. Draper, charged with the fatal stabbing of a local citizen, L. Wentworth Taylor.

Despite His Lordship's partial remarks that there were no excusable grounds for the incident, the jury within a half-hour returned a verdict of not guilty.

JUDGE STARTLED

Reported the Hastings Chronicle: "His Lordship appeared so startled by the verdict that he was unable to utter a word and simply discharged the prisoner."

The Chronicle followed up with an angry editorial denouncing the Moorman verdict as "inexplicable, misguided and erroneous."

"We feel that it will operate injuriously upon the best interests of society and that is the reason we feel called upon to make these observations," was its outraged conclusion. "After such verdicts life cannot be considered so sacred or so secure a thing as it was before."

It was in this environment that the jury was chosen and sworn on October 28 to decide the next matter on the docket—the sensational Aylward murder case.

Yet, the young immigrants caused a favorable stir as they appeared publicly for the first time, to hear their case argued by crown officers, both of them later-general for Canada West, and defence counsel James O'Reilly, assisted by John Finn.

Says the Chronicle: "The appearance of the prisoners in the dock created a sensation and prepossessed in a measure strongly in their favor—but as the honorable Solicitor General unravelled link after link in their chain of guilt, this feeling gave way and one of horror at the manner in which they compassed the death of Munro took its place."

FOUND CONSPIRACY

And little wonder.

For the prosecution with irrefutable deftness, built fact on fact to claim that the tragedy was not, after all, the result of a fatal pique and momentary loss of emotional control, but a conspiracy.

Remarks made before and after the incident by both Aylwards took on a new significance as the Crown assembled a succession of witnesses before the jury.

Most damning of all was the statement by a neighbor that the Aylwards had come to her house a week before to have their scythe sharpened.

Faced with this, James Reilly nonetheless made an impassioned appeal for Aylward to be freed and his wife convicted on a charge of manslaughter—alleging the act being the consequences of a wife bindly aiding her husband in trouble.

Mr. O'Reilly spoke for 90 minutes, defending the actions and statements of the Aylwards as consequences of provoked anger; that the sharpening of the scythe as a normal practice for farmers approaching harvest time.

That implement—by its absence—pointed to a touch of grisly humor to the trial.

A shame-faced law officer, W. D. Eadie, who arrested the couple, admitted they had willingly surrendered both the scythe and Aylward's shotgun to his safekeeping.

On the journey to Belleville jail "the scythe and gun were placed at the door of the tavern where we were staying and in about a minute afterwards on returning to look for them—the scythe was not there."

The embarrassed Eadus posted a reward seeking its return —but it never was seen again.

Absence of the murder weapon, however, was no more profit to the defence than its other propositions.

RECOMMENDED MERCY

Judge Draper quickly demolished the manslaughter claims of the defence and singled out the sharpening of the farmer's own scythe by Mrs. Aylward as "fearful testimony."

. . . take this woman's whole conduct through the whole case and we find nothing but the most cold-blooded barbarity," he said.

It took the jury two hours to reach a verdict.

It was guilty—for both accused—but with a strong recommendation of mercy.

His Lordship acknowledged the recommendation but warned the condemned: "I can hold out to you no hope of mercy in this world; seek therefore from the God you have offended that mercy which man refuses to you in this."

He followed the chilling admonition with the death sentence—and, says the Chronicle, he "was much affected" as he pronounced the sentence of death by public hanging on December 5.

"You may hang away," shouted Aylward. "I'm not guilty."

"Yes, They may hang away," his wife rejoined defiantly. "We're innocent."

As they were being led away the couple "spoke to one another and laughed in an unfeeling manner," noted the Chronicle reporter.

However, not all dismissed them to their gloomy end so righteously and the drama had another act to run before its gruesome finale.

Lodged in separate cells, the couple alternately received visitors—among them lawyer John Finn.

ORGANIZED PETITION

If Finn had lost the case in the judicial arena he at least had drawn a hopeful concession from 12 of the Aylwards' peers that society might not exact its legal due.

Apparently, he was not alone. Armed with the recommendation, Mary Aylward contrived to point out the folly of raising false hopes. The evidence, it said, had not been impeached nor questioned in "any of its shocking details."

Were the petitioner willing to abrogate abolition of capital punishment.

"The security and safety of a society so intimately depends upon the swiftness and the certainty of the punishment of the guilty that every man incurs a grave responsibility when he allows the kindness of his heart to influence him to prefer that punishment from being inflicted upon anyone whose guilt is beyond doubt."

. . . it becomes our painful duty to point out that the security of society are above the promptings of generous impulse toward condemned felons, and that without the infliction of exemplary punishments in all cases, the safeguards of life and property will be endangered, if not entirely destroyed."

SETS OUT VERSION

Despite Finn's gallant exertions, the Executive Council was of the same opinion and shortly before the date set by Judge Draper it became known there would be no commutation.

The public hanging, side by side of the young backwood parents would take place as originally scheduled!

In her cell Mary Alyward, now reconciled to death, asked for pen and paper and, for the record, set forth her version of the fatal affray.

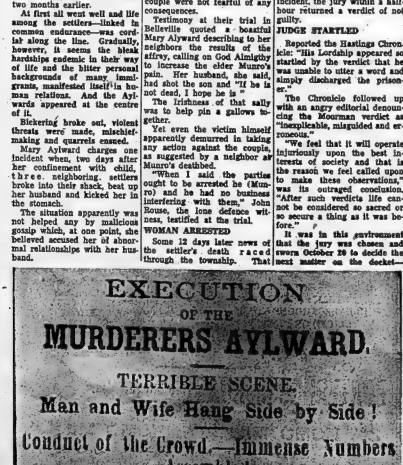
"I protest before God and man that the unfortunate blow I struck in defence of my husband on my own soil and near my own home, among my own helpless children. I say in sorrow, that I did not premeditate the unfortunate blow . . .

Then, in a second note, moving in its simple eloquence, she set down her last admonitions to her three young children.

"God has willed it that your Pa and Ma will suffer death on Monday next. I hope He will have mercy on our souls. My wish is that when you, my dear infant children, will come to the use of reason, that you will pray to the Almighty God for the repose of the souls of your Pa and Ma, who loved you dearly . . ."

With Irish fretfulness, she added: "My sincere wish and command is that my children will be brought up in the Catholic religion—the church of their fathers."

By December 8 Belleville was settling down to expectations of Christmas. The weather had the fitting seasonal edge to it. The night before the thermometer had dropped to five below zero and the morning was bitter cold.



BUSINESS BRISK

Nonetheless, business was brisk — for thousands of outsiders were bustling into the county town. They were to play that ancient and integral role in the final ritual of capital punishment — the gallows mob.

The contemporary report from the Chronicle describes it best. All that is lacking is the "local color of the hanging ground, authority for which seems to have been lost with time.

"From an early hour in the morning and even the day before, large sleigh loads of people were seen wending their way to town to witness this execution . . . and the streets were thronged with men and women hurrying to the place of execution.

"By ten o'clock there could not have been less than 5,000 on the ground, one fourth of whom were women . . . some of whom we are informed, had travelled in the night from 60 to 75 miles and were on the ground by daybreak and did not leave it, notwithstanding the intense cold. Till 12 o'clock when the final and awful scene closed.

Eighth Largest Brewery In U.S. Now Wholly-Owned Subsidiary of Molsons

◆ MONTREAL (CP) — The eighth largest brewery in the United States has become a wholly - owned subsidiary of Molson Breweries Ltd.

Senator Hartland deM. Molson, president, announced in a letter to shareholders Wednesday that the Montreal - based Molson Breweries and Theo. Hamm Brewing Co. of St. Paul, Minn., have merged.

Molson Breweries operates nine breweries in Canada from Quebec west to British Columbia with a total annual capacity of 3,695,000 barrels. Sales were $125,246,757 for the year ended last March 31 and net earnings were $21,587,129.

Hamm has breweries in St. Paul, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Houston. No change in the U.S. company's name is contemplated, Senator Molson said.

Senator Molson said the Hamm-Molson merger was an outstanding opportunity for Molson to obtain a major interest in the U.S. brewing industry."

CAN CONTRIBUTE

Hamm, with sales of more than $124,000,000 in 1964, could make a significant contribution "significantly" to sales and earnings of the combined enterprises.

The U.S. company's stock has not been traded publicly.

Hamm's shareholders closed at 40 Wednesday on the Montreal Stock Exchange, unchanged from the previous day's close. By the end of last week after rumors spread of a possible merger, shares had risen 4¼ to 20 over the previous week.

Molson class B shares rose 1¼ to 44¼ after closing Tuesday at 42¾. They gained 3¼ last week on the deal.

Senator Molson said the Canadian company agreed with majority shareholders of Hamm common shares for the merger to take place through an exchange of three classes of Molson stock for the outstanding common shares of Hamm.

Terms of the bond stipulate that Stonehill must stay in the jurisdiction of the federal court of the western district of Texas.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrested the former Texas army sergeant-and now millionaire living in Canada—as he stepped off an airliner that brought him from Mexico.

INVOLVES SHIPMENT

An agent said an indictment accuses Stonehill of shipping three crates of cigarette manufacturing machinery to Manila June 12, 1961, under a pretence the boxes contained grain threshing machines.

The federal attorney said Stonehill had applied for permanent residence in Vancouver but faced deportation there.

Stonehill was deported from the Philippines in 1962 and went to Vancouver with his family in 1963 after being ordered out of Mexico.

He had told Canadian immigration officials he would leave Canada Jan. 8.

Mrs. Stonehill and the children have been given permission to stay in Canada until the end of the school year.

Fly Beach Boy To Miami to Recover Gems

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Allan Dale Kuhn, 26, is in Miami in a reported attempt to lead police to the Star of India sapphire and 21 other jewels he and two others are accused of stealing.

The world's largest cut sapphire and the other gems valued at $410,000—were taken Oct. 29 from the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Kuhn flew here Tuesday from New York. Authorities gave out no information on the search for the jewels, but New York and Miami newspapers printed some details of the behind-the-scene manoeuvres today.

The first break in the case came late Tuesday when Kuhn was reported to have told New York authorities he might be able to get his hands on the Star of India and the other jewels if he could get to Miami.

Kuhn is accused of the theft along with fellow beach boys, Jack Murphy, 27, and Roger Frederick Clark, 29.

While Murphy and Clark remained in a New York jail under high bond, Kuhn was permitted to fly to Miami in the company of two detectives and a New York assistant district attorney. He was said to be "under surveillance," but not in custody.

Presumably, this was to permit Kuhn to operate freely in gaining recovery of the jewelry.

Will Go Ahead With Concorde Supersonic Jet

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government intends to go ahead with the British - French project to build the Concorde supersonic airliner, informed sources said today.

But Britain intends to insist that a close eye be kept on the cost of the project, estimated at more than £300,000,000 ($900,000,000).

The sources said at least two Concorde prototypes, and possibly as many as six, will be built. The work will be shared by the British Aircraft Corporation and France's Sud Aviation.

The reprieve for the plane was decided upon at a cabinet meeting Wednesday.

Earlier the government had felt misgivings about continuing the research program in the face of Britain's economic difficulties.

The project calls for placing the Concorde, a 1,450-mile-an-hour airliner, into service on world routes by 1971.

India Has Quietly Accepted Stationing of U.S. Sub With Missiles in Asian Seas

NEW DELHI (AP) — In an about-face, India has quietly accepted the stationing of a U.S. submarine armed with Polaris nuclear missiles in Asian waters.

There have been a few comments about "escalation" of the U.S.-confrontation with China, but the general Indian reaction has been one of relief that the United States is bringing up the big guns.

Just eight months ago, the late prime minister Nehru rose in Parliament to "express regret" that U.S. surface warships armed with nuclear weapons were "wandering about" in Indian Ocean.

The change in outlook is a direct result of China's explosion of an atomic bomb six months later.

Many Indians consider China's nuclear debut a stunning propaganda defeat for their government in the battle for prestige among African and Asian nations. There is fear that Peking will attempt nuclear blackmail of India.

Unlike Nehru, Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri has been looking for a nuclear umbrella with his 480,000,000 countrymen. He has declared that India, for moral and economic reasons, could not build its own.

He suggested that the Soviet Union and the U.S. supply the umbrella for all non - nuclear countries jointly.

Moscow remained silent to the offer. But the United States, in effect, accepted by announcing that the submarine Daniel Boone with 16 Polaris missiles aboard was moving into waters off the Asian mainland.

Some Indians see the move as an effort by President Johnson to lift the U.S.-China confrontation out of South Viet Nam.

There is speculation in New Delhi that Johnson would like to move away from man-to-man battles and rely instead on superior U.S. naval and air power to combat Chinese expansionism.

Indian officials see no chance of the United States winning against the superior manpower of China and its satellites in ground battles.

These officials say President Johnson also realizes this and that by moving the Daniel Boone into Asian waters, he is trying to reassure the non-Communist nations of Asia that they will be protected.

In India, at least, the Daniel Boone and its 16 missiles are achieving this effect.

Three Canadian Youngsters Get Bravery Medal

PITTSBURGH (CP) — Three Canadian youngsters, including a Toronto girl who died saving another girl's life, have been cited for bravery by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Ronald Norman Grant, 12, of Whitefish, Ont.; and Lyle Allen Roger Olsen, 15, of Estevan, Sask.

The citations carried awards of bronze medals and $500 to each recipient.

Carol Anne Strudwick, a 14-year-old schoolgirl, died saving Jean Appa, 13, from being killed by a train in Toronto last July 15, her citation says. Her awards are being sent to her mother, Mrs. Florence Strudwick.

The two girls were walking along a railway trestle over the Don River when a train approached at 25 miles an hour. As they ran toward the end of the trestle, Jean stumbled and fell. Carol Anne seized her and pushed her clear of the path of the train's path, but was struck and killed herself.

SAVES CHILD

Grant saved the life of two-year - old Susan Thrush in Whitefish, Ont., Oct. 17, 1963, his citation says. From his home 125 feet from a railway track he saw Susan sitting between the rails in the path of a freight train. He ran out, jumped a fence, got to the track, grabbed the tiny child and threw himself backward out of the train's path when it was but 40 feet away.

Grant's rescue occurred. His citation says, when a motorboat with seven persons aboard capsized in a large, water-filled coal pit in Roche Percee, Sask., July 14, 1963. There were no lifejackets and they swam out from shore three times to save the lives of three who could not swim.

Attempt to Control World Population Explosion Made

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has signalled in one succint sentence what may be the beginning of a vastly expanded attempt to control the world population explosion.

This problem, as ominous in some ways as the possibility of nuclear war, has never been the subject of presidential consultations with people in and out of the government. More of these can be expected.

In precise, carefully-groomed language, Johnson talked into his state of the union message to Congress Monday an isolated 25-word sentence on this subject:

"I will seek new ways to use our knowledge to help deal with the explosive problem of population and the growing scarcity in world resources."

Johnson made no specific recommendations. He did not use the words "birth control." But birth control inevitably is tied in with any significant effort to retard the enormous boom in population.

And Johnson injected his remark in a section dealing with world rather than domestic affairs. There have been suggestions that countries receiving U.S. foreign aid be given assistance in population control, since some of the economic impact of aid is blunted by soaring birth rates.

But the growing population at home also is a problem. And there have been some signs that what Johnson calls his anti-poverty program might become involved in assisting local communities with birth control efforts.

White House officials say that the brief reference in Johnson's speech marked the first time, so far as they can determine, that a chief executive has given recognition to the scope of the problem and the needs for dealing with it in such an important address.

These associates said the real importance of the statement was the fact that Johnson made it, and that the making of it is expected to result in a number of constructive forces that will start the efforts of solving these problems.

WINNIPEG (CP)—Rev. H. H. Clark of Winnipeg, Archbishop of Rupert's Land and Primate of the Anglican Church in Canada, said Wednesday it is wrong, in some cases, to oppose birth control and sterilization. He was address at a dinner arranged in his honor by laymen of the diocese of Rupert's Land. Archbishop Clark proferred to the population explosion in certain parts of the world.

Recently back from a tour of Far East countries, he said the people of India do not get enough food to eat.

"It is wrong in the face of that kind of unrestricted birth rate to trust in the restraint of man, which is often non-existent. To trust in that is not the will of God."

Archbishop Clark referred with approval to a missionary in India who temporarily sterilized women who came to her and requested the measure.

He said these women, who already had several children, knew that if they brought another child into the world they would not feed it and it would starve.

Licence to Wed May Cost More In Future

TORONTO (CP)—Provincial Secretary John Yaremko said Wednesday he would not be surprised if an increase in the cost of marriage licences requested by the Ontario Municipal Association is adopted later this year.

Mr. Yaremko said the province is studying a suggestion by the association that the fee be raised to $7 from $5, the price for the last 25 years. Under the proposed plan, $3 of the new fee would go to aid the municipalities or issuers who at present keep only $1 of the fee.

Mr. Yaremko said in an interview legislation providing an amendment to the Marriage Act might be brought in at the end of the legislature's new session that starts Jan. 20.

But, he added: "We have to be hesitant about taxing love."

A $2 increase would bring in an extra $64,000, he said. There were 48,000 marriages in the province in 1964 but in 18,000 of them, banns were read in church and no fee was payable.

Parliamentary Debate Could Mean Life or Death for Nine Men Awaiting Hanging

OTTAWA (CP) — Nine men held in various penitentiaries are waiting for a parliamentary debate later this year that could mean life or death for them.

All nine have been sentenced to be hanged for murder. Their execution dates run from Jan. 23 to May 21, with five scheduled in Quebec, two in New Brunswick and one each in Alberta and British Columbia.

The hangings almost certainly will be put off by appeal courts or the federal cabinet, however, until Parliament holds a "free vote" on the ragging, controversial issue of abolition of capital punishment.

The only predictions political observers are making about the new House of Commons and Senate are that they will be closely, either way.

The free vote—meaning party lines will be disregarded—was announced Dec. 3 by the cabinet and could come within weeks after the session resumes Feb. 16.

OPPOSITION BUILDS UP

Opposition to the "noose" has been building up steadily for the last 10 years. Both Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker are known to favor abolition personally and four successive majority undecided MPs and senators have taken part in the fourth-coming debate.

The 18-member New Democratic group favors abolition, as some out for abolition, while the four other parties in the Commons are believed to be split on the issue.

The nine men awaiting execution include Leopold Dion, sentenced Dec. 13, 1963, in Quebec City for the sex slaying of Pierre Marquis, 11, and Charles in the similar killings of three other boys. Execution date is Feb. 19, with an appeal before a Quebec court.

In British Columbia, Lawrence Haase, 27, was sentenced March 6, 1964, in Kamloops, for stabbing and bludgeoning Donna Ring, 14, and convicted of non-capital murder in the slaying of her twin sister Diana. Execution date is May 18. An appeal was dismissed by the Supreme Court of Canada, and he now is undergoing psychiatric examination. Evidence at the trial of the train's path, but was struck and killed herself.

SAVES CHILD

Grant saved the life of two-year - old Susan Thrush in Whitefish, Ont., Oct. 17, 1963, his citation says. From his home 125 feet from a railway track he saw Susan sitting between the rails in the path of a freight train. He ran out, jumped a fence, got to the track, grabbed the tiny child and threw himself backward out of the train's path when it was but 40 feet away.

Grant's rescue occurred. His citation says, when a motorboat with seven persons aboard capsized in a large, water-filled coal pit in Roche Percee, Sask., July 14, 1963. There were no lifejackets and they swam out from shore three times to save the lives of three who could not swim.

Fowler Commission Nears End of Broadcasting Study

OTTAWA (CP)—The, Fowler committee, with a big stack of briefs and thousands of miles of travel behind it, is nearing the end of the road in the latest comprehensive study of broadcasting in Canada.

The end of March is the target date for the committee, set up in 1964 to submit its report to the government.

The three-man group headed by M. W. Fowler, executive vice-president of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association and chairman of the broadcasting council commission on broadcasting, has read through more than 100 briefs, visited many cities and the United States and commissioned studies by experts in its search for answers to the problems facing Canadian broadcasting.

Marc Lalonde, Montreal lawyer, and Ernest Steele, undersecretary of the department secretary's department in Ottawa, are the other committee members.

How to regulate the publicly-owned and private sectors of the broadcasting field to one of the biggest problems handed to the committee. It was lauded this matter still is under study.

A starting point on this task was provided for the committee by reports outlining the views of Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, President J. Alphonse Ouimet of the CBC and President Don Jamieson of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

Dr. Stewart and Mr. Ouimet favored creation of two regulatory bodies — one like BBG itself and the other for private broadcasters. The CBC could be responsible directly to Parliament and the board governing private broadcasting would answer to Parliament for that sector.

Mr. Jamieson suggested one agency could be responsible for both types of broadcasting but there should be more separation of the two than at present.

The BBG is the only body now for all broadcasting but the CBC makes its own report to Parliament.

Another matter under study is whether the CBC should be granted long-term financing — perhaps 10 years at a time — as suggested by Mr. Ouimet.

Color television was another matter placed before the committee, along with potential broadcasts and the procedure for granting licences.

World's Most Controversial Plane Flown

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — The world's most controversial aircraft, the supersonic F-111, better known as the TFX, soared off without apparent incident Wednesday on its second test flight.

A spokesman for General Dynamics, which built the plane, called the take - off "highly successful."

At the controls of the revolutionary aircraft were pilot R. L. Johnson and co-pilot Val Prahl, the crew which flew the abbreviated maiden flight Dec. 21.

The second flight was to test particularly the variable sweep wings.

After the plane landed, General Dynamics reported the full sweeping and retracting of the wings had been completely successful.

The aircraft and its unique wings grew from air force and navy requirement for a jet capable of quick take - off in a short distance, climbing steeply and flying efficiently over long distances.

Navy demands called for the F-111 to fly supersonically at both low level and high altitudes.

Pleads Guilty To Theft From Township

COOKSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — John S. Robertson, 52, of Port Credit, a councilor and treasurer of the Toronto suburb of Long Branch, pleaded guilty Wednesday to the theft of $3,284 in tax money from Toronto Township where he was employed as tax collection supervisor. He was remanded two weeks for sentence.

Township officials said out side the court that an audit of the financial accounts of the theft cost the township $5,5(and involved checking 80,0(tax cards.

Detective William Teggart told the court that Robertson took the money during a two-year period. The money had been paid in Robertson at the township office by citizens paying their municipal tax bills, he said.

The detective said he arrested Robertson in the office of the Toronto company that bonded him. He said Robertson, whose salary was $7,200 a year, had told the township pension money over to the company to help make restitution.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

The mythical Mother Goose moulting generously in the southern districts left from seven to ten inches of "feathers" and by the time she reached the north country she resembled a plucked chicken.

Scarcely an inch mantled the forest floors and gnarling icy surfaces of the northern woods and lakes after the weathermen bagged some five to six snow artillery.

Icy-flagered weather couturiers fashioned topless dress for the northern lakes and today they are shackled with heavy suits of ice armor. Even staid Sioux, the murky mecca of mid-Hastings, is conducting normal winter activities under nine inches of New Year's Eve rocks.

The lakes of the northern part of the Tweed District, Lands and Forests Department are securely handcuffed for the winter season. Just how thick the shackles are, I do not know, but a departmental official tells me they are sufficient to prevent an official aircraft from taking a sudden dunking.

The lakes are dusted with that inch of snow with playful breezes dappling the surfaces. Adding a bleach-detergent look are fishing huts which freckle the winter napery.

So far, department officials say, the huts are but the advance guard of the usual splurge. The bulk of the one-storey fishing apartments is expected to be on location by the first of next week.

The ice-fishing buffs will be given plenty of time to lay the wall-to-wall groundwork, instal radios, television sets, (you fellow took a small refrigerator with him last year) lay in the supplies and generally get set for the piscatorial fun before they get company, official, that is.

Sociability is one of the characteristics of the boys of the Lands and Forests Department at Tweed—or anywhere for that matter. They're good "miners" and are well-known in all levels of sports society.

They're not sticklers for etiquette. They like people, so much so they drop in on hunting, fishing and camping parties without benefit of invitation.

They're nice chaps—not hard to get along with. Some people do not like them, be told, because they have a job to do—and do it well.

The greater majority of hunters and anglers cooperate with them because they are good sportsmen and adhere to the rules and regulations as laid down by the government. And one of the jobs of the L. and F. boys is to see that these rules and regulations are properly observed.

Admittedly hunting camps, fishing huts and wherever sportsmen gather, have their periods of social amenities. There is no law against that, but unfortunate inevitable aftermath, especially following the last night "in," causes forgetfulness on the part of the "gang" and they leave their camps and huts in conditions that would not win them a "Good Housekeeping" award.

During the next two weeks the L. and F. boys will be literally "dropping in" on the fishing hut habitues. They will arrive by aircraft and while they are passing along the compliments of the season, keen eyes will be on the alert.

They will look for the name and address of the hut owner which should be placed on the outside of the hut. They will look for garbage littering the ice in the vicinity of the hut. And they will insist that it shall be removed from the ice in its entirety by March 31st.

The visits of the L. and F. boys are not meant to encroach on any personal liberties. Any sane-minded ice hut fisherman won't do these things. But the few that do make it necessary to protect the many that do not.

The "good guys" do not have to be told. As was mentioned the legislature is directed to those people who love their fishing creek but neglect to wash the figurative dishes.

And a final note to brook trout lovers. The season this year opens in the Tweed District on February 27 — Saturday, that is.

Conduct Hunt For 'Hot' Dog

LONDON (CP)—A search for Hi Joe, a too - friendly greyhound racer stolen from his Essex kennel Saturday night, has spread over most of Britain but police report they still have no firm clue as to his whereabouts.

His picture and paw marks have been circulated to police throughout the country.

Police have checked dozens of tips by dog - lovers anxious to help. The search shifted to Scotland Tuesday when Hi Joe was reported seen heading north in an expensive car, but this also proved false.

Hi Joe, owned by the National Greyhound Racing Association at £3,000 ($18,000) and favored to win this year's Greyhound Derby, disappeared while his trainer, Norman Collin, 44, was at the race track watching two of her other charges.

She said she hopes Hi Joe was stolen only for ransom, but this hope faded Wednesday when no demand was made. The dog's owner, bookmaker Vic Chandler, has offered a £500, no - questions - asked reward for his return.

Hi Joe, black with a white blaze on his chest and unusually small for his breed, was voted best puppy of 1964 and is rated one of Britain's most valuable dogs.

Terrell Machen And Clay

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry Markson, director of Madison Square Garden Boxing Club, has denied a report that the winner of the bout between American heavyweight Floyd Patterson and Canadian George Chuvalo would get the winner of the fight between Ernie Terrell and Eddie Machen.

"We have no plans for the Patterson - Chuvalo winner to fight either Terrell or Machen," Markson said Wednesday. "We have only one interest and that is to have the winner fight Cassius Clay for the title."

The Patterson - Chuvalo fight is scheduled at Madison Square Garden Feb. 1. Terrell and Machen have signed to meet March 5 in Chicago in what the World Boxing Association is billing as a world championship bout. The WBA does not recognize Clay as the titleholder.

Blades Dull, Lose To Seattle 3-1

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Ray Kinasewich, who had scored only two goals in 32 previous games, put the puck behind Jack McCartan twice Wednesday night in Seattle Totems 3-1 Western Hockey League victory over Los Angeles Blades.

Bill Dineen scored what proved to be the winner at 10:23 of the third period, a powerplay goal, with Blades' Marc Boileau serving a major penalty.

The only Los Angeles goal came off the stick of Gordie Haworth at 11:35 of the third period.

As unfamiliar face is peering over Bobby Hull's shoulder in the National Hockey League's goal - scoring race.

It belongs to a shifty Detroit centre named Norm Ullman, who appears headed for his best NHL season ever in his 10th year of big league competition.

Ullman has never made the NHL All-Star team, and his 19 goals as runaway goal-getter look pretty small when compared with Bobby's 33.

He has 19 assists to go with his 19 goals and ranks third in over-all scoring points, 18 behind Hull but only two points away from runner-up Stan Mikita.

Ullman closed the gap on Mikita a little tighter Wednesday night, when he netted the big goal with 13 seconds left to play and earned the Wings a 5-4 victory over the Canadiens in Montreal. It also added two assists to his record.

In the two other games played, Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Black Hawks 3-1 in Chicago and New York Rangers hammered the visiting Boston Bruins a little farther into the league cellar with a 5-3 victory.

TIGHTEN STANDINGS

The results tightened th e standings of four teams trying to an eight-point gap from 10. Montreal still leads with 45 and Chicago still holds the runner-up spot three points behind, but Detroit improved its third-place standing by 6 points and Toronto moved up to 27 in fourth spot.

Rangers have 20 points and the cellar-dwelling Bruins 20.

Ullman's last - minute goal in Montreal ended a four-game winning streak for the Canadiens.

The Montrealers had started quickly and grabbed a 3-1 lead before the first period was nine minutes old. Ralph Backstrom got two of the goals and Henri Richard the other.

Alex Faulkner had scored for Detroit at 6:31.

Detroit narrowed the gap to 4-3 in the second period, Ullman goals from Bruce MacGregor and Ron Murphy while Claude Provost scored for Canadiens.

Murphy got his second goal of the night at 4:15 of the third period, and the tie stood until Ullman bagged the deciding goal.

HULL SCORES 33RD

Bobby Hull got his 33rd goal in the game against Toronto, but the crippled Black Hawks the Hawks their second consecutive defeat with goals by Bob Pulford, rookie Bri Selby and Frank Mahovlich.

Selby, called up from the Junior Toronto Marlboros club for a five-game trial, netted his second NHL goal in three games during the third period.

Hull's goal came while Kent Douglas was serving the third of four penalties together in the game. Hull carried the puck the length of the ice, split the Leafs defence and put the ball behind Johnny Bower.

In New York, rookie Lou Angotti sparked the Rangers rally in the third period that broke a 2-2 tie after 40 minutes of lackluster hockey.

Rod Gilbert gave New York a two-goal margin at the mid-way mark and Tom Williams wrapped it up with his second goal of the night at 19:36

Although outplayed by Boston, the first and second periods ended with the score tied 1-1 and 2-2.

Phil Goyette scored on a 25-footer for New York in the opening frame and Don Marshall Williams tied it for the Bruins. Then Boston went ahead on Johnny Bucyk's goal and held the lead until Marshall got his eleventh of the season at 19:36.

The Bruins are at home to Detroit in the only scheduled game tonight.

Czechs Favor League

MONTREAL (CP) — Czechoslovakia's hockey coach reacted favorably Wednesday to a proposal by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for an international league embracing five countries.

"Very definitely interested and interesting," said coach Bouzea through an interpreter. "But it would have to be on a strictly amateur basis."

Bouzea, whose Czechs beat a Canadian Junior All-Star team 3-2 in an exhibition game Tuesday night, said such a league would be beneficial to all countries.

"We can learn something, very definitely, from Canadian techniques and because of trends on the international scene during the past few years I am sure such a league would help Canada," he said.

Involved in the CAHA suggestion would be the world's top amateur hockey contenders from Russia, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, the United States and Canada.

Hornung Not Up For Trade

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay coach Vince Lombardi emphatically denied Wednesday that he plans to trade Paul Hornung, the Packers' high-scoring halfback.

"I don't know a player in the National Football League who has the potential of Hornung," Lombardi said. "You don't give up something for nothing."

Lombardi commented on a report by the New York Journal - American which said that Hornung is finished with the Packers and may be traded to the New York Giants.

Lombardi emphasized he was not "saying we're going to sit pat up here."

"If we have an opportunity to better ourselves, we will trade," the coach said. "But I have no plans to trade Hornung, period."

MONTREAL (CP) — Volatile Ted Lindsay was suspended from the National Hockey League Wednesday and reinstated a record time after he paid $75 in fines and apologized in writing for his public criticism of the league, its president and its referees.

The veteran left-winger, making a comeback this season with Detroit Red Wings, said Wednesday night he signed "under protest" a letter an NHL spokesman said was drafted by league president Clarence Campbell.

Suspended shortly before 6 p.m., Lindsay was reinstated in time to join a pre-game practice session at the forum at 7:30 p.m. The NHL said this was its shortest suspension ever.

Lindsay later participated in Detroit's 5-4 victory over Montreal.

He was called on the carpet for remarks he made following Detroit's 3-1 loss to the Maple Leafs in Toronto last Saturday night.

He drew a misconduct and a game misconduct penalty in that contest and threatened later to withhold the $75 in automatic fines that go with the penalties. He said he would not "sit for Campbell's kangaroo court" and described NHL referees as "nothing."

COVERS FIVE POINTS

The letter of apology, which accompanied Lindsay's personal cheque for $75, covered five points Campbell said were essential conditions for reinstatement.

Payment of the fines was one of the conditions. Lindsay also withdrew his "challenge to the league's disciplinary powers," acknowledged Campbell's disciplinary authority and integrity and apologized for any embarrassment caused.

This satisfied the NHL. A league spokesman said later that "the case against Lindsay now is closed."

The fiery left-winger spent 30 minutes in Campbell's office Wednesday and Detroit coach Sid Abel conferred with the league president for 1½ hours.

Campbell disclosed that Lindsay had written him two letters instead to provide a retraction and apology, but neither was suitable. His declined to release them for publication.

DRAFTED BY CAMPBELL

The letter the league said was drafted by Campbell himself was explicit. It said, in part:

"I am writing to unreservedly retract the challenge to the league's disciplinary powers attributed to me in several newspapers and other news media in connection with penalties imposed on me in the above game.

"I acknowledge the disciplinary powers given to you in the league's bylaws and your complete integrity in the exercise of those powers and I apologize for any embarrassment which my statements may have occasioned to you.

"I consider that I am bound by the disciplinary provisions contained in the league's bylaws and the playing rules in the same manner and to the same extent as any other player in the league."

Wednesday's suspension was not the first time Lindsay has been in hot water with the NHL.

LODGED FIRST APPEAL

He lodged the first appeal of a suspension in league history after he was ordered out of the Detroit lineup for four games in January of 1955 following a rinkside scuffle with a spectator.

That suspension was upheld by league governors two days after it was ordered.

Lindsay first decided to appeal Wednesday's suspension as well, but apparently changed his mind.

He wasn't talking about it after Wednesday night's game, except to say he had signed under protest. "I didn't want to hurt the club."

Then he clammed up, possibly influenced by some free advice from a long-time linemate, Gordie Howe.

"You'd better keep your mouth shut," Howe said. "You might get into more trouble."

Townspeople Covered Them With Wire

Namath's Boyhood Target Was Windows

By WILL GRIMSLEY

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The windows of the neighborhood laundry in Beaver Falls, Pa., are carefully guarded by strong steel wire.

The wiring is Beaver Falls' monument to Joe Namath, who spent a good part of his youth smashing the glass panes with well-aimed footballs and went on to become the town's most famous and one of its richest citizens.

Now the townspeople — the proprietors of the laundry most of all—look at the wired windows with pride, and say:

"Little Joe, he was a card, wasn't he!"

Joe's mother, Mrs. Rose Szolnoki, who divorced Namath's steel-worker father and remarried several years ago, recalls that the youngster broke just about every window in the place.

Today Joe not only is in a position to pay for all the broken windows but could buy the laundry and half the town. Star quarterback of the national champion Alabama football team, he signed a week ago the largest contract ever offered a football rookie—$400,000 salary and bonuses for three years with New York Jets of the American Football League. He plays his last college game Saturday in the Senior Bowl here.

The contract, also reported to include a $5,000-a-year pension for life, staggered the professional football world.

Joe, whose parents are Hungarian, was the youngest of five children—John, 33; Robert, 30; Frank, 27, and Rita, 26.

"Bobby and Franklin always got up football games in the front yard," his mother recalled. "Joe was just five and too little to play, but the boys needed a quarterback so Joe was it.

"Bobby and Franklin taught Joe to throw the ball over the telephone wires. They agreed he shouldn't be tackled. Joe got so he could throw the ball out of sight and he could hit a stump from 40 yards away."

Namath was outstanding as a high school athlete, playing football, basketball and baseball. When he finished high school, Baltimore Orioles tried to sign him to a baseball contract. But he liked football and wanted to go to college and scores of big schools sent scouts to court him.

As a sophomore, Namath completed 76 of 146 passes for 1,192 yards and 12 touchdowns. In 1963, he hit 63 of 128 for 765 yards although he was booted off the team before the last game of the season for breaking training.

Toronto rookie Brit Selby, whose third period goal in Chicago stood up as the winner when the crippled Maple Leafs defeated the Black Hawks 3-1.

Donnie Marshall, who scored twice for New York as the Rangers downed the hapless Boston Bruins 5-2 in New York.

on the sidelines most of the 1964 season and a recurrence in practice five days before the Orange Bowl game made it appear he would not see action against Texas.

"He asked to play and when the trainer said there was no danger if I put him in," said Alabama coach Paul (Bear) Bryant.

Namath, wearing sneakers to dull the pain, proved the outstanding player although Alabama lost a heartbreaker 21-17.

"This is not only the greatest athlete I have ever coached, he's the greatest I have ever seen," the Alabama coach said.

"He should be a great pro."

Says Namath Will Have To Improve

WEST MEMPHIS, Ark. (AP) Dave (Hawg) Hanner, veteran Green Bay Packer tackle, says he doesn't believe today's bonus stars will be willing to pay the price to become outstanding professional football players.

"A man who gets that much money usually doesn't want to pay the price," Hanner said. "If he doesn't like it, what with a no-cut contract, he can quit as soon as his contract runs out." Hanner, who has spent 13 years with Green Bay, was referring to the fat bonuses being handed out this year to college stars for signing pro contracts in the dollar war between the National and American Football leagues.

The contract most talked about is the $400,000 put out by New York Jets of the AFL to lure Alabama quarterback Joe Namath into the fold.

"I saw Namath play in the Orange Bowl against Texas," Hanner said. "He looked great, but he will have to make a big improvement to look that good in the pros."

Hanner earns about $20,000 a year as one of the NFL's top linemen.

Gordie Howe's Hockey

By GORDIE HOWE

Very few players in the National Hockey League have a nice soft pass, according to a statement the other day by Frank (Kingy) Clancy, French Imlach's assistant with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

He was kind enough to include me with Ted Lindsay and Red Kelly, the member of Parliament as being among the few today with a soft pass.

He said when he was coaching Toronto if a player slapped at a puck in passing it to a teammate, he'd yank him right off the ice.

We worked on that, soft pass for quite a few years. One of the reasons I was lucky to play one with Ted, when he was a regular member of the Production Line, was that I didn't necessarily have to throw him a soft pass.

He and Parker MacDonald are among two of the best passers I've ever teamed with when it came to their ability to pick up the puck with their skates, or behind them, if I threw a bad pass.

This is something that has to be worked at, too. It doesn't come as natural as many people think.

The big difference as far as the soft pass is concerned, has its counterpart in baseball. Some players throw a heavy ball, some throw a lighter ball.

The secret of the soft pass is to give it as little wrist action as possible.

The biggest mistake a lot of youngsters make is to slap a pass. A slap pass is very, very hard to control.

Another common mistake is to cut across the puck as they swing at it, imparting tremendous spin to it.

As soon as it hits your teammates stick, it'll take off, making it hard to control.

Try cutting down the wrist action as much as possible you'll have a sliding puck, instead of a rotating one or a bouncing puck.

OHA Clamps Down

Suspend Junior B Player

KITCHENER (CP) — One player has been suspended and a stern warning has been issued by the Ontario Hockey Association following a rough game Tuesday in which Kitchener-Waterloo beat Waterloo Siskins 2-1 in Central Junior B play.

OHA president C. G. (Pat) Patterson of Guelph ordered defenceman Ron Beaupre out of the Siskins' lineup for the next three games. The suspension came on the heels of an OHA warning to Beaupre Monday that any recurrences of a misconduct penalty would bring a suspension.

Tuesday's game was marred in the final five minutes by penalties totalling 54 minutes. Total for, the game was 100 minutes.

Beaupre received a minor at 17:43 of the last period for highsticking Walter Tkaczuk. Beaupre slapped his stick against the boards on his way to the penalty box and this brought a misconduct.

Last Saturday Beaupre got into hot water with the OHA after drawing a misconduct and game misconduct in a game against the Preston Hespeler Merlinoo. It followed a fight with Wayne Hicks and prompted the OHA to warn Beaupre.

Champions Bonspiel

'The Island' Only Unbeaten Rink

By IAN MacLAINE

TORONTO (CP)—Prince Edward Island was the only unbeaten rink today after four rounds in the championship Tournament of Champions here.

The Doug Cameron-skipped quartet trounced the Northern Ontario high school rink 15-5 in Wednesday's morning round, edged Saskatchewan 5-3 in the afternoon and squeaked out an extra-end 7-6 win over Ontario in the evening round.

Cameron's last two games were decided on the final stone and set the stage for this morning's match with Hec Gervais' Alberta rink. A victory could just about clinch first place for the P.E.I. foursome in the tournament which concludes scheduled play tonight.

The top four teams after seven rounds of action enter Friday afternoon's semi-finals and compete for $5,000 in merchandise which goes to the winner of Friday night's final.

TAKES FIRST LOSS

In other fourth - round play, Alberta fell from the unbeaten ranks in a 7-6 cliff-hanger to Hersh Kerner's Manitoba rink from Winnipeg; Ernie Richardson's Saskatchewan rink dunked the 1964 world and Canadian championship rink from Vancouver, skipped by Lyall Dagg, 11-5, and the 1964 Canadian high school champions from Kirkland Lake, skipped by Bob Ash, won their first game as Northern Ontario took a 9-6 decision over Bob Magie's United States champions from Duluth, Minn.

In other second - round matches Wednesday, Ottawa defeated Magie 7-6, Manitoba edged British Columbia 10-9, and Alberta defeated Saskatchewan 8-6.

In the third round, Manitoba crushed the U.S. 17-5, Alberta walloped Ontario 11-6, and British Columbia defeated Northern Ontario 8-4.

In addition to the Alberta-P.E.I. meeting other fifth round play pits Northern Ontario against Manitoba, Saskatchewan with Ontario, and B.C. against the U.S.

The sixth round has B.C. meeting Ontario, Alberta against Northern Ontario, Saskatchewan playing the U.S. and Manitoba facing P.E.I.

The round-robin matches conclude this evening with Northern Ontario meeting Saskatchewan, Manitoba facing Ontario, B.C. playing P.E.I. and the U.S. meeting Alberta.

Although it was the last to finish, the P.E.I.-Ontario game kept most of the 2,000 fans glued to their seats until the final rock Wednesday night.

DRAW SHOT GOOD

Cameron drew a standing ovation when he threw his final stone to the inside of the four-foot circle to offset Ontario's shot rock. The blue and red fared his first loss of the tournament.

The Richardson rink had only taken opposition from Dagg's quartet, whose only win going into today's game was over the high school entry from Northern Ontario.

Alberta and Manitoba were 3-1 entering the final day of play with Saskatchewan and Ontario sporting 2-2 records. Behind them were Northern Ontario and B.C. at 1-3 and the U.S. foursome, winless in four starts.

Marshall Stars In Reds' Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Four times in seven years Toronto Maple Leafs hauled in Willie Marshall, plunked him on the scales, then threw him back. Apparently he was under the limit.

The 32-year-old centre still weighs 185 pounds—just as he did when the Leafs gave him his last nine - game National Hockey League trial six years ago. But he continues to carry plenty of weight in the American league, particularly with goaltenders.

In 12 fall seasons in the AHL, Marshall has scored more than 600 goals in league and playoff competition, never dropping below 20 in his eight years even when hampered by injuries.

He pumped in two more Wednesday night as Providence Reds nipped Cleveland Barons 4-3 in one of two AHL games decided by identical scores. Hershey Bears downed Buffalo Nisons in the other fixture.

Ed Kachur also fired two goals for the Reds while Dave McComb, Doug Senior and Bob Courey replied for the Barons.

At Hershey, Pete Conacher was a two-goal man for the Bears, whose other marksmen were Mike Nykoluk and Bruce Cline. Leo Lunde, also with a pair, and Pat Hannigan scored for Buffalo.

Apple Kings, Picton Play To 6-6 Tie

TRENTON (Special) — Picton Merchants and Trenton Apple Kings battled to a 6-6 stalemate in an OHA Eastern Junior league game played before about 250 fans here last night.

The split in points left Trenton in third place and Picton in fourth.

A schedule change was announced for tonight. Trenton and Napanee exchanged "away" dates in Picton. Napanee will play in Picton tonight and Trenton will go there on January 21.

The Apple King's next start will be in Belleville tomorrow night.

Last night's tilt was a tight one all the way. Picton led 2-1 after one period and Trenton was ahead 4-3 after two frames.

Picton surged in front by two goals in the third but the Kings fought back and finally tied it 6-6 with less than five minutes remaining to play.

Dale Lewis was the lone two-goal man for the Trenton squad. Single markers were scored by Tom Glover, Gord Stevenson, Dave Johnson and Ross Quigley.

Billy Hopkins and George Bulgajewski tallied two goals apiece for the Merchants, Gerry Haennel and Bob Thompson potted the other markers.

Of the game's 15 penalties, Picton drew a total of nine.

Ste. Anne de Beaupre Bids for Top Skiers

By GERRY McNEIL

BEAUPRE, Que. (CP)—Hewers of wood and drawers of blueprints are at work this winter turning 2,800-foot Mont Ste Anne into what may become the finest skiing territory in Eastern Canada.

"By 1966," says Mayor Louis Philippe - Antoine Belanger of Beaupre, "we will have international ski competitions on our mountain."

Everybody in this centuries-old village calls it "our mountain" now, and it actually is theirs, or the best part of it. By legislative act, little Beaupre (population: 2,700) last June was granted rights that allowed it to expropriate a strip three miles long by 1¼ miles wide to develop a year-round resort.

Beaupre has leaned heavily, and ingeniously, on the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act, the Municipal Development Loan Fund and the winter works program to get the $3,000,000 development going.

Mr. Belanger, Creditiste member of Parliament for Charlevoix County, says that by taking advantage of these incentive and development funds, Beaupre actually has to put up only $600,000 of the first $1,000,000 necessary to develop Mont Ste. Anne.

COMMENDS INITIATIVE

Meanwhile, Beaupre's example in drawing on these programs to develop a natural resource is being hailed as an example of municipal initiative by senior governments.

"This is one of the best-prepared projects ever submitted to ARDA," said Agriculture Minister Alcide Courcy of Quebec, turning over a $219,190 ARDA cheque a couple of months ago.

Beaupre expects the Municipal Development Loan Fund to cover a $500,000 bank loan, meaning Ottawa will write off $125,000 of this amount and financing costs on the rest.

At present the 53 men clearing the snowy, coniferous slopes of the mountain are being paid under the winter works program, most of the money coming from Ottawa and Quebec.

By next summer, a 7,600-foot double chair lift — easily the longest in Eastern Canada—will be installed and later two T-bars about 4,000 feet long will go up.

Skiers will find the longest slopes and biggest drop in Eastern North America at Mont Ste. Anne. The drop will be 2,000 feet, higher than Stowe, Vt., Mont Tremblant or Mont Orford, Que., and trails will run three miles long.

There are 18,000 active skiers in the Quebec City area, the city is only 24 miles southwest of here by good highway, and the sport is growing in popularity.

The Commission du Parc du Mont Ste.-Anne notes that 1,500,000 tourists visit Ste. Anne-de-Beaupre, only three miles away, each summer and it hopes to attract 10 per cent of them to a scenic $1 ride on the chair lift.

The commission will build an artificial lake and a golf course on the lower meadows eventually, and there will also be riding and hiking trails around the mountain.

For 20 years, private developers have had their eye on it but were unable to get farmers to sell out. Last year, Beaupre itself was interested, the idea being that the municipality would expropriate the land for private development.

Then Mayor Belanger had what must have been the best idea economically to occur in Beaupre during its four centuries of existence.

Estimates are the project will mean $130,000 in annual revenue for the Beaupre treasury, as well as rapid land development in the rustic area. Land values already are rising.

SEES AS SUPERIOR

Norwegian expert Herman Johannsen has said Mont Ste. Anne has possibilities "of a first - class ski development, which, if laid out properly, would be far superior to Mount St. Castin at Lac Beauport, and even better than Mount Tremblant and Mount Orford."

"I know of no better place in the province for holding major ski competitions."

Sidney Dawes, former president of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association, also has said the mountain is "admirably suited" to become a major ski centre.

SKI RESORT — This is a view of Mont St. Anne, 2,600 feet high, from the patoral Ile d'Orleans in the St. Lawrence near Quebec City. The mountain is being developed as a year-round resort, with the accent on winter skiing. (CP Photo)

Youth Column

Will Study Students' Physical Condition

By JOHN MOSHER

FREDERICTON (CP)—A national random sampling of school children's physical condition is under way for the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

It has started in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Eight schools in New Brunswick and one in Prince Edward Island will be selected by mid-January for the testing program. Professor G. B. Thompson, a University of New Brunswick faculty member, is senior investigator for the project in the two Atlantic provinces.

About 11,000 boys and girls aged seven to 17, in 160 elementary and secondary schools across the country, will be tested by a new Canadian physical fitness "battery."

Co-operating in the program to establish national norms of physical fitness are 14 universities, all provincial education departments and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The work is to be completed next year.

Youngsters taking the tests in two classrooms in each of the nine New Brunswick - Prince Edward Island schools will total about 600.

Testers have been trained here at UNB. From three to six will visit the schools. Preliminary trials indicate the tests require two class periods of about two hours for 30 to 36 pupils.

The test battery, similar to United States usage, has six phases: A minute of speed situps; standing broad jump; the flexed arm hang (supporting one's weight by the hands); a shuttle run (jumping up from a prone position and running to pick up blocks and bring them back to the starting place—to measure agility and coordination); a 50-yard run and a 300-yard run.

"These tests will determine Canadian standards for each and give a total picture of Canadian youth physically," says Prof. Thompson.

Arrangements have been made for a showing of the Department and Lands and Forest, Remington - Winchester movie on safe gun handling at the Community Centre in the near future.

the 1965 Victor

It's gracefully wider and elegantly longer. That's how the 1965 Victor 101 gets its brilliant new styling. And lots more is new besides. New durability in extra rust-proofing and weathersealing. New extra power too. On the other hand, some things haven't changed. Like Victor's pocket-saving gas economy and delightfully easy handling. They're permanent Vauxhall features. But only first-hand experience could ever tell you all the new Victor 101 has to offer. So don't delay! See and test drive the 1965 Victor 101.

Habs Prepared To Make Deal
Pollock Has Proposition To Help Boston

MONTREAL (CP)—Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, said Wednesday he has made a proposition to Boston Bruins which he suggested would help them in their desperate last - place plight in the National Hockey League.

Pollock declined to give any details until he hears from the Boston management who are considering the proposal, made Tuesday by telephone.

The Habs are prepared to make a trade that would strengthen the injury - wracked Bruins, who also are low on surplus talent.

Apparently the Bruins are prepared to use left winger Ab McDonald as trade bait.

Canadiens sought McDonald several weeks ago, offering Bill Hicks in a straight exchange. But the Bruins rejected the deal and Montreal later traded Hicks to New York Rangers for Dick Duff.

LEAFS ALSO INTERESTED

Toronto Maple Leafs also are reported to be interested in McDonald. The Leafs are said to be prepared to offer sophomore winger Jim Pappin.

Boston received a crushing setback Tuesday when Dean Prentice, the team's leading point - getter, was lost for the rest of the season with a fractured vertebra, the result of a Dec. 27 injury at Boston.

Bruins also have other key players out with injuries including Bob Leiter, Ron Schock and Reg Fleming.

Bruins have won only eight games and tied four in their 34 starts this season for a total of 20 points, eight points behind fifth - place New York and 25 points behind the leading Canadiens.

FISHING NOT BAD — The maze of lakes and streams will make Kejimkumik, Canada's newest national park under development, a favorite spot for lovers of boating and canoeing. Fishing in the area, 140 miles west of Halifax, is said to be not bad. The park will also be a game reserve. Here a fisherman tries out a stream in the park. (CP Photo)

Indians Called It Fairy Lake

By DAL WARRINGTON

KEDGEMAKOOGE, N.S. (CP) — The Indians called it Kejimkujik, meaning "fairy lake." When autumn leaves turned red and brown the Micmacs set up their winter wigwams on its shores.

Now the Indians are gone but a new breed of campers will soon glick their tents and park their trailers at Kejimkujik. The island-dotted lake and surrounding wooded hills and waterways—146 square miles in all—have been designated as Canada's newest national park.

The name may baffle some visitors. The post office calls it Kedgemakooge, the spelling that appears on some maps. But the parks service prefers Kejimkujik, pronounced Kedge-imcoo'jik, closer to the original Micmac.

In size it will rank 12th, smaller than Terra Nova in Newfoundland and larger than Mount Revelstoke in British Columbia.

Kejimkujik National Park lies in the centre of western Nova Scotia about mid-way between the Atlantic and the Bay of Fundy. It is 140 miles from Halifax by road.

Besides Kejimkujik Lake there are more than 35 other lakes, with such names as Peskawa, Peskawa, Pebbleoggitch, Hilchemakaar, Frozen Ocean, Snake and Beaverskin, linked by a maze of rivers and streams. Most of them are part of the Mersey River system draining into the Atlantic at Liverpool about 40 miles to the south. Almost one-fifth of the park area is water.

Only a few miles of road penetrate the area. Most of it can be reached only by boat, flat plane or on foot. But you can travel by boat or canoe in almost any direction.

The shores and rolling hills are cloaked with forests of oak, beech, maple, hemlock, pine and birch.

Traces of old Indian settlement are being found. Micmac pictographs cut with a beaver's tooth on slate - rock ledges can be seen along lake shores. Over the years many arrowheads have been picked up. Remains of an Indian burying ground are visible.

Wildlife includes deer, occasional bear and moose, wildcats, foxes, raccoons, beavers, partridge and woodcock. Loons and ducks are common. Lakes and streams offer speckled and brook trout and warm-water swimming.

The Nova Scotia government assembled the land and turned it over to Ottawa in November for development. About 19,800 acres were already crown land but 73,800 acres had to be bought or expropriated from private owners, including 45,000 acres in timber reserves of the Bowaters Mersey Paper Co. Ltd.

All told more than 100 properties were expropriated, including a number of long-established hunting and fishing lodges. The oldest, Hedge Lodge, on a point in Kejimkujik lake, had been in existence since 1905. The parks service plans to demolish the lodges.

SORRY TO LEAVE

Many lodge hostesses and the wilderness they love hasn't been easy for some of the long-time residents. Arthur Merry, a lodge and campground operator, spent 14 years developing his place.

"I love it here," he said, standing on the lawn of his beautiful home overlooking the lake, "but if it's for the good of the country I'm prepared to make the sacrifice."

Norman Phinney, a director of Hedge Lodge, has spent part of each year at the lake since he was a boy. "I feel a great sense of personal loss, but undoubtedly the park will be a wonderful thing."

National park planners have surveyed the new park and are working on plans for development. Visitors will enter at Maitland Bridge, a farming and lumbering village on Nova Scotia Highway 8, about 30 miles south of Annapolis Royal.

Resources Minister Laing, who visited the park by helicopter in November, says preliminary plans call for access roads, campgrounds, canoe and hiking trails, marinas and possibly motels. But most of Kejimkujik will be preserved as wilderness.

A separate seashore section of about 1,200 acres is also proposed. Mr. Laing said an area including LaHave Island and some shore on the adjacent mainland is being considered.

The Nova Scotia forests minister, E. D. Haliburton, says the province will acquire the land when national park officials specify the area they prefer.

It has already coal the province nearly $1,000,000 to buy the privately owned land in the main park area. But Mr. Haliburton expects this sum to be returned many times over by increased tourist trade.

Because the park will be a game preserve the province proposes to save some money by abandoning the adjoining Tobeatic game sanctuary it has maintained for 35 years.

Movie Column

Theatre, Not Shock Films, Myrna Loy's Latest Love

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Here's one star who won't follow the trend of longtime leading ladies in playing shock films.

"You should see some of the scripts producers send me," says Myrna Loy. "They're absolutely unbelievable. I just send them back with no, thanks."

In 13 Women (RKO, 1932) I killed 13 women. So you can see I've done my bit."

She doesn't mind veering from the Perfect Wife she played so brilliantly in films from The Thin Man to Best Years of Our Lives. She did so in her last release, From the Terrace.

"I played Paul Newman's alcoholic mother," she recalled. "It was certainly off best from what I have played before. But it wasn't exactly me."

The fact that the Loy charm hasn't been seen on the screen for five years is Hollywood's loss, but not Myrna's. She has a new love—the theatre.

She's back in town with a hit comedy, Barefoot in the Park. The stand is part of a cross-country tour that has permitted her to see the United States for the first time.

ENJOYS TOUR

"I never really got a chance to see the United States before. During all those years at MGM I was working so hard I never got a chance to travel. We didn't make personal appearance tours the way they do today.

"Now I'm making up for it. The best of the cast is very youthful and vital and we take in all the cultural features of every city we visit. It has been a wonderful education for me—and also wonderful to experience audiences in the different cities. They have been just fine, everywhere we go. Even though we are doing a very New York play, they seem to get all the humor in it."

AT THE MOVIES — Jon Voight and Cathy Burns in "Only" Susan Hayward and Michael Anderson plays with real husband in "Where Love Has Gone", which opens today at the Belle Theatre. Bette Davis and Joey Heatherton are also in the Technicolor Romantic drama.

The theatre is a late development in her career, although she trained for it early.

"I went through the usual stage work in school—understudying Ophelia in Hamlet that sort of thing," she said. "I had elocution and singing lessons, all of which stood me in good stead when talkies came in. I didn't have the difficulty that many stars did in making the transition."

She remained in films, and later television, until five years ago when she toured summer theatres in Marriage-Go-Round.

THEATRE FEATURE TIMES

AT THE BELLE — Susan Hayward, Bette Davis, Michael Connors, Joey Heatherton in "Where Love Has Gone", Technicolor, Technoscope, 2.10 - 7.10 - 9.10.

AT THE PARK — "Adventure Of Scaramouche", 7.35. "Blood on the Arrow", 5.25. One complete show.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For January 8

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Loved ones may appear contradictory. You may wonder "who's on my side." Key is being mature. Time when circumstances are deceiving. What appears awful — soon transformed into the favorable.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Emotions attempt to dominate logic. Heart rules your head. Plainly a time of romance, visions, longing. Let yourself go! Break from rut, routine, standard behavior. Be adventurous!

Gemini (May 21 to June 20) Family conflicts may cause concern. But out of it comes deeper understanding, love. Make resolution to keep resolutions. Day to grow. Day to make progress. Time when you prosper.

Cancer (June 21 to July 22) Not good for unnecessary travel. You could end up on fruitless journey. One you respect reveals weak point. Best to heed your own counsel. If possible, delay major decision.

Leo (July 23 to August 22) Plainly this is day when material concerns dominate. Avoid arguments with relatives, associates over money. Pay and collect debts. Be practical. Concentrate on necessities.

Virgo (August 23 to Sept. 22) Personal pressures could be taken as healthy challenges. Don't be upset over minor setbacks. Utilize sense of balance, humor. Cycle rising — but slowly at first.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may receive news from persons not thought of in some time. Express appreciation. Be amiable. Display degree of sophistication. Be receptive. Don't force issues.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) What you felt was possible ... may prove to be impractical. Aspects appear puzzling. Take time to think. Realize you cannot completely have your way. But you can be happy!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you try to do too much ... you could accomplish nothing. Act accordingly! Day which features basic understanding between yourself and family members. Very self-revealing.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) This is no time to force issues. If you feel restricted ... accept it! Be receptive. Wait and observe. Refuse offers which involve abrupt changes. Demand proof.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Review potential. Ideas may be plentiful. But not all will be constructive. Be selective. Then others offer you the best. Keep long-range goals in mind!

Pisces (Feb. 19 to March 20) If you give love, ... you will also receive it. No day to demand or push. Be the observer, quiet within. Maintain dignity. Stand tall. Much tension evident. Relax.

If today is your birthday you have tremendous sense of what will work ... what is not workable. This makes you a valuable ally and a dangerous adversary.

GENERAL TENDENCIES:—News continues regarding major organization. Not all of it is favorable.

UN SUSPECTS SUKARNO WILL STRIKE

Busy Preparing For Agencies To Quit Indonesia

Think Break With UN Presages Full Assault

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Sukarno's announcement that Indonesia has walked out of the United Nations stirred speculation today that it foreshadows an all-out military attack on Malaysia.

These suspicions at UN headquarters were heightened by a letter from Malaysia to the Security Council charging that Indonesia is building up its forces along the Borneo frontier between Malaysia and Indonesia.

The Malaysian government said it would seek UN aid at once if Indonesia launches attacks more intensive than the sporadic guerrilla raids it has been making across the Borneo border and the small parties of infiltrators it has been landing on the Malaysian Peninsula.

An Indonesian source at the UN said a stepup in armed attacks on Malaysia was "possible" as a result of Indonesia's withdrawal from the organization.

"We are strong enough to crush Malaysia, a stooge of neo-colonialism, on the base aid from the Soviet Union," he said.

The Soviet Union has supplied Indonesia more than $1,000,000,000 in arms but deliveries declined in 1964. The Russians have advised the Indonesians not to quit the UN, but Indonesian sources in Moscow said the Soviet foreign ministry had informed their embassy the walkout would not affect the Kremlin's policy toward Indonesia.

Indonesia Lands 20 Invaders

SINGAPORE (Reuters)—Government security forces today investigated reports of an Indonesian landing in south Malaya, usually reliable sources said here.

The landing, reported to have been made this morning, was said to involve some 20 Indonesians. Reliable sources said it was made on the coast of Johore, the southernmost tip of the Malayan Peninsula, 10 miles by air from Singapore island and 80 miles by land.

Cheese Producers Are Told Farmers' Influence Waning

OTTAWA (CP)—Former Ontario attorney-general Fred M. Cass warned farmers Thursday that agriculture is losing its dominant voice in the federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Cass, who represents the rural constituency of Grenville-Dundas in the Ontario legislature, told the annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers that the urban shift and redistribution of legislative seats will create serious problems for farmers.

"No longer will we be able to expect our parliaments and legislatures to consider our needs first or even anticipate them."

The evolution was not necessarily "unfortunate or unfair or disastrous' provided rural industrials and groups considered their best possible leadership.

The two - day convention, which couples meetings of the Ontario Cheese Producers and the Ontario Cheese Marketing Board, also heard a defence and criticism of changes in government price supports introduced last April.

The chairman of the marketing board, H. C. Arnold of Campbellford, said he was disappointed with the change to a 3.6 cents-a-pound premium on top-quality cheese from the previous 30 cents-a-hundredweight subsidy on cheese milk.

The change was defended by F. D. Murphy, head of the federal continuency of Greenville-Dundas in the Ontario legislature, told the annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers that the urban shift and redistribution of legislative seats will create serious problems for farmers.

Ten Held In Bomb Incident

ABREVLEIX, Republic of Ireland (Reuters) — Ten men were in police custody today in connection with an explosion Thursday night near the mansion where Britain's Princess Margaret and her husband, Lord Snowdon, are staying on vacation.

No one was injured in the explosion, believed to be the work of terrorists belonging to the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The Royal couple are staying on an estate owned by Lord Snowdon's sister, Viscountess de Vesci, and are on the last three days of their holiday here.

The explosion, caused by a large gasoline bomb, came after the electrical supply to the estate was cut off by a chain thrown over high tension wires near the house.

(The Associated Press reported that the short circuit caused an explosion in a transformer three miles from the mansion. It said windows were broken in the mansion that is part of the 12,000-acre di Vesci estate.)

TREES FELLED

Since their arrival here last weekend there have been a series of incidents around the country, including felled trees along routes the Royal couple might have driven and anti-British slogans painted in public places.

Thirty minutes after the lights went out three policemen challenged a group of men on a side road near the town. The men buried a gasoline bomb that exploded at the feet of the policemen and made off in three cars.

A tree was cut down to block the pursuing police cars near the spot where the gasoline bomb was thrown and five miles further down that road two more trees were felled across the road.

Roadblocks were immediately thrown up and after intense police activity 10 men, believed to be members of the I.R.A., were taken into custody.

Detectives spent the night searching the Vesci estate. Squads of police guarded every entrance.

Members of the I.R.A. have stressed that they mean Margaret no personal harm.

Dropping Gold Cover Would Strengthen Dollar

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States after lengthy deliberation, and some foreign prodding, has decided to remove part of the gold "cover" it keeps on its money supply.

It would then have more gold available to meet obligations that occur when foreign countries cash in large amounts of U.S. dollars in return for gold. France decided to do just that this week.

The U.S. also would have more room to print additional supplies of currency which its expanding economy needs periodically.

European financial officers have been urging the U.S. to take its gold cover right off and probably will be disappointed at the partial step now contemplated.

As for the impact on Canada and other strong-currency countries such as Sweden or Germany, observers say benefits should follow since anything strengthening the U.S. dollar is good for the whole pattern of U.S. finance.

The U.S. dollar would be strengthened if the U.S. gold now available to meet foreign demand — about $2,000,000,000 is expanded as planned.

The U.S. proposal and the French decision this week to exchange $300,000,000 worth of U.S. dollars for U.S. gold at low closely, but are not directly linked with, the recent crisis in the British pound.

That shock still is sending ripples of uneasiness round about. The international gold market is more upset than at any time since the Cuban missile crisis, international finance people say.

The planned U.S. action should provide more flexibility, if congress agrees to it.

Under the policy of the gold cover, the U.S. has committed almost all its $15,600,000,000 worth of gold as backing for its supply of money, currency an bank accounts.

About $13,600,000,000 worth provides backing, or cover, to-talling the country's money supply. Now the U.S. proposes to free $5,000,000,000,000 more either to cover additional printed money as needed or to use to meet foreign demands for gold in exchange for U.S. dollars.

Many countries including Canada have rejected the gold cover concept completely.

Re-organize Education Department

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — A major re-organization of the department of education designed to free educationists from administrative tasks and allow them to devote their full time to education problems was announced Thursday by Education Minister William Davis.

The major changes will be combining of the elementary and secondary school branches and dividing of the province into an a - yet - undetermined number of districts, each to have its own superintendent.

Titles of the three top officials of the department are changed and one new high-level position is created.

The chief director of education — senior official in the department — becomes deputy minister of education. Previously there were two deputy ministers under the chief director. Henceforth there will be three assistant deputy ministers.

Mr. Davis said names of the men who will assume the various positions in the re-organized department will not be made known until next week.

TO BE DEPUTY?

However it is fair to assume that F. S. Rivers, the chief director, will become deputy minister, and that the present deputies, W. R. Stewart and H. E. Elborn, will take over two of the three assistant deputy jobs.

One assistant deputy will be concerned with instruction, the second with administration, and the third with provincial schools and further education, said Mr. Davis.

The re-allocation of jobs also will mean the removal from schools of inspectors whose functions do not require the attention of educationists. These jobs will be given to the school business administrators' branch.

Living Cost Index Sets New Record

OTTAWA (CP)—Living costs in Canada for December rose to a record high as a result of increased prices for a wide range of consumer goods, the bureau of statistics said today.

The consumer price index for the month advanced nine-tenths of a point to 136.8 from 135.9 for November. The December index — based on 1949 prices equaling 100—was 1.9 per cent higher than the December, 1963, index of 134.3.

Prices rose in six of the seven components making up the index, with the tobacco and alcohol index remaining unchanged.

The DBS index of average weekly wages and salaries was 106 in October, compared with 104.8 a month earlier and 197 a year previous.

The increase in the index, based in most cases mainly on prices in early December, was caused mainly by higher prices for food, transportation and health and personal care.

The food index for December rose nine-tenths of one per cent to 133.2 from 132 a month earlier. Prices were higher for fresh vegetables, particularly lettuce and tomatoes, and for fats and powdered skim milk. Lower prices were reported for eggs, grapefruit, canned orange juice, most cuts of beef and pork and turkey.

TRANSPORT HIGHER

A similar percentage increase boosted the transportation index to 142.7 from 141.4, mainly as a result of a rise in the auto insurance premium component.

Initial prices for 1965 models on most passenger cars were higher than average prices for 1964 models. Gasoline prices declined in December but not enough to offset increases in other areas.

Higher prices for magazine subscriptions and an increase in the price of newspapers moved the health and personal index to 153.5 from 152.3, a gain of eight-tenths of one per cent.

The housing index increased to 139.6 from 139.3 as a result of higher indexes for both the shelter and household operation components.

In Shelter, rents were unchanged despite increased prices for fuel oil, while home-ownership prices were higher.

The clothing index rose to 121 from 120.8 mainly as a result of higher prices for clothing services, cotton and wool dress material and footwear.

Murder Charge Is Laid

TORONTO (CP)—An unemployed Willowdale laborer was charged Thursday with the capital murder of Jack Blanc, 56, of Toronto, killed in a gun battle with a Beatle-wigged bandit who had held up a suburban bank July 24.

Terry Smith, 24, was also charged with armed robbery of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch in Downsview where Blanc was killed, and armed robbery and assault of a policeman in connection with a Nov. 28 bank robbery in Sutton, Ont. Two bank employees were shot and wounded in the Sutton holdup.

Kenneth Louis Amiotta, 24, formerly of Winnipeg, now living at the same address as Smith, was charged with possession of money stolen from the Bank of Montreal branch in Sutton and with having an unregistered firearm.

Two other men and a pregnant woman were arrested later in the day and charged as ac-

Bilingualism Growing Apace in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — While the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism works quietly behind the scenes, the government is pressing ahead with its bilingual program.

Bilingual practices are being expanded steadily in the civil services, the armed forces, Crown corporations and Parliament's supporting services.

The next steps will be the opening of a laboratory-equipped language school in up-town Ottawa for interested civil servants later this month and the installation of an electronic simultaneous translation system in the Commons public galleries before the session resumes Feb. 16.

Several bilingual projects considered far-reaching have been suspended, at least until the government receives an interim report from the B-B commission next month. These include a salary bonus for bilingual employees and a bicultural public institute.

The bilingual drive, which has been gathering momentum for about two years, is stirring up considerable controversy in official circles.

Many English-speaking civil servants and MPs, including Liberals, have expressed fears that bilingualism is being pushed too far too fast. This feeling was summed up in the Commons Nov. 5 by Arnold Peters, New Democratic MP for Timiskaming.

He said many civil servants who don't speak French "find they have reached a dead end street, particularly in Ottawa, as far as promotion is concerned as a result of the emphasis which is being placed on bilingualism today."

At the same time, a group of bilingual French-Canadians in the civil service complain they are being discriminated against in promotions and because they generally can't work in their mother tongue. They formed a new association last year to defend their interests.

A third group of civil servants also fears discrimination in promotions. They are persons of non-British, non-French origins who speak two or more languages but not French. They feel they should be officially regarded as bilingual officials, but fear they will not be.

Meanwhile, a senate committee headed by State Secretary Maurice Lamontagne and a task force of deputy ministers led by Under-secretary of State Ernest Steele meet regularly to plan limited bilingual projects.

The language school opening this month under the supervision of the Civil Service Commission will offer oral French classes to an average of 450

Student Unrest Is Growing As Viet Nam Crisis Eases

SAIGON (Reuters) — Student unrest continued to spread through the country today as South Vietnamese and American officials sought agreement in the two-week political crisis gripping South Viet Nam.

While an air of calm was thought near, government troops were reported to have moved into the town square of Nhatrang, a seaside resort 20 miles northeast of Saigon, and broke up an anti - government rally attended by some 1,000 students.

Reports reaching Saigon said one student was arrested but later released. They said all the schools were closed.

The students marched to the home of the premier, Phan Huy Quat, before proceeding to the square where speakers attacked the government and Premier Tran Van Huong.

Tuesday night, talks among South Vietnamese military and political leaders and American officials were reported in their final stages toward resolving the crisis that was caused by a military coup by young generals. The coup led to the dissolution of the high national council, the provisional parliament.

Reports reaching here said Hue, the central Vietnamese capital, was quiet today after an anti - government general strike Thursday led by Buddhists. Demonstrators burned Premier Huong in effigy in Hue.

While the demonstrations in Hue were going on, reports said 30 Communist guerrillas were killed Thursday in a big battle on the outskirts of the city.

Busy Preparing For Agencies To Quit Indonesia

Think Break With UN Presages Full Assault

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Sukarno's announcement that Indonesia has walked out of the United Nations stirred speculation today that it foreshadows an all-out military attack on Malaysia.

These suspicions at UN headquarters were heightened by a letter from Malaysia to the Security Council charging that Indonesia is building up its forces along the Borneo frontier between Malaysia and Indonesia.

The Malaysian government said it would seek UN aid at once if Indonesia launches attacks more intensive than the sporadic guerrilla raids it has been making across the Borneo border and the small parties of infiltrators it has been landing on the Malaysian Peninsula.

An Indonesian source at the UN said a stepup in armed attacks on Malaysia was "possible" as a result of Indonesia's withdrawal from the organization.

"We are strong enough to crush Malaysia, a stooge of neo-colonialism, due to arms aid from the Soviet Union," he said.

The Soviet Union has supplied Indonesia more than $1,000,000,000 in arms but deliveries declined in 1964. The Russians have advised the Indonesians not to quit the UN, but Indonesian sources in Moscow said the Soviet foreign ministry had informed their embassy the walkout would not affect the Kremlin's policy toward Indonesia.

Cheese Producers Are Told Farmers' Influence Waning

OTTAWA (CP)—Former Ontario attorney-general Fred M. Cass warned farmers Thursday that their influence is losing its dominant voice in the federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Cass, who represents the Ontario Conservatives in Parliament, told the annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers that the urban shift and redistribution of legislative seats will create a serious problem for farmers.

"No longer will we be able to expect our parliaments and legislatures to consider our needs first or even anticipate them."

The evolution was not necessarily "unfortunate or unfair or disastrous' provided rural individuals and groups' provided they made considerable leadership.

The two - day convention, which continues meetings of the Ontario Cheese Producers and the Ontario Cheese Marketing Board, also heard a defence and criticism of changes in government price supports introduced last April.

The chairman of the marketing board, H. C. Arnold of Campbellford, said he was disappointed with the change to a 35.6 cents-a-pound premium on top-quality cheese from the previous 30 cents-a-hundredweight subsidy on cheese milk.

The change was defended by F. D. Murphy, head of the federal governments cheese testing laboratory.

He said the policy has successfully met the aim of promoting production of more top-quality cheese and provided higher total subsidies at the same time.

J. L. Baker, the Ontario government's dairy commissioner, said the report of the provincial milk industry inquiry committee set up in 1963 will be ready soon. He hoped it would be in the government's hands by Feb. 2, when the Ontario-Quebec interprovincial dairy committee is to meet in Toronto.

G. P. Gomersall, vice-chairman of the British cheese importing firm of Lovell and Christmas Limited, forecast continuing high export prices for Canadian cheddar. In 1964, Canada had only half as much cheddar available for the British market as could have been absorbed.

OTTAWA — To kill off what they call the "hand-out syndrome," senior administrators of the Labor Department are splitting off the National Employment Service from the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Physically and geographically, that is. In every city and town across the country, wherever possible, the NES offices are being moved out of accommodation they generally have been sharing with the UIS, and set up in quarters of their own.

The move has been approved by parliament and required not only proclamation of the new regulations, with the move scheduled for completion in the next few weeks.

The NES and UIC offices will be separated, ideally by several blocks in each centre. The drill from now on for the unemployed man will be that he first must go to the National Employment Service office and see if they have a job for him—and if not, only then should he go to the Unemployment Insurance Commission for his benefits.

It is likely that at the NES he will be given a slip, a form of some kind, indicating to the UIC people that he has gone through the physical motions of calling around to see what might be doing in his line of work.

The change is being made because the Labor Department executives have felt that the National Employment Service has been a mere adjunct of the handed by the tail of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

It seemed that too many of the jobless made their calls on the pick-up trip to the office to put up their benefit cheques, and not to try for work. The separation of the offices will end that.

PLAN CHANGE HERE

Mr. Cecil Hiiser, manager of the Belleville employment office, said today that his office had been advised of the intended change.

At the request of Ottawa officials Mr. Hiiser said he had been asked to submit plans for a possible division of Belleville office to accommodate the two departments, and this had been done.

It was expected that the same office space would be used, with physical separation of the employment service from the unemployment insurance commission.

The expected date for the change-over is April 8th.

WAYWARD BUS

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A London-style double-decker bus was found 100 miles from home at Klerksdorp three days after vanishing from a downtown terminal. The bewildered city transport manager theorized it was taken by someone who did not have the money for a train or taxi. A newspaper commented: "This would never have happened if the municipality had stuck to trams" (streetcars).

Parliamentary Notebook

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP)—The several hundred miles between Rouyn, Que., and Ottawa had Creditiste Leader René Chaloult and House Leader Gilles Grégoire somewhat out of step Thursday over the party's attitude toward supporting the Pearson government.

The diminutive Mr. Grégoire, in the capital to attend to correspondence, said the 13-member party is prepared to support the government if a judicial inquiry is not set up to investigate the source of campaign contributions to the Liberal party.

He said the Creditistes would press for the inquiry after the Commons resumes the current session on Jan. 14, a conclusion opposition vote could bring down the minority government.

Mr. Chaloult, enjoying a sitting vacation at his home in Rouyn, agreed in principle to an inquiry but termed Mr. Grégoire's statement strictly "preliminary."

Party policy will not be determined until a caucus is held after the resumption of parliament, he said.

TAKES FIRST STAND

In an interview Mr. Grégoire indicated he was speaking for the party, and was categorical about his party demanding an inquiry.

The inquiry could also look into allegations made to all parties, he added.

But Mr. Grégoire said an investigation would be needed on the Liberal fund sources because campaign funds are at present at all recent scandal charges.

Mr. Grégoire's stand was similar to that of New Democratic Leader Douglas and Social Credit Leader Thompson in that all are demanding governmental action over the scandal charges.

Mr. Caouette, on the other hand, indicated in a statement issued from his office that he is content to let Prime Minister Pearson handle the problems in the best way he sees fit.

He said Mr. Pearson should act if any evidence of incompetence or wrongdoing is unearthed. Otherwise the prime minister would have to face the consequences of inaction at the next general election.

Mr. Caouette stayed clear of threatening to vote against the government if no action is taken.

READY 'ANY TIME'

Expanding on his prepared statement during a telephone interview, Mr. Caouette said his party is prepared to face voters at any time and will not support the government just to avoid an election.

There are political observers, however, who think it is to argue that the party would suffer heavy losses outside Quebec. For this reason they would rather say Mr. Caouette wants to avoid an election as long as possible.

Mr. Grégoire's statement indicates he has no serious qualms about an election.

The party is due to meet in Quebec City this weekend to discuss organization within Quebec province. It will also discuss the assessment of party prospects will influence the Creditistes' actions when Parliament resumes.

Self-Confessed Killer Owns, Edits Cyprus Paper

By ALAN WALKER

NICOSIA (CP) — A self-confessed killer might appear unlikely man to own and edit Cyprus's largest-selling newspaper. But then a lot of things don't make sense on this island.

That man is Nicos Sampson, 29. The three new issues of his newspaper Makhi — meaning Combat — ascertain the gory story of how he murdered 15 Britons during the EOKA struggle against Cyprus's colonial rule that ended in 1960.

Now Makhi sells about 20,000 copies a day. Sampson, Nikki, named for the Greek goddess of war, also sells well. Both have a touch of imprint on nearly every page.

Every day Greek - Cypriots pick up the paper or another and read long, garrulous editorials proving Turkish bestiality, American imperialism and all things not purely and fundamentally Greek.

Turkish-Cypriots get the same violently one - sided approach from their two daily newspapers.

The 11 daily papers on Cyprus probably are the only ones in anything to keep alive bitterness and suspicion among the 500,000 Greeks and 100,000 Turks who live on the island.

If the native press were too much on one side, circulating extreme and inflammatory editorials, there is the sole foreign-language paper — the Cyprus Mail—swings the other way, sometimes almost completely.

Its editor spoke of bomb attacks on other presses, and said it is helping to print a little bit than nothing at all.

HURL ACCUSATIONS

Foreign correspondents here are discussing the possibility that the sort of press Cyprus has. Although undoubtedly free, its content of editorial comment sometimes make North American eyes and ain tabloids look like Sunday school news letters.

"Everybody knows that it is the Turks who have committed atrocities," Sampson said in a recent issue. "Inhumanity is not a feature of the Greek character. On the contrary it has been universally established that brutality barbarism and voracious instincts characterize the Turks."

Other Greek-language newspapers rarely go as far as Sampson's hot most rant about the "threat to Cyprus" posed by American and British "imperialists." Eleftheria (meaning Liberty), the oldest and most respected island newspaper, recently said NATO countries have "criminal plans" for Cyprus. It continued:

"Money, with which the blood of peoples is cashed by the economic circles and by the imperialist circles, is playing a dirty role in the furtherance of these nefarious plans."

The Communist Greek - language newspaper Haravghi, meaning Dawn, speaks of "the infernal plans of satanic imperial aggressors" almost every day and recently told its estimated 10,000 readers that "Americans are wolves and never cease to be wolves."

PROPAGANDA CHIEF AIM

The Turkish dailies are usually more restrained than the Greek but still follow the same theory that the first duty of a newspaper is to propagandize.

Halkin Sesi (Voice of the People —was founded by the Cyprus vice-president and Turkish-Cypriot leader, Dr. Fazil Kuchuk. A recent editorial dwelt at length on "Greek Cypriot barbarity," "Greek slaughterers" and "inhuman treatment" of Turkish - Cypriot refugees on the island.

Halkin Sesi also specializes in personal attacks on Archbishop Makarios, Cyprus president and a Greek-Cypriot. The most distinguished characteristic of Makarios is his inclination to bloodshed, the paper said recently. "The civilized world must see and judge Makarios and the mentality that dominates him."

The Turkish paper Bozkurt follows a similar line. Its name means Grey Wolf, referring to a Turkish tradition that a wolf helped lead the dispersed Turks out of their ancient homeland to what now is Turkey.

"There seems to be something in the Greek temperament that causes our journalists to pour out torrents of adjectives," said a high official of Makarios's public information office.

"We're easy-going about a lot of things, but when we write we really turn the fire up."

GUESS AT TRUTH

Editorial dishonesty trickles into the circulation departments too. Where Canadian newspapers often publish their circulation figures down to the very last copy, Greek - Cypriot newspapers take great pains to conceal their circulation, hoping to attract advertisers who think a paper's readership is higher than it really is.

"When you go to place an ad, the man will tell you the circulation is 20,000 or 22,000—the first figure that comes into his head that he thinks you will believe," said the manager of a distribution agency.

"The real circulation is probably about three-quarters of what the paper's advertising manager says it is. It's an unwritten law of the island.

"It seems weird to visitors sometimes," he said with a shrug and a smile. "But, well, that's Cyprus."

Robert Temple Addresses Lions Club

President Emile Finkle chaired Thursday night's meeting of the Belleville Lions Club held at the Shrine Club.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Robert Temple, M.P. for South Hastings. Mr. Temple delivered an informative talk on current happenings in parliament. He dealt with the topic of defence, and of the Trenton Air Transport Command and 426 Squadron's important role in the government's defence plans, noting that these squadrons will certainly expand, to the betterment of local economics.

He touched briefly on the future of NATO, Red China and the United Nations, universal university education for Canada and confederation.

Mr. Temple was thanked by Lion Joe Burchill.

Following the regular business session the meeting closed.

Christianity Subject of Talk To Y's Men

World development will continue outside the Christian realm, Rev. Today's educated man sees all religions the same, Rev. K. McMillan, D.D., told Y's Men's night.

"We have come to the end of the age of religion," he said. "The religious world is in a mess."

Though mature man can live with a religion, he cannot live without one.

According to authorities, the greatest modern threat to Christianity is Communism, "the infernal plans of satanic imperial aggressors" almost every day and recently told its estimated 10,000 readers that "Americans are wolves and never cease to be wolves."

Rev. McMillan said that not all people are ready for it will be challenged, but that it will be ignored, for the church often fails in a modern world creating that are of no interest to God or man.

Speaking on Canada, Mr. McMillan said that outside their material prosperity have little idea of what is going on.

"The world into which this generation was born has disappeared forever, and unless we realize this we cannot realize the significance of our modern world.

"New circumstances and crisis results in a world and physical growth are now world-wide, and not confined to any one nation.

"One man a hundred years ago could reasonably grasp all human knowledge. Today specialists cannot keep up in their own fields."

POPULATION INCREASED

"Each morning a population equal to the five Bay of Quinte cities has been born. Authorities expect that some day the world's total population will be supply 100 percent of the world's needs.

"When this generation was born they expected to live and work in a machine age. Now we have had H bombs could totally end man's history any minute.

"The world is also faced with a crisis of unity," Mr. McMillan said.

"Nations can no longer have separate histories, for all history is world history. It is a world-wide stream. A crisis in a remote part of the world affects us all."

By 2,000 A.D. authorities predict all of the population will live in large cities of 20 million or more, for the populace is continually moving from rural areas to cities.

The time has come to open our eyes and see the world as a whole, Mr. McMillan said.

Large Brush Wolf Shot on Mudcat Lane

After seven of their kind being killed four or five years ago, brush wolves are again invading the Mudcat Lane area east of Foxboro.

Thursday, Art Beaudrie of Foxboro, shot a brush wolf in a swamp in the Mudcat Lane area and saw a pack of the rest of the marauders in the area. Mr. Beaudrie shot the 55-lb. animal, thought to be the largest brush wolves he had ever seen, with a 22 rifle from a distance of about 30 yards. It bound over-ed by Herb Urch, 8th of Thurlow, flushed out the brush wolf.

Last fall Mr. Beaudrie shot a large buck "while hunting deer, winning the Belleville and District Game Club award for the largest buck.

Real Estate Listing Service Sales a Record

Real Estate Sales through the Belleville Real Estate Boards Multiple Listing Service reached a record volume during 1963. The total dollar volume of sales during this period was $1,370,690. This represents almost a 100% increase over 1962 when sales were $690,000. The total dollar volume of sales during 1964, was achieved by selling 100 houses.

As a result of its progress the Belleville Board in 1964 received the Ontario achievement award from the Ontario Association fo Real Estate Boards, this being a highlight of the year for the Board.

Based on both local estimates, the Provincial and National forecasts for 1965, it would appear that it has at much, or more in the offing than even 1964.

Phenol Taste In City Water Being Tested

Two specialists from the Ontario Water Resources Commission arewhconducting tests at the local filtration plant with the view of overcoming the phenol taste in the city water supply.

The phenol taste, noticeable in the water during the Christmas period, has been the object of many complaints from water users.

Tests have shown there is only 15 parts phenol per million gallons of water supplied but it is usually of short duration the phenol taste is a real problem when it does exist. The taste can be detected even with ten or more parts.

To combat the taste city water supplies are being treated with chlorine dioxide.

Algae conditions which several times last year resulted in flavour and odour complaints regarding water taste and smell.

"Algae is still a problem but the taste is not as noticeable due to the cold water temperature," stated E. H. Burnham, Utilities manager.

Ere Homer --Elephants

ATHENS (Reuters) — Huge elephants roamed Greece almost 1,000,000 years before the country became the centre of European culture, according to latest scientific studies.

Prof. Maximos Mitsopoulos of the University of Athens says herds of elephants wandered calmly in lush green country favored by a climate unknown to the 20th century tourist in this comparatively dry country.

Mitsopoulos, who specializes in paleontology and geology, said numerous other beasts, such as the hippopotamus, the rhinoceros and the bison, also roamed Greece in this period.

Large numbers of fossils have been discovered in Greece from time to time. The latest of these discoveries was made last year during construction of a nitrogen plant in eastern Macedonia where the fossils of a 900,000-year-old elephant were found. The remnants, consisting of a tusk and two molars, were brought to light near the village of Perdika.

According to Mitsopoulos, the ancestors of these elephants migrated from India through Asia Minor, Greece and central and northern Europe. Fossils of such animals, though much older, have been found in India where they lived some 10,000,000 years ago.

The most spectacular find, however, was made by Prof. Theodor Skoufos at the beginning of this century. Among the remnants of numerous elephants found by Skoufos in the plain of Megalopolis, in the central Peloponnese, was the whole skeleton of a gigantic animal, which he called the "Dortynian elephant." This specimen had tusks 10½ feet long, its head weighed 881 pounds and when standing it must have been more than 16½ feet high.

Baby Food Scarcity Hits India

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) —An acute shortage of baby foods has hit India.

In Calcutta, Bombay, New Delhi and other cities long queues before baby food grocery have become a familiar sight. The situation in Calcutta seems to be particularly bad.

A Calcutta newspaper reported that mothers have had to stand in the queues for as long as six to 10 hours to buy a tin of milk. Many women fainted while waiting their turn in what the paper described as "a three-furlong-long stretch of misery."

Frustrated women MPs demanded in the Indian Parliament that the government enquire into the situation. There are allegations that sections of the baby food industry were in collusion with the greedy merchants to corner stocks and create up prices.

The Calcutta police launched a drive to unearth hoarded stocks. In one raid on a suburban house they seized 119,000 tins.

More than 50 Calcutta merchants have been arrested for black-marketing and profiteering in baby foods.

For the first time, the authorities are using the Defence of India Rules promulgated soon after the Chinese invasion of October 1962—to prosecute hoarders.

According to unofficial estimates in the Indian press, nearly a third of the country's production of baby foods are being sold through "abnormal" channels.

The Socialist, Communist and right-wing Hindu religious parties are using the shortage to attack the government.

At a huge rally in Parel, Bombay's industrial suburb, Communist speaker said: "A government which is not in a position to ensure the supply of milk to its mothers and children at reasonable prices should be voted out of power at the earliest opportunity."

The Indian government is talking of starting publicly-owned baby food factories to cope with the situation.

Will Delay Membership Campaign

TRENTON — Chamber of Commerce secretary-treasurer, Ridgely Sprague, reports that the Chamber's 1965 membership campaign will be delayed this year until after the March executive meeting when budgets for the year will be presented to the officers. At that meeting also, progress on the membership drive for the coming year will be discussed. It is hoped that some concrete plans to get the campaign under way can be made soon.

Meanwhile, Mr. Sprague last night conducted a tour for local businessman around suitable industrial sites in Trenton and provided him with data concerning services, etc. The visitor was one of the key men attached to a firm which devotes itself to finding suitable locations for American companies wishing to locate in Canada.

PUC Getting Many Calls Over Sewer Charge Billing

TRENTON — Clifford A. Baker, a PUC commissioner for the past several years, was yesterday named chairman of the body at the inaugural meeting. Mr. Baker's appointment was proposed by out-going chairman Charles Hilton. Mr. Hilton, re-elected in the December municipal elections, was sworn into office by clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry. The other member of the commission is Mayor James McDonald, by virtue of his office as mayor.

Right away, Mr. Baker's troubles began as utilities manager, James Page, reported a large number of calls coming in to the office from industrial heads and owners of commercial outlets, as a result of the first billing on which the sewer charge appears. Bills were mailed out the first of this month and customers are paying the sewer charge, based on December water bills.

Called to task, Mayor McDonald admitted the town officials (which has actually imposed the sewer charge) had called for the billing to start Jan. 1. By the time the mayor realized that this meant the charge would actually start on December billing, the bills were made up and it was too late. As he later said he thought the press had a people to believe the billing for the sewer charge would'n't start until Jan. 1.

"It's really a town office problem," said Mr. Baker.

Mr. Hilton agreed and suggested callers to the utilities office should be referred to the town office at EX 3-2244.

East side residents will also be billed for the sewer charge in the January bill when the utility office. West side residents will be billed in February, as the office bills alternate sides of the river on alternate months.

Mayor McDonald told the commission the council had first imposed the sewer charge in order to maintain and pay for existing sewers and the annual debt on the sewage treatment plant. Eventually, the charge will also be used to install new sewers to unserviced parts of the town. "It must be done speedily, said the mayor, in order to make available to the town further land for industry.

Mr. Hilton said he thought the town should make the price of land low enough to attract investors who would build factories with the object of renting them out.

Mayor MacDonald agreed that the town should be willing to make concessions to investors, but not at the expense of the town.

"We can't afford to give land away and let the speculators make a big profit on their money," said the mayor.

In other business, the commission agreed to pay the Belleville firm of H. Carr-Brainard and Sons a progress payment of $597, towards the construction costs of the new utilities storage garage behind the Victoria Street pumping station. Total cost of the new building is $25,000 and the commission also agreed to insure the building for $24,000 for $60 for three years, with the Frank Cowan Company Ltd., through the local agent—Douglas Whitley.

Mr. Hilton objected to paying the Rayner Construction Company for certain "extra" material used in the installation of water mains on Dufferin Ave. and Dundas St. W. He thought the contractor should have completed the work "inside" the contract, but when he was assured that Rayner had billed for the material by the item and had not submitted bids for the items in question before, he agreed to the payment.

Elzevir Reeve Wins Recount By One Vote

Despite the fact that election day returns showed the sitting reeve defeated by one vote, Reeve Clayton Montgomery of Elzevir township is still the 1965 head of the municipal council.

Since the election a recount by County Judge J. C. Anderson has reversed the earlier standing with Mr. McMurray, who polled 192 votes and William Credicott 192.

The recount turned up more than ballots. A tobacco pipe was found in the bottom of one of the ballot boxes.

Widow Wins $10,000 Claim Against Co.

TORONTO (CP)—A St. Catharines' widow Thursday won a claim against an insurance company that had refused her $10,000 on her late husband's group life insurance policy, arguing he was not working full time when he bought the policy.

Mr. Justice Edson Haines of the Ontario Supreme Court ruled that Mrs. Margaret Krilluck's husband, Mark, 70, had been validly insured three months before he died in November, 1959.

Mr. Justice Haines found that Mr. Krilluck had carried out full-time duties as president of a Halton Crushed Stone Limited, Milton, Ont., until two weeks before his death, despite the fact he was in hospital most of the three months and was paid only $1 a year.

The judge ordered the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, insurers of the company's group policy, to pay Mrs. Krilluck $10,000 and about $2,700 interest.

Mr. Justice Haines said that until Nov. 1, 1959, Mr. Krilluck did all the duties required of him as president, noting that the man held business meetings in his hospital room and helped plan company operations from his hospital bed.

Part of London's High Rent District Turned into Street Of Heroes, Gunman Caught

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—A quiet part of London's high rent residential district was turned into a street of heroes in one of the greatest pavement dramas this ancient city has seen in recent years.

Two constables were wounded, a police dog was killed, a motorist willingly wrecked his new automobile and studded it with a crouching gunman with bottles, chairs and bricks.

Police dived into a basement Wednesday night to capture 22-year-old John Campbell Marson who escaped from prison last November and who tried to shoot his way out of a trap created by police, a co-operative public and lucky circumstance.

"The gun battle which raged through sedate South Kensington," says The Evening Standard, "threw up a number of heroes and more acts of common sense and uncommon intelligence all in one evening than London has seen for a long time."

During the Yuletide season, the crime rate in this city of some 3,000,000 increased steadily. Thugs were using guns while the police were equipped with usual only with truncheons and, in some cases, with dogs.

ASKS PUBLIC HELP

Scotland Yard finally urged the public to "have a go" at lawbreakers, if the opportunity arose. In the Marson case, police found that the hostile public "wall of silence" had crumbled.

Marson, who was on the run, was known to have a girl friend, Mrs. Chloe Castle, who had left her husband of four weeks to dash to Marson's side after he made his prison escape.

With his girl, Marson was reported to have stolen a powerful automobile, taken a housekeeper as hostage. A big chase through London's west side began.

As the car driven by Marson went up a Kensington street, two cars which had crashed in an accident blocked his path. He reversed gears, but a yacht designer, driving a new car deliberately smashed into Marson.

For this act of courage, Alfred Myine will get a complete repair job on his vehicle from the car manufacturer.

CONSTABLE SHOT

As Marson fled from the wreckage, a constable who tried to stop him was shot in the arm. Police and the public flowed in the street. Chairs, bricks, bottles and anything else the Westrians could find were thrown at Marson as he crouched in a basement, firing out into the street.

The police sent a dog after him. The German shepherd was killed by a bullet.

Another constable, ignoring Marson's gun, dived into the basement and smashed Marson over the head with his stick. The officer was hit in the elbow with a bullet.

Then Marson found himself surrounded by police.

His girl friend gave police a long statement and police allowed a hospital to examine Marson's head injuries to find out how soon he can stand trial for trying to kill a police constable.

Wilson Plans Conference of Prime Ministers

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson said Thursday night he is planning his first conference of prime ministers of the British Commonwealth.

"I am already in touch with my colleagues to find out their reactions to this proposal," he told an anniversary dinner of the Commonwealth Correspondents' Association.

A Commonwealth meeting probably would not take place before July at the earliest, government sources said. The last Commonwealth conference was held in 1962.

In New Delhi, foreign office sources said that Lal Bahadur Shastri, the Indian prime minister, would be "most happy" to confer with his fellow heads of Commonwealth governments "if the dates suit him."

They said Wilson's suggestion of an early meeting of Commonwealth prime ministers was receiving "favorable consideration."

FAVORS MEETING

Foreign ministry spokesmen said Shastri favored frequent meetings of Commonwealth leaders, especially since China's explosion of a nuclear device and Indonesia's withdrawal from the United Nations.

In Wellington, New Zealand's prime minister Keith Holyoake, said today he is willing to attend.

He was non-committal on possible dates, but said he would try to fit in with whatever was generally agreed.

Issues in which New Zealand would be vitally interested are Malaysia and any proposals emerging from the current London meeting discussing formation of a Commonwealth secretariat.

The Australian government also is expected to back move by Wilson for a prime ministers conference this year.

No Australian government comment was available as Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies is taking a rest on a Pacific luxury liner cruise and all his senior ministers were absent from Canberra.

SCIENCE IN A CAVE

NICE, France (AP)—Clad in ski pants and jacket and hugging a butane gas stove, 26-year-old midwife Josiane Laures went 100 yards into a cave hoping to stay three months—in the interest of science, she said. She plans to knit, weave baskets and do needlework but didn't say what she might prove scientifically. Furniture manufacturer Max Senni, 35, occupied a nearby cave vowing to stay for four months.

Mayor Right on Bridge Question

The request of Mayor J. R. Ellis that a five-year-old traffic report be re-evaluated before action is taken to erect a bridge across the Moira River at Church Street is eminently reasonable. All councillors, regardless of whether they favor or oppose the procedure recommended in the report, should support the mayor's plan. Conditions have changed in the past five years and this may be reflected in the traffic flow. If it has, what was advisable five years ago may not be advisable today.

If, however, re-evaluation does not reveal any facts not already generally known, we think there is still a strong case for rejecting the report's recommendation and for proceeding with the construction of a bridge across the mouth of the river at Dundas Street, before deciding exactly where we should locate a new bridge across the river leading to North Front Street.

As we said in a lengthy editorial on Aug. 31, the Dundas Street bridge just might change peak-hour traffic to a degree which would make it possible to leave Church Street untouched and to build a bridge later at an alternate site, from Pinnacle Street to connect with the present intersection of North Front and Moira Streets."

Another observation made at that time would also appear to be worth repeating. "Making Church Street a through street would be very costly. There are hills south of Bridge and north of Victoria, which would have to be levelled out. This street leads past three schools, one of them for elementary school children. Do we want this?"

We are pleased to note that in his inaugural address Mayor Ellis said "some of us on Council" feel that the Dundas Street bridge should "receive some priority" over the new Upper Bridge. We trust that he is amongst this number and that (unless the re-evaluation of the traffic report reveals facts which make advisable an opposite course of action,) he will lead the campaign to have the Dundas Street bridge built first.

Retirement

Dr. Donald K. Grant, director of medical services for Ontario Hydro, says most HEPC employees are happy to accept retirement at 65.

One reason, of course, is that Ontario Hydro has an excellent pension plan, which relieves retiring employees of worry about financial matters.

Given such a plan, a willingness to retire would not have been considered surprising a few years ago. More recently, though, there has been a growing belief that many people are much happier at work than in retirement.

Dr. Grant appears to differ with this view. "I cannot agree with those who say that people should work in industry until they are no longer able to do so," he says. He will find few who will quarrel with this statement if he means that a man should not be forced to work to the limits of his physical capacity to do so. But if he means that a man who wants to continue work should be refused the right to do so because of any arbitrary age limit, then the judgment on his views may differ.

Surely this is one field in which we ought to recognize the great variations in the abilities and needs of individuals.

Only a few decades ago, within the working life of many of us, the most pressing problem with respect to retirement was generally regarded as discovering some manner in which this could be affected without leaving the worker destitute. Today, we seem to be confronted with a totally different need, that of devising some way of enabling a man to keep on working if this is psychologically necessary to his well-being. Strange that a few years can eliminate old problems and manufacture new ones, just as difficult.

A great deal of nonsense about computers is talked about by otherwise intelligent scientists and much confusion has arisen because of the need to use terms like "thinking" and "deciding" in describing what these man-designed and man-made machines do. But it is important to bear in mind that, in fact, they do not think or decide. They simply operate on the basis of a value which is put into the machine by the programmer They can say what and when and how much, but unless initially the programmer gives them detailed instructions, they cannot operate at all. — Sir Leon Lagrit in his lectures on 'The Age of Automation'.

Silly Sex Questions

Toronto Telegram

U.S. Senator from South Carolina Sam Ervin is in high dudgeon over the invasion of the privacy of employees at the State Department.

To eliminate those with emotional problems from sensitive security posts, State has been asking some intimate questions. We set a few down with suggested answers.

Are many of your dreams about sex matters?

Yes, whose aren't?

Are you being too inhibited in sex matters?

At some time in his life, everybody is.

Do you like to read books and plays in which sex plays a major part?

Yes, and that, incidentally, is why most books are best-sellers and such plays hits.

Do you feel like getting revenge when someone has insulted you?

Yes, the Society of Saints hasn't been organized yet.

Do you, when at a loose end, think of things too bad to talk about?

That's a silly question: things too bad for you may be OK for me.

Are you confused in your religious beliefs?

Yes, and so were Job and the authors of the Psalms who produced two of the greatest books of the Bible.

Did Christ perform miracles?

Ask some of Canada's most respected church authorities They can't decide what is fact or fiction in the Bible. What can you expect from untheological types?

Some of these questions have to be answered "without thinking" yet. Good heavens, for most of us if would not only take deep thought but the services of an analyst, and even then we might not be sure of our answers.

Study Cycles Of Behavior

Hamilton Spectator

A scientist at Montreal's McGill University is studing cycles in the human psychology—daily rhythmic changes that nature has installed in all of us.

One of the cycles he is studying has to do with the daily fluctuations in the human efficiency. This means he is trying to find out why some people are at their best in the early mornings and others later in the day. It seems all of us are either one or the other.

So far the professor hasn't released any hints about a cure that would enable morning people to put up with the evening people and vice versa. Such a cure is important because half of us are out of kilter with the other half.

The fellow who drags himself to work 10 minutes late in the morning is usually bright and able long after quitting time. But the early bird begins to fade in the afternoon.

Benjamin Franklin uttered those immortal words about the early bird getting the worm and ever since the evening people have been considered lazy. This is unfair.

Perhaps a Canada Council grant would help the professor in developing a pill to put us all on the same cycle.

To Your Good Health
There Is Little Doubt Man's Trouble Is Mental

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: How can an adult member of our family be made to understand that he is in need of physical or mental help?

He says that others are using dope and the fumes are smothering him. He refuses to eat or be in the same room with us. He locks himself in one section of the house and stuffs the doors with rags "to keep out the fumes," and has all the windows open no matter what the temperature.

Is he using this dope theory to hide some physical ailment, or do you think he really believes what he says? — Worried.

There is hardly room for doubt. The man's trouble is mental. Even if he were using the dope theory, to hide some physical ailment, which I decidedly doubt, his actions would still be far from normal.

There are plenty of cases of mental illness in which the patient realizes that he needs help. There are more cases, however, in which the patient insists that he is all right and everybody else is wrong.

In such instances there is no point in waiting for the patient to consult a doctor. He won't. Arguments are futile. The only course likely to succeed is to consult your family doctor, and let him help you. Such mild measures as will permit the man to be examined psychiatrically, whether he agrees or not.

There are some instances, I might add, in which a person, when told that he has to be examined, finally will go quietly rather than have hospital attendants or the police escort him.

Getting the patient to co-operate is better for him and for everybody else than doing it by force.

Could you also tell me about a rectum that has fallen forward into the vagina? Is surgery the only cure? I am 32 and have three children. — Mrs. J. L.

This condition is called rectocele and is the commonest of the supportive tissues being weakened in some way. Childbirth is the most frequent cause. Let's be frank. Surgery is the only cure. At the same time, this is a happy thought. Surgical correction is very dependable. You can confidently expect that after the operation, your troubles will be over.

Dear Dr. Molner: Does climate have any bearing on emphysema? Would a dry, or high area be better, or near the ocean with salt sea air? — Mrs. H. K.

Climate doesn't have much effect in most cases. Extremely high altitudes might increase the difficulty a little, but perhaps not much. Otherwise dry air or salt air or warm air or cold air is of scant significance.

Millionaire Is Lone Wolf

Windsor Star

A man of many millions can afford to be generous and at the same time perverse. So we have the case of William Black, chairman of the board of Dominion Tool & Stamping Co., who gave Columbia University $5,000,000 five years ago, and recently refused to kick in $30 to the university council of business alumni fund. He is one of its graduates but now believes a general college education is preferable.

As he puts it, "I wasted my time at the Columbia school of business." And he doesn't suggest that was the result of inattention on his part. He doubts business can be taught.

The conclusion most easily drawn here is that Mr. Black is the type who doesn't fit easily into prescribed grooves. Some colorful tycoons have been like that and Henry Ford was one of them. The enrollment in schools of business will not at any time have a heavy concentration of students of that type, however. And in the long view that could be a good thing.

Strictly Personal
The Nobility Of Sartre's Calm Refusal

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is nearly impossible to understand someone else doing what we cannot imagine ourselves, in any circumstances, doing. This is why the world was so baffled last month, when Jean-Paul Sartre refused the Nobel Prize for Literature and the $30,000 that goes with it.

I had read only a brief and unsatisfactory version of his reasons for declining, until the New York Review of Books recently translated his full statement appearing in his French journal, La Monde.

Shortly before that I had appeared on a television panel in which the participants were asked why, in our opinions, Sartre had turned down the prize. We said, variously, that (a) he didn't need the money, (b) it was a shrewd publicity stunt, (c) it was a peculiarity of Sartre, and (d) it had to do with Eastern bloc.

None of these "reasons," it turns out from his statement, was anywhere near the truth. My own guess had been no more near the mark than those of the others — for I also, could not conceive of myself rejecting this high honor and the considerable sum attached to it.

His reasons, summarized briefly, are twofold: unwillingness to be transformed into an "institution," and unwillingness to align himself with the cultural forces of either the Western or the Eastern bloc.

Agree or disagree with these views, there is an honesty, consistency and carefulness about them so far removed from the cynical and shabby motives of the ordinary person that we are compelled, in psychological self-defense, to impugn his motives and seek for some subtle ulterior ones instead.

The point I am making is not that Sartre is right or wrong in refusing the prize, or even that his reasons are valid or invalid; it is simply that hardly one man in a million is prepared to live by up to his principles once the reward when so powerful an inducement as this award comes along — especially since, as he regretfully pointed out, he could have used the money to advance the organization and the movement he considers important.

When confronted by the sor of behavior exemplifying a morality and an inner coherence we pay lip-service but do not follow — it becomes terribly necessary for us to devalue such behavior down to our own level. This is why we on the panel were so ready to chalk up Sartre's refusal to either political, or psychopathology, or hi socialist sympathies. Thes things we can understand an accept.

But we cannot really understand people who are better, or worse, or much better, than we are in similar circumstances For what we call our moral decency is little more than a habitual conformity that, ea neither sink to depths of depravity nor rise to heights of nobility.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Jan. 8th, 1945

Our story opens in the emergency ward at the Hospital for Sick Children late one evening not so long ago. Suddenly, from the gathering dusk outside, there appeared a well-dressed man. In his arms he held a baby wrapped in a blanket.

At once the nurses and doctor on duty sprang into action. Brief examination showed the child to be suffering from a spinal injury. The strange part of the story is, that when the doctor turned to question the supposed father of the child, he could not be found. Quietly he had come, and as quietly he had gone away.

However, this incident was nothing new in the history of the Hospital for Sick Children, whose doors have never been closed since the day they first opened nearly 70 years ago. During all those years no child has ever knocked there in vain.

De Gaulle Is Not Crazy

New York Nation

It is too bad that the British and American press persist in treating de Gaulle as though he were crazy. He certainly has good reasons for opposing the Multilateral Force — whether German-American or Anglo-German-American, with a few Turks, Italians and Greeks thrown in. He will do what he can to prevent any version of the M.L.F. from coming into being; if he fails he will have further proposals to make with a view to minimizing its danger.

Mao Tse-tung, when he informed de Gaulle of the Chinese atom bomb, advocated a conference of all powers "interested in disarmament." De Gaulle replied that he would prefer a meeting restricted to the nuclear powers: the United States, Russia, China, Great Britain and France. But what form is this "Atomic Club" to take, this enlarged version of the three-power club which de Gaulle vainly urged upon England and America in 1958?

Communist China, de Gaulle urges, should be admitted to the UN as quickly as possible and should be given a permanent seat on the Security Council. Along with the United States, Great Britain, Russia and France. Thus, all five nuclear powers would be in constant contact. Although he treated the UN with the greatest disdain when it interfered with French "internal affairs" during the Algerian war—calling it "that thing"—de Gaulle becomes increasingly favorable to making it an instrument of peace. He is an excellent personal terms with U Thant and, as the great "de-colonizer" of Africa and advocate of the neutralization of South-east Asia, enjoys considerable pull among the uncommitted nations of Africa and Asia. These countries become steadily more numerous at the UN and de Gaulle thinks they will help to get China across the threshold.

De Gaulle thinks that a five-member UN Security Council might offer real insurance against a major war, and might even produce some disarmament—which the endless talks at Geneva are clearly not doing.

Nor does this summary complete the scope of de Gaulle's concerns. The conquest of Khrushchev is gone and the Russo-Germany talks are abandoned; he believes something should be done to relieve tensions in Central Europe, and has been looking at the old Polish Rapacki Plan for an atom-free zone. There is talk of a de Gaulle-Gomulka meeting. He doubts that the Russo-Chinese split can be really healed, and expects Russia to become increasingly a member—and the Eastern rampart—of the European community.

If de Gaulle seems on occasion to lower above the other world statesmen, it is not, as too much of the Western press pretends, because he is France's man on horseback.

for instruction will be responsible for the program branch—including elementary and secondary education, curriculum and examinations—and the teacher education branch, which operates the provincial schools.

The assistant deputy for administration will take over the administration branch, the administration branch, the information branch and the personnel branch.

HEADS SPECIAL SCHOOLS

The assistant deputy for provincial schools and further education will be responsible for operation of the special schools and services branch, the youth training and the technological and trades training branch.

The special schools branch operates the school with the deaf and blind as well as correspondence courses. The technological branch runs the department's vocational centres and institutes of technology.

With the dividing of the province into districts, Mr. Davis anticipates that many decisions related to local problems will be made at the district level instead of at head office in Toronto.

"Each district superintendent will have inspectors in various specialties under his jurisdiction," Mr. Davis said. "This decentralization should allow for the making of the careful, quick decisions that will be demanded in our rapidly expanding and changing educational system."

SPEED RESULT

The education minister also said the integration of the branches of elementary and secondary education should strengthen the concept of education as a continuing process.

"In the past I think we must admit that each level has been too exclusively concerned with its own tasks."

Integration also will bring together classroom inspection, examinations and curriculum, which will be grouped in the programs branch responsible for the complete instruction program in Ontario schools.

Many small specialist branches for subjects such as music, art and guidance are to be grouped into larger units.

Boosted Beer Sales Result Of Que. Liquor Store Strike

By CY FOX

MONTREAL (CP) — "We never knew there were so many whisky and rye men," said the brewery official.

He was commenting on figures showing that deliveries of beer from the brewery were up 30 per cent during December over December, 1963.

The beer sales climbed following a strike of Quebec government liquor employees.

Other breweries in Quebec reported the same increase in deliveries and look forward to similar increases this month over production figures for January, 1964.

Prospects for settlement of the 34-day-old strike have been looking up lately says Rene Chartrand, president of the union representing the 3,000 striking employees of the Quebec Liquor Board.

The board controls the sale of liquor throughout Quebec. The employees walked out Dec. 5 to protest wage levels and working conditions.

Beer is available in grocery stores. Most hotel keepers have stocks of liquor for another two or three weeks.

QUEBEC LOSES REVENUE

An official of the Quebec finance department said the beer sales can't begin to make up for the revenue the government will lose on liquor sales. The loss so far is "at least $8,000,000."

Sales revenue was $44,788,000 in 1963-64 and was forecast to be $46,072,800 in 1964-65 fiscal year.

About 13 arrests of drivers carrying liquor across provincial borders have been made since Dec. 5, and police large quantities of alcohol apparently brought in for trading purposes.

A provincial policeman in Quebec City said seizures of home brew were made "on every corner" during the Christmas-New Year season, but most did not involve big operations.

In Campbellton, N.B., the Chateau Restiguoche is doing well on thirsty guests from nearby Quebec and says it is running short of some brands of drink.

The New Brunswick government liquor store at Campbellton also reports shortages because of brisk trade with residents of the parched province to the west. The store manager said customers are having "no trouble at all" taking their liquid purchases back to Quebec.

Eleven known landings by Indonesian infiltrators have been made on the coast of the federation since last Aug. 17 as part of Indonesian President Sukarno's policy of confrontation toward Malaysia.

VOWS TO CRUSH

Sukarno vowed to "crush" the federation by the time the rock crows Jan. 1, 1965. He viewed the federation as a British neo-colonialist plot in Southeast Asia.

Meanwhile, Singapore authorities Thursday night announced tighter security measures in Singapore harbor against Indonesian infiltration and sabotage attempts from sea.

The steps included a curfew on small craft and a warning to ship captains that they would be side lights and night watches on deck.

The stepped-up security in the harbor came following an Indonesian bomb attack on a Liberian freighter Wednesday.

Radio Malaysia quoted British Army bomb disposal experts as saying today he was convinced most of the British Commonwealth would stand behind Malaysia in the event of a major clash with Indonesia.

Rash of Mishaps Caused by Icy Roads

Icy roads brought a rash of traffic accidents in the Belleville area this morning.

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. HILLER

There are frequent cases each year where a taxpayer has purchased a home, and endeavored to claim as a deduction from his income all the expenses of maintaining the home. He will claim as a deduction taxes, insurance, monthly payments, mortgage interests, etc. None of these are allowable unless he is renting a part of his home to another person, and then it is only the portion of the expenses that are applicable to the part rented. The cost of maintaining the house in which you live and from which you do not receive any revenue, is a personal expense and never deductible on your income tax return.

This does not apply to a farmer who lives on the farm from which he makes his living. In these cases a farmer is allowed to deduct one quarter of all the expenses that apply to his house. This includes one quarter of the depreciation. Look for a following article which will deal entirely with farmers' capital cost allowances (depreciation).

A taxpayer who is a salesman (door to door), an agent or other means of livelihood which requires him to use one room in his residence exclusively for this purpose may be allowed to claim the expenses applicable to this room only; that is if it was a six-room house he could claim one sixth of the total expenses, such as heat, light, insurance, capital cost allowance etc. When making a claim of this nature a letter should be attached to the return, giving all the details as to why the claim was necessary.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self-addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you ask.

QUESTION: I work in a factory and my brother is a farmer. Why am I not allowed any of the expenses on his home and car? (Ontario).

ANSWER: A farm house is part of the business of farming, as it is used by the farmhands, and do other paper work. Your house is not used to earn your income.

QUESTION: I am a township clerk and maintain an office in my home. The room is used for no other purpose. Can I claim the cost of heat, light, etc., as an expense against my salary?

ANSWER: Yes, providing it is part of your agreement with your employer, that you maintain an office at your own expense.

Vegetable Oil King Changes Plea to Guilty

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—Bankrupt vegetable oil king Anthony DeAngelis changed his plea to guilty from not guilty today on three counts of an 18-count federal indictment charging him in a $100,000,000 conspiracy.

DeAngelis had been indicted with four other men last March on charges of conspiring to circulate $100,000,000 in fraudulent or forged vegetable oil warehouse receipts.

The five allegedly conspired to use the receipts as collateral for loans to finance their vegetable oil refining corporation in Bayonne, of which DeAngelis was president.

The firm filed for bankruptcy in November, 1963, and its collapse set off a chain reaction of bankruptcies or reorganizations involving at least a dozen other firms, including the New York brokerage houses. A multi - million - dollar scandal came with the crash.

"You give me a half dollar and I'll leave."

Another Christine Story Closing With Conviction of Two Charged With Fraud

LONDON (CP) — Christine, a name to make news with for nearly two years, may soon get a rest from the headlines.

There were two Christine stories—one about a woman, a gay time and death, and the other about a baby, mystery and death. The second now seems drawing to a close.

Convicted of what the prosecution termed a "villainous plot" to defraud a Canadian insurance company of $150,000 ($450,000), two men will be sentenced Monday.

Ronald Verrier, 34, and Edward Anderson, 33, were convicted Thursday of acting out a "macabre pantomime" with the yacht Christine as an attempt to trick the Crown Life Insurance Company into paying a $450,000 life policy.

The 30-foot, two-berth Christine has not been seen since she sailed from east-coast Ramsgate at 12:15 a.m., Jan. 2, 1964, on a mystery voyage that meant the death of Dennis (Danny) Bassett, 34, a seaman and stock car racer.

TALES SPREAD

But tales of Christine's fate proliferated. She was supposed to have carried gangsters who committed Britain's great train robbery of August, 1963.

Planes, helicopters, boats and divers searched for Christine—and found her wheelhouse door.

The law officers lost their fascination for the Christine mystery and instead eventually charged that Verrier, a company director; Anderson, a car salesman, and Bassett conspired to cheat the insurance firm.

As the prosecution saw the case, Verrier took out the big insurance policy on Bassett with whom he had business dealings. Rumors had spread that Anderson was an extremely accident-prone person.

Bassett was to report Anderson had drowned in their mid-night voyage in which the Christine vanished. But the whole scheme blew up when Bassett himself drowned — his body was washed up on a Bal-gian beach—and Anderson was discovered by reporters in Ireland. Verrier never did claim the insurance money.

ARENT'S CONVICTED

The story of this Christine, lost an old tub of a yacht, has no bearing whatever on the other, which concerns suburbanized Christine Keeler, actrize a craft as ever rocked British society.

But glum Londoners have frequently been heard to comment like this: "It will be nice to pick up the paper one day and find no Christine."

The Daily Telegraph says the death knell of the boat scheme was sounded by a bell that clangs shatteringly twice every 30 seconds on 20-foot-high outer tongue buoy off Ramsgate in the straits of Dover.

The theory is that Bassett was left at the buoy with a dinghy and flares, prepared to report Anderson lost at sea. Flares were seen from shore on the fatal night. The Telegraph says:

"It is believed that in desperation Bassett" was forced to jump off the buoy into a rubber dinghy moored to it in an attempt to escape the deafening banging of the buoy's bell."

But, Bassett a non-swimmer, met disaster and the dinghy was found empty. One theory is that Verrier and Anderson, after leaving Bassett crippled the Christine, transferred to another boat and came in to Folkestone, later going separate ways.

Bassett's body was washed up on the Belgian coast six weeks after the Christine vanished. An inquest jury at Dover returned a verdict of manslaughter against Verrier but he was subsequently acquitted.

The prosecution at the Old Bailey criminal court here disclosed as a sham one yarn by Anderson that the boat had been hired by train robbers.

Successful Living

Girl Can't Show Affection, Worries About Future

DEAR DORIS — I am 23. A man 31 wants to marry me. I have a lot of feeling for this man, but it is difficult for me to show him affection. He is always the first to squeeze my hand or give me a hug.

I have always been like this, and not only with the opposite sex. Also with my mother, sisters and brothers. It seems easier for me to show appreciation by doing some good turn or by praise.

It bothers me when my boy friend says "It would be nice if once in a while you would put your arms around me instead!" I don't know if this will cause future heartaches if I marry him. — ARM'S LENGTH.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR ARM'S — We need the human touch for fulfillment. Demonstrations of affection can actually help love grow. The psychologists say we not only run because we are afraid; the more we run the scarcder we get! Similarly, we commit ourselves with a hug and a kiss, and find that we love our loved one more!

Doubtless affection has been lacking in your early life, or you'd have useful, hand-squeezing, heartwarming habits for the man in your life. Practice makes perfect. 'Nuff said?

DEAR DORIS — My problem is my father because I want to get my ears pierced and he won't let me. I am 15 and see no good reason why I shouldn't be able to. My father says that if I get them done I would regret it later.

I would also like to hear the opinions of your readers who have or want to get their ears pierced. — DESPERATE.

DEAR DESPERATE — Time was when ear piercing was done for very young people. Actually, unless rings are worn in the holes made, they grow back again.

But why the desperation? Lots of us settle for clip-ons or screw-ons — which are lovely enough to suit anybody. Wait a while until you can make this decision about your body for yourself. (Readers — Any comments?)

DEAR DORIS — I wonder if your list of books on adoption includes one by Harpo Marx, entitled "Harpo Speaks." It is a heart-warming story about how the Marx's handled things with their adopted family. Almost makes one wish one had been adopted instead of merely born to one's parents. — NO NAME.

* * *

DEAR NO NAME — I hereby put it on the BIG-'UN real-life experience of a person as sensitive, talented and intelligent as Harpo Marx can be an inspiration to other adoptive parents.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO TROUBLED MOTHER — Under no circumstances should you allow your father to be alone with your little daughters. Keep your reasons to yourself, except for making it clear to him. No need to distress your mother now about what happened to you in the past.

U.E. Loyalists' House

Work is in progress for the restoration of the Rose Home

Across the road from the house on the shore of Lake Ontario is the cemetery where the Rose family and their descendants are buried.

Preserve Early Canadian Home In Prince Edward County

By GLADYS WARD

Canadians have been so busy building for the future that only slowly are we becoming aware that we also have a past. Perhaps the centennial year has served as a reminder that we can look backwards as well as forward and see the way we have come from a raw new country to our present state of civilization.

In many localities historical sites are being preserved, old cemeteries cleaned up, and attics searched for antiques.

RESTORE HOME

One such project is the home of Peter Rose in North Marysburgh on the south shore of Prince Edward County. Renovations were started about a year ago by local residents, and it is now being sponsored by North and South Marysburgh Councils and the Department of Tourism and Information.

U.E. LOYALISTS

Peter Rose came to Marysburgh prior to 1796 across Lake Ontario from the United States, one of the Empire Loyalists. He married Christianna Bongard whose parents had arrived in 1784. Her father was paymaster for the German and Dutch troops who served in the American Revolution. These soldiers were given grants of land, principally "5th Town" Marysburgh.

ELEVEN CHILDREN

Peter Rose and his wife had 11 children, nine sons and two daughters. Across the road from the farmhouse and down towards Lake Ontario is the cemetery where Peter and Christianna and many of their descendants are buried. Peter's headstone reads that he died aged 78, and Christianna (relic of Peter Rose) lived to be 97 years and one day.

OLDEST DESCENDANT

The oldest descendant is probably Mrs. George Ward, 92 years old, of Picton, who traces the line through her maternal grandparents. She is the great granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rose. Mrs. Ward has a keen memory and remembers being in awe of Christianna when she visited at her grandparents' home.

OLD MAPS AND DEEDS

The house is being restored as a museum by the Marysburgh Museum committees, who are gradually collecting pieces of Canadiana to furnish it. Volunteers have acted as guides to visitors, and are busy compiling a family history and tracing descendants. A family Bible presented by Fred Hubbs was a source of information. Old maps showed how the land was divided, and old deeds traced ownership. The day this reporter visited the museum, Mrs. Malcolm Love and Mrs. Ralph Storms were working there.

HAND HEWN BEAMS

The floors of the house were wide painted boards made of pine. An open stair well had the original hand guard rail which was still as sturdy that not a single nail or screw had to be added. The beams were hand hewn with the mark of the adze on them. The walls and ceilings had to be replastered, and this was done by mixing cow hair with the plaster as it was done originally.

ROPE BED

A baby's cradle was hand made of pine, and had a woven blanket on it. A sampler on the wall was made of linen with hand carded wool dyed in various colors. In the bedroom the colonial rope bed had a hand woven cover on it. Two oil paintings were found in the barn, but so far have not been identified.

The museum is closed for the winter but will be re-opened in the spring. Restoration will progress as necessary funds are made available by donations and money raising projects.

INVENTED CALLIOPE

The calliope, invented in 1855 by American Joshua C. Stoddard, was named after the Greek muse of eloquence and epic poetry.

Ann Landers

Hog-Caller Ashamed of Her Championship Talents

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My wife took a few lessons in voice before we were married (18 years ago). The truth is she can't carry a note with a co-singer.

Whenever we go to a party Isobel gets a few beers and wants to give a recital. What Isobel does best is the hog-calling bit. She was raised near Ida Grove, Iowa, and won the county hog-calling championship for three straight years. When the party gets going good everyone hollers, "Call the hogs, Isobel," but she wants to sing opera. Nobody wants opera; they want her specialty. Isobel says it isn't dignified.

ANN LANDERS

Please tell her to be a sport. She thinks you're great and she'll listen to you. — BUCK.

DEAR BUCK — Since I'm an Iowa girl myself I can tell you that a good hog-caller can be proud. That "Soo-eeeey-sooeeeeoey" bit is an art. C'mon, Isobel, give the folks what they want.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I've been laughing my head off over your cornball column for years. Certainly you've read enough from the miserable married of America to know by this time that marriage is a great little institution — but not for men.

Why not level with John and Jane Q. Public and tell them the way it is? Every married man I know has that hang-dog look on his face. You can see that the joy of living has been beaten out of him.

The male animal is a roamer by nature — happier when he is unencumbered. And this is the way he was meant to live.

The female, however, needs marriage. She must have a permanent home. She needs a family to give expression to her maternal instinct. It is also better for the economics of the country if women marry because marriage and family responsibilities keep women at home — for a few years at least. Too many females are out in the business world competing with males which creates all kinds of problems.

Since you claim to be a realist, Ann, why don't you state the facts? — MALE MAIL.

DEAR MAIL — So men should be single and women should be married? And just who are women supposed to marry? Each other?

When you get the formula worked out, send it on. It should make fascinating reading.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a boy who is 13 and already writing to Ann Landers for advice. I didn't think I would need you for a few more years but here I am.

My four-year-old sister is making a wreck of me. Whenever I want to see a certain TV program Jeanette throws herself down on the floor, and kicks and screams until she gets her way.

Twice last week I had to take Jeanette with me on Saturday afternoon when I went to a friend's house to play table tennis. Today I told my mother I'd rather not go than take my little sister. Jeanette kicked up such a fuss my mother said, "You'll go and take her with you. I can't stand the noise. It's bad for my blood pressure."

Is this fair? What can I do? — LIKE TRAPPED.

DEAR LIKE — You should not have to take your little sister with you because your mother can't stand to have her at home. When a four-year-old rules the roost by kicking and screaming — look out. The noises Jeanette is making now are whispers compared to what will come later.

Your mother needs some outside help. She has a spoiled four-year-old on her hands and allowing kids to behave this way is unfair. Such kids grow up thoroughly despised.

Do you lean on cigarettes as a social crutch? You may regret it later. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-Age Smoking," enclosing with your request 15c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP)—Vincent Roiletta of New York University told the Orillia Women's Canadian Club that besides the three Rs, schools must also teach the three "knows." Canadian Girls Wanted For U.S. Air Lines

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP)—New opportunities are opening up in the United States for Canadian girls interested in becoming stewardesses.

United Air Lines is conducting a recruiting campaign for stewardesses in Canadian cities and towns. Marc F. Wallace, personnel manager of personnel, says 35,000 to 40,000 girls will be interviewed and many of the 1,500 stewardesses hired are expected to be Canadian.

The airline will interview applicants in Ottawa Jan. 25-26 and in Montreal Jan. 27-28.

Charles M. Urbach, manager of employment, says more than 300 Canadians are serving as stewardesses with United and last year more than 100 were hired.

Candidates must be 20 to 27 years old, single and high school graduates. Height limits are five-two to five-nine. Weight must be under 140 pounds in proportion to height. Vision must be correctible to 20-30 in each eye, and spectacles or contact lenses are permitted.

Once selected, fledgling stewardesses spend 5½ weeks at United's education and training centre outside Chicago learning about aircraft, care for the safety and health of passengers, routing, ticketing, fares, airline codes and airline history. An appearance-consultant gives a seminar on hair-styling, make-up, figure-control and proper diet.

SERVES 116 CITIES

The training centre contains a year-round swimming pool, tennis courts, game rooms, television and exercise facilities, aircraft mockups and classrooms. Trainees are assigned roommates with whom they share a suite while attending classes. Pin money is supplied.

Upon receiving her silver wings a stewardess may be assigned to home base in 12 cities —Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh, New York, Newark, N.J., Washington or Miami. The airline serves 116 cities, including Honolulu and Vancouver.

Flight schedules for each month are bid for on a seniority basis, but United officials say the rapid turnover ensures a relatively fast rise on the seniority list. Most stewardesses marry after 3½ years with the company, becoming eligible for the Clipped Wings Association.

Salary starts at $325 a month, plus $30 incentive pay for flying time between 70 and 85 hours.

United says candidates with college or registered nurse training are especially desirable, and an interested stewardess can become a supervisor, instructor or sales representative.

Juniors Win Over Napanee By 8-6 Score

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Merchants opened up a 4-1 lead in the first period and never looked back while dumping the Napanee Legion 8-6 here last night.

The victory boosted Picton into a third-place tie with Trenton, three points behind Belleville.

Merchants outshot the visitors 36-31 overall but Napanee cut the lead to 6-4 in the middle stanza and split four goals with the middle in the final twenty minutes.

Billy Hopkins spearheaded the Picton attack getting three goals and an assist. The goals brought his haul to five in two nights. Gary Hasenel rapped home two more for the winners while singletons were by Donald Jones, Bart Frederick and Pettingill. Harold Haddock got three assists.

Napanee goals were shared by a dozen players. Getting a goal each were Steve Cook, Ron VanAlstine, Rick Gerow, Larry Cook, Jim Stinson and Ron Locke.

There were 13 penalties in the contest and the winners drew seven of that total. One of the Picton sentences was a game misconduct to Fred Bray, assessed after he became the third man in a second-period fight.

Skating Club Constitution Is Adopted

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward Skating Club, now consisting of some 110 members is well into it's first season. According to the Skating Club secretary, Mrs. R. A. Kirkpatrick of Picton, the children are progressing very well with their instruction. Early in the season it was discovered, as shown, when it was announced that the club would be formed and this interest has continued so far through out the first half of the term. The instruction is most capably carried out by Belleville figure skater, Mrs. P. R. Tatton. Mrs. Tatton also instructs the Wellington Figure Skating Club.

A meeting of the club's executive was held at the Community Centre Thursday evening. The constitution was formally adopted and this along with written approval and backing of both the Trenton and Belleville Clubs will be forwarded to Ottawa along with an application for membership in the Canadian Figure Skating Association. Membership in the CFSA will permit members to perform in their own area and be examined by the C.F.S.A.) and children who belong to the club may pass tests conducted by C.P.S.A. judges.

It is expected that tests will be conducted in the near future, perhaps six children involving preliminary figure skating and dances. At Thursday night's meeting it was decided to present a skating carnival and permission will be asked from the Community Centre to hold this on Saturday, March 27.

Appointed as Carnival chairman for the event Mr. R. A. Kirkpatrick, Picton and Publicity chairman, Mrs. Peterson. Helen Ralley will be responsible for tickets and programs.

The executive also decided to be a big event in Picton and skaters will be invited from out of town clubs.

While the Commons stands adjourned, workmen are busy installing wiring and listening devices in the public galleries. This will allow the session reporters hear English or French simultaneous translations of House debates when the session resumes.

Laws and more official documents are being translated into French and the translation bureau has doubled its output to an estimated 200,000,000 words in 1964. The bureau plans to hire 50 more translators in the next few months to cope with the avalanche.

Provinces

New Brunswick's decision to use only the maple leaf flag on all provincial buildings.

Years of discussion, climaxed by six months of repetitive debate, apparently have failed to beat all Canadians into resignation or into boredom on the flag issue. Therefore, some provincial governments are treading carefully to avoid alienating the nationalists who lament the demotion of the Union Jack and find Ottawa or the nationalists who say it's about time Canada got its own flag.

Thus British Columbia plans to hoist four flags together at the provincial legislature building in Victoria—the Union Jack, the Red Ensign, the rising-sun provincial emblem and the new maple leaf flag.

Neighboring Alberta's committee will be to continue flying the Union Jack above the provincial legislature in Edmonton and use the new maple leaf flag at other provincial government buildings.

NO INDECISION HERE

Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia officially have made no decision and have to do about the new national flag.

Quebec is expected to continue flying the Union Jack above white fleur de lis flag. Nova Scotia both the Union Jack and its provincial flag at provincial buildings.

Saskatchewan has tentative plans to unfurl provincial flags to mark its 60th anniversary this year. Manitoba, which just last year voted overwhelmingly to replace the Union Jack with the Red Ensign as the official flag for public schools, is considering the new turn of events.

Ontario, which now flies the Red Ensign in front of the legislature, is awaiting the return of protocol officer Lt.-Col. Fulton on a vacation. Meantime, Premier John Robarts plans to ask the provincial flag question at the Red Ensign with the Ontario coat of arms on the fly as a provincial flag.

Prince Edward Island, which adopted a banner bearing the provincial coat of arms last spring, will continue flying only the new provincial flag at government buildings, Premier Shaw.

Newfoundland, where the Union Jack has remained dominant since the former colony joined Canada as a province, had the return of Premier Joseph Smallwood from a trip to decide what to do about the maple leaf.

Meanwhile, Col. Flynn added, plans are going ahead with the Macdonald-Cartier Festival. Dinner, Macdonald's home in Kingston which was bought by the federal government as a historic site 13 months ago. Work on restoration is to begin in April this year.

"Maybe this will create a precedent that will spread throughout Canada," Col. Flynn said. He said he began planning the Macdonald event in a little more than two months ago although the work really needed a full year.

Tattooist Operating Under Licence From Health Board

By JANE BECKER

EDMONTON (CP)—One more holdout from a picturesque past may die if an Edmonton man's prediction comes true.

Pat Martyniuk, a tattooist for nine of his 37 years, is believed to be the only tattooist in Alberta with an operating licence from a board of health.

"It's time tattooing got out of skid road and became a respectable occupation," says Mr. Martyniuk. "Until now, tattooists have had a pretty bad reputation. The ones who would attract anybody to make a buck, and didn't care about cleanliness, gave all of us a bad name."

Mr. Martyniuk belongs to the Tattoo Club of America, a 250-member organization trying to raise the profession to a standard level of cleanliness and competence.

But he says at least as many other tattoo artists still operate in the back rooms of bars, seedy restaurants and waterfront dives. Being tattooed by a grizzled gipsy may be exciting, but it often leads to unpleasant complications such as blood poisoning or hepatitis from using dirty needles.

The Martyniuk premises look more like a school dispensary than a tattoo den, though pinball machines in the outer office probably wouldn't pass education boards.

He has water boiling constantly for sterilizing needles, works in a white smock and finishes off each fresh tattoo with a clean bandage.

"Not one case of blood poisoning so far," says Mr. Martyniuk.

SEES PRACTICUL USES

Business is brisk. He does an average of four of five designs each evening, which is all he can handle at half-an-hour a tattoo. But neither he nor his customers have a real answer to why anyone want to be tattooed. All Mr. Martyniuk knows for sure is that a lot of young men—the average age is 20 to 22, and many are in the army—have a yen for a cool design on their arm or across their chest, and he's glad to oblige.

Mr. Martyniuk sees a number of practical uses for tattooing—another reason he'd like to see it become respected.

The most obvious is as a permanent record of blood type in case of accident or emergency. He has already done several of these. Tattooed symbols could also show if a person was a diabetic or epileptic. Identification bracelets can be lost or broken, Mr. Martyniuk notes, but a tattoo is on to stay. Tattooing is also an effective way to cover scars or skin blemishes.

About 5,000 suggested tattoos, some of which you would not show your mother, paper the walls of Mr. Martyniuk's outer office. He also tattoos himself and says his wife, Constance, is a colorful as he.

But his four children are still untouched by his needles.

"They're all under age," he explains.

Vote Has Problems In N.W.T.

By STUART LAKE

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP)—Granting residents of the eastern Arctic the right to vote for their own members of the Northwest Territories Council could mean the start of a language problem for the Parliament of the North.

That's the view of Stuart Hodgson of Vancouver, one of the five appointed members of the territorial government. Four other members are elected from the western Arctic.

Mr. Hodgson, an official of the International Woodworkers Union, is in full agreement with council's decision at its recent winter meetings here that the eastern Arctic should elect its own representatives to the council.

"How else are we to know their views?" he asks.

But he believes council has overlooked one possibility in requesting the federal government to establish new ridings so that the vote can be extended to all territorial residents.

It is not impossible and even probable, he says, that the eastern Arctic some day will name an Eskimo to represent it. The representative might insist—and he would have a perfect right"—to speak in his own language. The same could apply to any Indian who might be elected in the Mackenzie region.

USE ENGLISH ONLY

"This is something that council will have to go into very thoroughly," says the west coast labor leader.

All council business now is conducted in English. But Commissioner B. G. Sivertz has made it a point in public meetings with the native people to have his speeches interpreted. French-English is the only language used in the government schools that dot the territories. Some natives have complained that their children are losing their language.

An indication that the matter is a touchy one cropped up when Health Minister Jody LaMarsh spoke in English at the opening in November of the Frobisher Bay General Hospital.

Many of those present were Eskimos and reporters heard criticism of the minister for not having an interpreter to translate her remarks for them.

Miss LaMarsh apparently got the message too. At a public function the same night she had an interpreter with her for a short speech she made.

Polygamy Is Banned By Africans

By DEREK BLACKMAN

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (Reuters) — Polygamy and contract marriages are abolished by a new civil code adopted by the Ivory Coast National Assembly.

Its major effects will be:

1. To ban polygamy, described during parliamentary discussion as "a handicap to social evolution and a contridiction of the principle of equality of sexes;"

2. To make illegal contract marriages under which a prospective husband is, in effect, required to purchase his wife;

3. To make widespread changes in the traditional "matriarchic" system under which descendants and inheritance pass through the maternal, instead of the paternal, line.

All future marriages must be by the mutual consent of the couple concerned, and celebrated by a civil authority. Divorce procedures will closely follow European laws.

To give the people time to adapt, a transitional period of up to four years is to be allowed. During this time, only marriages must be legalized by registration.

MAJOR BREAKTHROUGH

Observers here consider that wide acceptance of the new laws would represent a major breakthrough for the government in the rapid economic and social development of this country of some 3,300,000 people.

Polygamy, originally considered a social necessity in tribal regions, has in some ways been adapted to modern social needs. Some husbands who work in the cities keep one wife in the city and another in their hereditary village.

Under the transitional provisions of the new laws, present polygamous marriages may remain, but future ones are banned.

The contract marriage system is still practised extensively in the northern districts of the Ivory Coast, where a prospective husband is required to make payments both in money and kind to the family of his intended wife.

Some young men are thus prevented by lack of money from marrying the girl of their choice. Others, who try to do so, complain of the poverty caused by extensive payments to their future father-in-law.

Base-Metal Bonanza Brings Survey Boom

By GORDON GRANT

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — The search for new ore bodies in Northern Ontario is continuing without letup.

Ballooned into Klondike proportions by the discovery of a $2,000,000,000 base-metal bonanza, the pace of detailed aerial surveys and diamond-drill exploration of potential finds is expected to carry on for at least a year.

"If someone should make another strike, that could generate enough enthusiasm to start the whole thing over again," says a geologist from the Ontario department of mines.

In the first nine months of 1964, the number of claims staked in the Timmins area as hundreds of prospectors swarmed in following the April announcement of the zinc-copper-silver find by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. rose to a record, smashing 12,600 compared with 1,739 in the similar 1963 period. The excitement spread over into other parts of Ontario, too. Claims staked during that period in the Sudbury province rose to 35,894 from 13,922.

With the winter freeze-up simplifying the transportation of drilling rigs to outlying regions, there has been a sharp increase in diamond-drill exploration.

TOWN GROWS

The only limit in sight on exploration, says a department of mines official, is the number of crews and the equipment available.

Locally, some of the initial burst of enthusiasm has passed, but the confidence engendered by the Texas Gulf announcement remains.

"We already have some new hotels, new stores and a $1,000,000 shopping plaza under construction," says A. L. Wyatt, past-president of the Timmins Chamber of Commerce.

Motels are adding extensions to their still-straining facilities and home-building has been speeded up to handle anticipated increases in the present population of 30,000.

Until last April Timmins was almost exclusively a gold camp and had been for 60 years. But with mines caught in a squeeze between rising costs and a fixed price for gold, many were in serious financial trouble.

Others, including some of the great giants, were facing dwindling reserves. Between 1945 and 1964, an estimated 5,000 mining jobs disappeared.

The gloom these bitter facts generated disappeared overnight, however, with the new Timmins find, considered the largest single deposit ever uncovered in Canada.

J. P. Bartleman, a town pioneer and former mayor, said shortly after the strike news:

"We can look forward to a future instead of extinction. It won't be long before the population of Timmins is doubled."

Mr. Bartleman was not alone in his excitement.

MARKET WENT MAD

Stock market speculators went wild. April 17, the day after the announcement, the largest volume ever recorded by a North American stock exchange was chalked up by the Toronto Stock Exchange as 228,704,000 shares changed hands.

Stocks of companies with properties—or plans for properties—in the Timmins area doubled or tripled in price.

Original estimates of what the find means to Timmins have been revised as facts were examined in the cold light of day.

But no matter how it's cut, it's still big. And it means that the town has a future.

"The only thing that is bothering us now is whether Texas Gulf will build its processing plant here," Mr. Wyatt says.

"We think it will. If it does, the population of Timmins will increase by 10,000."

One aspect of the situation that does not affect the town is ownership of the vast ore body.

Two claims have been entered against Texas Gulf for it —one by Leitch Gold Mines and Masteldon Highland Bell, a subsidiary of Highland Bell Mines, and the other by Royal Trust Co. acting on behalf of a client's estate.

No matter what the courts decide in these questions, Timmins has already come out a winner.

LEAVE ASSOCIATION

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — About 100 workers at the Ontario hospital near here have withdrawn from the Civil Service Association of Ontario during the last two months because they are dissatisfied with wages, John Harkness, president of the association's Branch 27, said Thursday. Mr. Harkness said in an interview that some workers want to affiliate with a union such as the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CLC).

Man Barred From Entering Gananoque

GANANOQUE, Ont. (CP) — William Ernest Bell, 46, of Peterborough, was sentenced Thursday to four months in jail on charges involving an armed break-in of the Gananoque apartment of his former fiance, Mrs. Hilda Jones.

Magistrate Phillip Baker placed Bell on probation for two years and told him not to return to Gananoque, about 30 miles east of Kingston, or try to see Mrs. Jones.

Bell said he could not remember the Nov. 20 incident in which he broke the apartment door lock, pulled out telephone wires and brandished a loaded .22-calibre revolver. He said he had been drinking after taking drugs for an industrial accident.

Squid-Jigging Grounds --Grumbling Abounds

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — There's a lot of jingling to be heard around the squid-jigging grounds this year; and a lot of grumbling, too.

Newfoundland fishermen have received more money for their fish in 1964 than ever before in the island's history.

A St. John's fish packaging and exporting firm paid 825 for each quintal — 112 pounds of good quality, dry salt cod they bought. A firm at Harbor Grace paid up to $22.50 a quintal for salt bulk—fish in a wet or uncured state.

Skipper William C. Hodder of Rock Harbour, Placentia Bay, said "a quintal of cod this season was almost as good as 10 some 25 years ago when the price was as low as $3.70 a quintal."

The veteran fisherman said the prices paid this year were the highest I ever heard of." Other old - timers in various parts of the island agreed with him.

But not all fishermen agree that the high prices spell financial ease for them.

E. J. Lush, secretary of the Newfoundland Federation of Fishermen, said that "despite the highest prices there are hundreds of fishermen who did not pay their way."

He claimed the 1964 cod season was the worst since 1961, and one of the "worst during the past decade."

Mr. Antle said the main phase of the Newfoundland fishery "got off to a poor start because of ice conditions and unfavorable weather during the spring and early summer."

Latest figures released by the federal department of fisheries here show codfish production to the end of October was some 100,000 quintals below that of last year when 400,000,000 pounds put 813,000,000 in the fishermen's pockets.

The spokesman declined to be more specific regarding the delivery date of the weapons, earlier expected at Chatham by the end of 1964.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, JANUARY 8, 1965

Premier Robarts Will Ride To Dinner for Macdonald In Vehicle Used by Sir John

TORONTO (CP) — On the occasion of the 150th birthday of Sir John A. Macdonald Monday, Premier John Robarts of Ontario will be driven from the Kingston railway station to a celebration dinner in the La-Salle Hotel in a horse - drawn carriage once used by Sir John A. himself.

Mr. Robarts may muse then upon a number of similarities, or perhaps coincidences, which relate Macdonald and himself. The most striking of these is that they share the same birth date — Jan. 11. Mr. Robarts will be 48.

Not only that, but they have the same first name, the same profession — law; the same avocation — politics; the same affiliation — Conservative, and both became leaders of government.

This may explain why Mr. Robarts is a professed admirer of Canada's first prime minister and why he is expected to make at least one major announcement at the birthday dinner.

The Ontario government has lent its full support to the dinner celebration initiated by the Kingston Historical Society to mark the 150th birthday of the man who fathered Canadian confederation.

In fact, the province has all but taken over the planning of the affair, ensuring that it will be a glittering tribute to Macdonald. James Auld, minister of tourism and information for Ontario, personally has led the organization.

Lieutenant - Governor Earl Rowe of Ontario, Premier Robarts, former premier Leslie Frost and other dignitaries will leave Toronto for Kingston in a special train at 10:30 a.m. Monday, arriving three hours later.

Three Ontario cabinet ministers also will attend the 300-guest black-tie dinner celebration — Mr. Auld, Provincial Treasurer James Allan and Energy Minister John Simonds of the Kingston - area riding of Frontenac - Addington.

Also on the special train will be the guest speaker at the dinner, Dr. Donald Creighton, professor of history at the University of Toronto who is author of a two-volume biography of Sir John A.

The guests will make the rail trip in the personal coach of Douglas V. Gonder, vice - president of the central region of the Canadian National Railways, which has been lent to the government for the occasion.

Other officials and members of the press will be in two other cars.

At Kingston the official party will be taken by horse - drawn barouche to the LaSalle Hotel. This open carriage used by Sir John A. in 1878 has been restored by Upper Canada Village, which is making it available for the occasion.

A lengthy list of speakers is scheduled for the evening dinner, including Premier Robarts, minor Rowe and Premier Roberts. Representing the federal government will be George McIlraith, president of the Privy Council, who is substituting for Prime Minister Pearson.

The province and the federal government are expected to make an announcement of special interest to the city of Kingston when Sir John A. arrived as a boy of five from his native Scotland.

Sir John A. became Canada's first prime minister at Confederation in 1867. Defeated at the polls in 1873, he regained the prime ministry five years later and remained as leader of the government until his death in 1891.

Hospital Body Anxious to End Dependence on Nursing Homes

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hospital Services Commission wants to end its dependence on nursing homes that are filling in for hospitals, Commission Chairman John B. Nelson said Thursday.

Dr. Nelson told the legislature's select committee on aging that many nursing homes are fire traps.

About 300 persons are receiving medical care in 44 nursing homes under the Ontario hospital insurance plan.

"We'd much rather be out of this thing completely as soon as we can," Dr. Nelson said. He called the use of homes a stopgap measure that will be unnecessary "as new hospital wings are finished.

"From what I've seen of nursing homes in this province and I've seen a lot—I would not want to be put in one if I became chronically ill," he said.

Welfare Minister Louis Cecile said later in an interview that a new set of regulations announced Wednesday would not force nursing homes to raise their standards, but will merely be a guide for municipalities. Mr. Cecile said the municipalities would have to adopt the regulations to qualify for provincial grants.

The select committee was also told in a brief from the Hospital Services Commission that older persons may have trouble paying hospital insurance if premiums keep rising.

An increase also would encourage some 60 age - old persons who they were having difficulty paying insurance premiums for hospital and medical care, the brief said.

The premium for a single person was raised to $2.25 a month from $2.10 and the family premium was increased to $6.50 from $4.20.

Burying Downtown Hydro Lines Suggested Centennial Project

Placing underground of all overhead electric wiring on Front and Pinnacle streets has been suggested to the Belleville Public Utilities Commission as a possible centennial project.

The suggestions was made last night by Utilities Chairman, Gerald B. Hyde, in his inaugural address to that body. Mr. Hyde succeeds W. Harry Rollins as commission chairman.

Mr. Hyde suggested that the commission ask its manager to work out cost estimates on this or other possible centennial projects with the view of fitting them into the electrical department budget.

Much of the time of last night's inaugural commission meeting was taken up in the consideration of a 28-page report from consulting engineers Gore and Storrie on the needs and estimates relating to the city's water system.

TWO PROJECTS ON

Chairman Hyde said the present and commissions of the next few years would have to continually refer to this report in coping with the water requirements for a growing city.

The report deals with water treatment, pumpage and distribution requirements of the local utilities for the next 13 years or until the city reaches a population of 45,000.

Over-all cost of the water system extension is estimated at two and a quarter million dollars.

Two fairly large projects to be undertaken this year by the Utilities Commission is the provision of a new chemical building at the city water filtration plant, and the erection of a storage garage.

The new chemical building for the pumphouse is listed as a "must" by Manager Hyde in his report and in any event would have been required for the installation of chlorine equipment now being added to purify the water.

The building would also be used for the injection of fluoride as has been approved by Belleville voters, but the addition of fluorine has little significance at this time to either the building, or for its urgency.

WILL CHANGE SYSTEM

The plan for the new chemical building calls for changing the present coal heating system to oil and incorporating into present coal bin as part of the chemical building.

This cannot be done until the end of the heating season and completion of the chemical building addition and installation of equipment is not expected before late fall.

Estimated cost of the chemical building with new injection equipment for chlorine, alum and fluoride is estimated at about $50,000. The annual cost of fluoride to the city would be run over $5,000 per year.

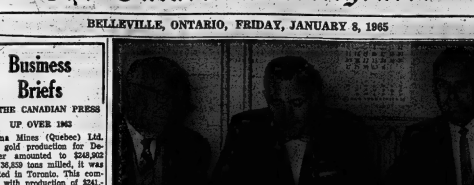
The new storage garage planned by the commission will house service departments now housed in four separate locations and will enable the commission to establish its own meter testing department. At the present much of the meter testing work is done outside of the city.

STATION NEAR COMPLETION

Construction of the new Reid Street sub-station, commenced last autumn, is now nearing completion and is expected to be in operation some time in the early spring.

Referring to the commission's program of changing of all flat rate domestic water services to metered water service, Chairman Hyde felt that a real stepup of this program should be undertaken. This would reassure water users that billing is fair and equitable.

The "change-over" program was ordered by the commission back in 1959 and although all new services have since been metered, at the end of 1964 there were still more flat rate domestic water users than there are meter users.



The financial position of the local utilities has said to be sound and no difficulty is expected in getting municipal approval for debentures to meet monetary needs for capital requirements.

ONLY 13 LOWER

Out of nearly 350 utilities commissions in the province, 339 have higher domestic rates than does Belleville. Two commissions have the same domestic rate and only 13 are lower. A similar set of statistics prevail for commercial and industrial users.

But there was a warning that an increase in local rate may soon be necessary to avoid deficit financing. Operational revenue and expense studies recently undertake that an increase may soon be necessary, according to Mr. Hyde.

He felt, however, that with one of the lowest rates in the province, Belleville citizens would accept the increase provided logical explanations were made for the necessity of the rate increase.

New Common Training Plan For Boy Scouts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Boy Scouts of Canada Thursday signed an agreement on new common training programs for swimming with the Red Cross, for life saving with the Royal Life Saving Society and for first aid with the St. John Ambulance Association.

The agreement, signed at Government House in the presence of Governor-General Vanier, titular head of all four organizations, will replace former separate training schemes for 300,000 Boy Scouts in Canada.

Instruction in swimming, life saving and first aid will be given by experts from the three service organizations.

Successful candidates of the courses will acquire four proficiency badges in swimming and first aid, starting them as beginners, juniors, intermediates and seniors. Life saving badges will be awarded in three stages, excluding Wolf Cubs as participants.

Design of the new badges will include different color backgrounds. The beginner award will be green, the junior bronze, the intermediate silver and the senior gold.

Candidates instructed and examined by officials of the three organizations may be awarded both the scout badge and the standard badge of the organizations.

South Viet Nam Appears Headed for New Govt.

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Communist Viet Cong forces kept nibbling contentedly at South Viet Nam as that troubled Southeast Asian country tried desperately to give birth to a new government.

Above the sound of shouting and rioting that echoed throughout the land signs appeared Thursday that Premier Khanh of some form of settlement between the military and the civilian governing elements was in the offing.

Without the establishment of a unified government under civilian control, South Viet Nam apparently will be unable to launch a minor offensive against the Viet Cong guerrilla forces which have chalked up a series of victories in recent days.

The commanders of Vietnamese military and civilian officials as well as American diplomats and officials met through the day to have begun to lay the foundations for what they hope will be a new government for the chaotic republic.

VIRTUAL COUP

The current crisis started in December when a clique of young generals staged a virtual coup d'etat and dissolved the high national council—the provisional parliament — although they left civilian Premier Tran Van Huong in his office.

The 17-man council had been set up last Nov. 1 as a provisional legislature to carry out the transition from military to civilian control.

An anti-government general strike in the ancient imperial capital of Hue in central Viet Nam and unrest among students and Buddhists both in Hue and in Saigon added to the turmoil.

The confusion and uncertainty of the situation in South Viet Nam has made a strong impact on the United States Senate where many senators were reported to be losing faith in operation over the course of the American-backed war.

AMERICAN AID

Discussions to supply new American military and economic aid to South Viet Nam were halted following the coup by the young generals and there is growing talk among some American withdrawal from a country where practically any government that is formed or might be formed automatically is regarded as alien by the majority of the people.

President Johnson apparently is not interested in extending the war which would likely involve China, and possibly the Soviet Union, should it be carried into Communist North Viet Nam. Both the Soviet Union and China have promised support in the event of an attack on North Viet Nam.

The State Secretary Dean Rusk shed some light on the current American position when he said that the situation calls for coolness, not "reckless action which would move us over the precipice in either the direction of defeat or in the direction of a very great catastrophe."

WILL SEND TROOPS

SEOUL (AP) — The South Korean cabinet decided today to send 2,000 more troops to South Viet Nam at the request of the Saigon government to help its anti - Communist war there, the government announced. They were described as non-combat soldiers.

Some Conservative Party Leaders Fear Danger of Republicans in Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Political leaders were at odds today over views of the "danger" and extent of republicanism in Canada.

That it is a growing and real danger was the view of some Conservative party leaders, who blamed the government's sponsorship of a new flag for Canada as the impetus.

Gordon Churchill, Conservative house leader and one of the most adamant opponents of the new flag, raised the question in a national broadcast last August.

He said Canada had been brought to a crossroads by the Liberals and the people should not submit to "thuggery, manoeuvring under the flag and phoney pies of national unity."

"Let us preserve our unity and maintain our goal: One nation, united under one flag, and all loyalty to the Queen and joined to the Commonwealth."

Mr. Churchill indicated in an interview Thursday that his view has not changed. If anything, his fear that Liberals are drifting into a break with the monarchy is strengthened.

With Prime Minister Pearson absent on a Florida vacation, Opposition spokesmen today was difficult to obtain. Keith Davey, national organizer of the Liberal party, said in effect, that republicanism does not represent the majority thinking of Canadians.

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas said Conservative fears are ridiculous, and added: "I see no indication whatever that Canada is moving towards republicanism.

"I think most Canadians recognize that the Crown has become a symbol of our democratic rights and privileges. The great majority of Canadians want to retain the Crown and the Commonwealth, particularly at a time when other nations are moving together rather than splitting up."

Social Credit Leader Thompson was not available for comment.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette told The Canadian Press in a telephone interview from his home in Rouyn, Que., that he does not believe Canada will become a republic within a year or two, but he would not want to predict what might happen in the next decade.

"The flag debate was a great disillusionment for all of Canada. Everyone was sick and tired of it. This may lead to a new philosophy of government in Canada, and I would not be surprised. I have received many letters from all parts of Canada from people saying: 'I would like to see Canada as a republic.'

A number of Quebec Liberal back - benchers and notably Auguste Choquette (Lotbiniere), have spoken of Canada becoming a republic. The government did not repudiate them publicly, but they have been less strident recently in their views.

Mr. Choquette, asked Thursday whether he advocated Canada becoming a republic, said: "Yes, but I have nothing against the Crown and British institutions. I just say that Canada should sever that link of subservience, only because it is a question of Canadian pride."

He also said he would prefer to see Canada remain in the Commonwealth in Canada, in place of the parliamentary system. Cabinet ministers would not have to spend so much of their time in the House of Commons and could spend more time dealing with government and departmental business, he said.

German Rocket Scientists Working for U.A.R Live In Terror of Israel Agents

The writer of this dispatch, an AP correspondent in Israel, has visited both the United Arab Republic and Israel to report reactions to work on rockets by Germans citizens hired by U.A.R. President Nasser.

By CARL BUCHALLA

CAIRO (AP)—German rocket scientists working for the United Arab Republic live in terror of Israeli secret agents. Bodyguards accompany them. Their homes are protected. Their mail examined for explosives. Their addresses and phone numbers are secret.

Said their leader, Professor Wolfgang Pilz, a wartime colleague in Germany of Wernher Von Braun:

"We are not anti-Semites or anti Nazis. We are professionals doing a job. We would leave Egypt immediately if the Israelis would give us guarantees to abandon their hunt for us.'

The German rocket experts are caught up in a web of German - Jewish - Arab differences. For four years, they have helped U.A.R. President Nasser build rockets which he claims can hit Israel.

The Israelis demand that the West German government get Pilz and possibly the others to withdraw their assistance to Nasser. Bonn wants to be on good terms with both the U.A.R. and Israel. It says the Germans are private citizens and can work where they please, according to the German constitution.

NOT SAFE

"There is nowhere we can be safe now except here," Pilz told this correspondent on the terrace of the Heliopolis sporting club on Cairo's outskirts. Two tables away a bodyguard sipped.

Pilz recounted incidents which he attributed to the Israeli secret service.

In 1962, one of his assistants, Dr. Heinz Krug, disappeared in Munich while on a visit from Cairo. "I believe he was kidnapped and is dead," Pilz said. "Another assistant, Hans Kleinwaechter, escaped a pistol attack by two men while visiting his home in Lourrach, Germany, in 1962.

Late that same year, a letter addressed to Pilz containing an explosive injured his secretary, Mrs. Hannelore Wende, and in Switzerland a bomb in another package received at Nasser's rocket headquarters at Heliopolis, where Pilz and his assistants work, killed five Egyptian technicians and injured six.

The next year, an attempt was made in Switzerland to threaten the 10-year daughter of another assistant, Professor Paul Goercke, who since has returned to Germany.

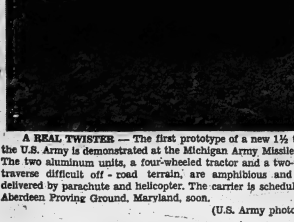
READY TO LEAVE

"I am still ready to leave and so are my colleagues," said Pilz, "but we cannot go until Israel fulfills three conditions.

"First, Israel must admit, on some sort of official level, its responsibility for past incidents and pay for damages, because this is necessary for the third step. This should include payment of a pension for the injuries sustained by my colleagues.

"Finally, an Israeli foreign ministry spokesman rejected this proposal, saying: 'Our discussion partner must be the Bonn government, not Professor Pilz.'"

The Israeli spokesman denied any knowledge that Israeli agents were behind the incidents reported by Pilz.



Pilz and his associates were described in October by Israeli premier Levi Eshkol as "rocket sciencelees and unscrupulous." The Israeli press has called them ex-convicts and anti-Semites.

WORKED WITH FRENCH

"Nonsense," said Pilz. "If one would take the effort to check my papers, one would see how baseless the contention is that I am an old Nazi. I worked for years in French rocket research stations alongside Israeli scientists and I have nothing against the Jews. I am merely a scientist and have nothing to do with politics."

Pilz said his group of German workers at Rocket Factory 333 comprises 18 men; three are experienced and the others young researchers.

He said a number of German rocket technicians have left Cairo for several months and have not been replaced, although Pilz says he has many applications from Germany.

A REAL TWISTER — The first prototype of a new 1½ ton cargo carrier for the U.S. Army is demonstrated at the Michigan Army Missile Plant near Detroit. The two aluminum units, a four-wheeled tractor and a two-wheeled carrier, can traverse difficult off - road terrain, are amphibious and light enough to be delivered by parachute and helicopter. The carrier is scheduled to begin tests at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, soon.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

If that ole crystal ball runs true to form Bobby Hull will have to yoke up a four-star team of his favorite Polled Herefords to lug the National Hockey League loot to his favorite bank.

The NHL rainbow, unlike the traditional heavenly arc with that pot o' gold dangling from its descending tip, has a midway break.

Golden manna from the hockey heaven showers down on the hockery and rennery-ing after the boys have gone through the blood-and-thunder calisthenics of the first thirty-five games.

In most cases this is a down payment on the total beans lost collected at schedule end.

The type-milke fraternity of the six National Hockey League centres vote in the first-half all-star squad. They repeat the ballot-boxing after the full schedule of 70 games is completed.

They add the points of the second half to those of the first, throw in the various trophy and award winners and the resulting wallet-bulging brings tears of joy to the toughest internal revenooer.

Bobby Hull, as of now, will collect $500 for having led the league at the end of the half. If he leads the lads at the end of the second chapter he will collect another $500 plus $1,000 and the Art Ross Trophy.

And supposing, kiddies, that Hull does win the Ross Trophy, he stands an excellent chance of taking the Hart Trophy awarded to the player judged the most valuable in the league.

Hull has never won the Hart pewterware but it looks like his moment is at hand. This trinket carries with it $250, plus $250 plus $1,000. Got your pencils ready? This would bring Bobby's bonanzas to $2,500.

Then there is the possibility of Marne Robert gathering in the Lady Byng Trophy. But don't bet on this. If he does he can add $250 plus $350 plus $1,000 which to this figuring brings his bonus collection to $5,000.

But don't go away. We are just inside the gate of the big lettuce patch.

The Point Anne blonde is a cinch, unless a miracle happens, to make the left-wing spot on the 1964-65 all-star squad.

A sweep of the voting here means $500 plus $500 plus $1,000 and you don't need a ready reckoner to figure his bonuses have now reached the $7,000 plateau.

Another down payment on additions to Bobby's herd of Polled Herefords will arrive if the Black Hawks win the NHL championship. He will, as will 17 team-mates, look for $3,250 in the family strong box. Bonuses to date $9,250.

Other bonus producers are the Stanley Cup semi-finals and finals.

If the Black Hawks kayo the opposition in the semi-finals Hull and Company will park $1,500 in the family nest. Triumph in the finals will bring another $3,000 and if my figures are right these make his bonus possibility the fine sum of $12,750.

Add this to the seasonal stipend paid him by the Black Hawks which I imagine is well over $1.25 an hour, Sundays included. This is estimated at $25,000.

Thus, it would seem, Bobby stands to park some $37,750 in the family cookie jar come season's end.

Than for extra spending money he has the proceeds from several endorsements. This comes from various sources but milk is milk no matter which cow produces it.

So taking into consideration the fact that his steady brilliance during the first half of the schedule ensures he will top the Ross and Hart scores, win the all-star left wing berth and stands a good chance to cop the Lady Byng, there is little danger of Robert seeking unemployment insurance come spring.

'Hot Dog' Is Top Hound

LONDON (AP)—The odds on Hi Joe, the missing British sporting dog, are 10-1 in the Greyhound Derby in June—win, lose or gone.

Bookies are quoting the 10-1 price on the dog, winner of his last six races and valued at about $15,000, even though Hi Joe disappeared — apparently the victim of dognappers—five days ago.

If nobody finds Hi Joe—and Scotland Yard hasn't had any luck so far—the bets are on, anyway.

Hi Joe is the top dog among the 42 entered in the Greyhound Derby, and if he shows up for the race, he is a steal at those odds.

Bruins Clobber Red Wings - And Howe

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins are at their best when they are at their worst.

It sounds strange, but there seems to be no other explanation for the inconsistent performances turned in by the National Hockey League doormats.

Playing without the services of five regulars, the Bruins dropped three one-sided decisions within the last week—something they're accustomed to doing even at full strength.

But the amazing Bruins have also stunned two contending teams during the same span with upset victories. They dropped Toronto Maple Leafs 3-0 last week and surprised Detroit Red Wings at Boston Thursday night with a 5-2 victory.

Bill Knibbs and Wayne Rivers, called up weeks ago under emergency conditions that have never subsided, sparked the Bruins during the first-period goals that guided Boston to its ninth win of the season in the only game played yesterday.

HOWE RUINS SHUTOUT

Murray Oliver and Ed Westfall, a defenceman from moving front because of the rash of injuries, counted in the second period and Howe, who has made the Bruins ahead 3-0 early in the finals. Two power - play goals by Gordie Howe ruined Ed Johnston's shutout bid.

The Boston triumph, which prevented the Detroit from moving into a second-place tie, saw Knibbs carried from the ice late in the game after Howe checked him into the boards.

Knibbs left on a stretcher and Howe, in the two-minute major, departing for the dressing room under a protective police guard and a shower of beer from irate Bruins fans.

All six teams swing into action Saturday night with New York visiting Montreal, Boston travelling to Toronto and Chicago playing host to Detroit. Toronto plays in New York Sunday night while Detroit meets the Black Hawks in Chicago.

A scheduled game between the Bruins and Canadiens at Boston Sunday night has been postponed to Feb. 11.

The Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit Red Wings bowed 5-2 to Boston Thursday night in the only National Hockey League game played, but Gordie Howe scored both goals to move into sixth place in the scoring race.

The two markers, both on power plays in the third period, were Howe's 10th and 11th this season. The two points gave the veteran right winger a firm grip on the sixth spot.

There were no other changes in the Big Seven.

The leaders:

BOSTON (AP)—Few Boston crowds have been so scorned since the Tea Party. The villain Thursday night was Detroit Red Wing Gordie Howe who:

Scored two third period goals and spoiled a shutout for Boston goalie Ed Johnston!

GORDIE HOWE

Knocked rookie Bill Knibbs flat with a booming check which brought him a major penalty for boarding—not a near - riotous reception, a police escort and an impromptu freefall of liquid that wasn't tea.

After all the turmoil Boston won anyway, 5-2.

The principals shrugged off the affair, but fans were incensed enough to earn Howe a police - car drive from Boston Garden so that he didn't want the protection.

FELL HEAVILY

Knibbs, whose goal at 1:06 of the opening period got things going, fell heavily and in obvious pain when checked into the boards five minutes before the finish. He appeared is have suffered a head injury as teammates helped him to the dressing room.

Later he was found sitting with an ice bag on a badly bruised right knee.

"I kind of knew he was coming," Knibbs said. "But I never thought I'd get hit that hard. My head snapped back. I thought I had wrenched my back.

"I got my hands up to protect my head. But I got the knee jammed into the boards. I got hit just as I shot the puck into the Detroit end."

WILL RECOVER

"He should be all right to play Saturday," said Boston coach Milt Schmidt. "Howe," he added with a shrug, "just doesn't realize how strong he is.

"If we get any more injuries I guess I'll have to get back in there and play."

"I didn't think I hit the kid that hard," said Howe. "I can hit 10 guys a night like that and they wouldn't get hurt.

"He must have had his feet tangled up."

I knew he wasn't badly hurt. I could see he had his head protected."

'Best Team In Canada' Mixed-Up Seniors Defeat Czechs

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Twenty Ontario senior dispersed today after playing together for the first time and being hailed by the coach of the defeated Czech national team as second only to the world champion Russians in amateur hockey.

"They're the best team we've played outside of the Russians," was the assessment of coach Vladimir Bouček after the Czechs took a 5-3 beating from the improvised club.

"I wish we could play the Russians now," said Ted Power, coach of Woodstock Athletics of the Ontario Hockey Association senior series, who handled the winners.

Boucek's ranking tacitly downgrades the Canadian national team, which has a win, a loss and a tie against the Czechs on their exhibition North American tour and plays them again in Toronto Sunday before their championship meeting in the world tournament at Tampere, Finland, next January.

Power volunteered to reassemble his All-Stars, most of them veterans and a few with professional experience, to give the Canadian team a game if it can be worked into its schedule.

A hockey goal by Rick Hay of Guelph Regals, his second of the night, broke a 3-3 tie for the All-Stars early in the third period. Joe Hogan of Galt Hornets scored an insurance goal with less than four minutes remaining.

ADD TO TALLY

Wayne Millar of Welland Blacks and Earl Balfour of Galt Hornets were the other Canadian scorers. Vaclav Pantuchek, Frantisek Sevcik and Miroslav Vlach were the Czech marksmen.

Nedomansky, 21, the rookie centre New York Rangers of the National League have put on their negotiation list, put the Czechs in front early in the first period but the Canadians never trailed again after Millar tied the score at the 10-minute mark while killing a penalty.

Would Nedomansky go to the NHL?

"Czechoslovakian players are not for sale," said Vladimir Kostka, manager of the team.

"America is a foreign country to him. . . . He would not be at home. . . . He goes to university in Czechoslovakia.

"It is the highest honor for Czechoslovakian to play in a national team as he is now. . . . It is like the NHL in your country.

"But money isn't our hockey players' goal. . . . They prefer to live at home."

The Czechs held a 38-31 margin in shots on goal. The Canadians took seven of the game's 10 penalties but neither side capitalized on its power play.

Juniors Meet Trenton

Belleville "B's" left town in first place almost a month ago.

They return to the friendly confines of Memorial Arena tonight for the first time since December 11 - - looking up at the red-hot Gananoque Islanders.

Trenton Apple Kings will supply the "B's" opposition in tonight's regular scheduled OHA Eastern Junior puck battle. It starts at nine o'clock.

Tonight's game should supply some sort of answer as to whether or not or action is best for junior players. This will be Trenton's third game this week while the "B's" have not seen action since Sunday, December 27, when they lost in Gananoque.

The Islanders have chalked up three consecutive wins since then and hold top spot with eight wins, four losses and a tie, third in the league.

Belleville, in the runner-up spot, has seven victories and four losses to its credit. The "B's" next two games after tonight are against Peterborough, Wednesday, January 13 and Lindsay, Friday, January 15.

The Apple Kings, getting fine scoring efforts from Lea Genereaux, Rick O'Donnell, Dave Johnson and Ron Quigley so far this season, will provide the locals a tough battle here. They have split earlier wins with the "B's".

Playoffs are not too far away now and junior hockey should be at its best from here on out.

Petes Defeat Marlies 4-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Marlboros and St. Catharines Black Hawks failed to improve their positions in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A race Thursday night.

Toronto, now tied with Niagara Falls Flyers at 43 points in first place, bowed 4-2 to the advancing, third-place Peterborough Petes in a rough game in Peterborough. The Petes now have 39 points and a game in hand with two games in hand over the Flyers and three over Toronto.

In another rugged contest, St. Catharines dropped to within one point of the league cellar as last-place Hamilton Red Wings broke a 2-2 tie with three goals in 26 seconds to defeat the Hawks 7-4 in Hamilton.

Leo Thiffault hit twice for Peterborough while Mickey Redmond and Drake Jopling added one goal each. Paul Laurent, first place Petes' tryout with Victoria - Maple Leafs of the Western Hockey League, scored both Toronto goals.

Marlboros drew 12 of 19 penalties in the scrappy game. Steve Hunt of Peterborough and Ray Winterstein of the Marlboros got fighting majors in the first period and Mike Corrigan of Toronto and George Godson took five minutes each after a second period battle.

Predrick Speck and Peter Lovelace paced Hamilton with two goals apiece. Pete Vervaeart, Don Glassbrenck and Nick Libett netted the others. Mickey Charweuty and Brian McDonald scored a pair each for St. Catharines.

Hamilton captain Jimmy Fedorko drew a minor and a misconduct for accepting a stick from a teammate in the penalty box while the Hawks' Doug Reid and Bill Carson and Hamilton's Speck and Peter Mahovlich drew seven minutes each in two separate fights.

Gilmer Lions Coach

DETROIT (AP)—Harry Gilmer, former Detroit Lions quarterback and Minnesota Vikings assistant coach, was named head coach of the National Football League's Lions Thursday. He succeeds George Wilson, who quit recently.

Owner William Clay Ford of the Lions said Gilmer had accepted a three-year contract. Terms were not disclosed.

The hiring of Gilmer followed the mid-December firings of Wilson's five assistant coaches and Wilson's later resignation.

Gilmer, 38, a quarterback for the Lions in 1955 and 1956, had been top aide to coach Norm Van Brocklin at Minnesota.

Gilmer was a record-setting passing star of the 1940s for Alabama's Crimson Tide and a bowl games hero. He played in the NFL with Washington, Detroit and Pittsburgh before joining the Vikings as Van Brocklin's aide.

World Curling Champs Eliminated

Edmonton Tops

By IAN MacLAINE

TORONTO (CP) — Missing from the tournament of champions as the bonspiel hits the playoff stage today is the' big-gest champion of them all.

Doug Cameron's Charlotte-town foursome edged Lyall Dagg's Vancouver rink 7-6 in a pressure-packed seventh round Thursday night, knocking the 1964 world and Canadian title-holders out of the round-robin competition.

It was a must situation for both entries. A loss to Dagg would have dropped Cameron from the playoff round. Although he and Dagg would-have boasted identical records, the British Columbia rink enjoyed a better points-for-and-against average.

Alberta's Hec Gervais and Hersh Lerner of Winnipeg finished the tournament with 6-1 records but Gervais's 47-point-ten quartet was given top place because of its better points record.

Ernie Richardson of Regina and Gaetan Boucher ended with 5-2 records but the Saskatchewan rink took third place on its better points record.

Dagg finished fifth with 3-4, Murray Roberts' Unionville, Ont., rink sixth with 2-5, the only Canadian high school rink from Kirkland Lake, skipped by Bob Ash, was seventh at 1-6, and Bob Magjie's United States championship rink from Duluth, Minn., finished with an 0-7 record.

SEEK TOP PRIZE

In afternoon semi-final play, Gervais meets third-place Richardson while Lerner and Cameron clash. The winners play tonight for first-place spoils of $3,000 in merchandise.

The runner-up shares $2,500 in prizes while the two teams ousted in the semi-final round meet in playoff and fourth places for $1,000 and $600 respectively.

Gervais whipped Magie's winless rink 14-3 in other seventh-round action this afternoon while 11-5 over Ash's Northern Ontario entry and Lerner downed Roberts 10-4.

In the afternoon round, Lerner edged Cameron 12-10 in a 12-end match, Richardson enjoyed a 10-3 decision to Dagg, Gervais took Ash 9-5 and Richardson won 12-4 over Magjie.

Dagg highlighted morning action with a 25-1 win over Magjie. Gervais walloped Cameron 12-2, Richardson edged Roberts 8-7 and Lerner trounced Ash 11-4.

Veteran tournament observers couldn't recall when such a score as the Dagg-Magjie match had been registered, in either Canadian championship play or international play.

POINTS A FACTOR

Dagg admitted after the game he wasn't particularly happy about the outcome but since points might have meant the difference in a rink reaching the playoffs, he was prepared to see the score mount.

In this evening game with Cameron, Dagg's foursome held the Prince Edward Island rink off all but two ends.

But Cameron's counts were big—four in the fifth and three in the seventh. Dagg could only muster two in the first and single counts in the sixth, eighth, ninth and 10th. The rinks blanked the second, third and fourth ends.

Aside from the Dagg-Cameron tussle, most of the interest centred on the Northern Ontario-Saskatchewan tilt where Ash's teen-age rink continued to draw plaudits for its efforts—particularly against the four- time world and Canadian champion Richardson rink.

The Richardson entry was pressed in the early ends but managed to count four in the seventh and added three in the eighth to put the contest out of the high school club's reach.

Cameron entered Thursday's play with a four-game-winning streak. But once-defeated Alberta snapped that string with a 12-1 win in a game that was closely contested until the eighth end when Gervais came through with a three-ender.

Cameron had to gamble from that point on and missed the big ones as Gervais added a single in the ninth and finished up with five more in the 10th when both Cameron's stones went through the house in his efforts to draw to the button.

In another tight tussle during the morning, Ontario's entry was virtually eliminated from the playoffs when it lost a squeaker to Richardson's crew.

They were engaged in a 5-5 deadlock after six ends but Richardson moved into a commanding lead with single counts in the next three ends.

The Roberts foursome made a valiant bid in the 10th but could count only two.

Going into the game, the two rinks held 5-2 records. Richardson went on to finish up with four straight wins to enter the playoffs while Roberts finished the round-robin well down in the standings with a 2-5 record, losing his last five games.

WANTS BOBSLED SITE

MONTREAL (CP) — Victor Emery, captain of the Olympic and world bobsled championship team, Thursday proposed establishment of a bobsled track, 90-metre ski jump and sports centre on Mount Royal to the City of Montreal. Mayor Jean Drapeau directed the Montreal parks department to undertake a detailed examination of the proposal and report its findings.

'Plain Nonsense' Says Campbell

Unscared Lindsay Challenged Authority

BOSTON (AP)—Ted Lindsay, who was a prime mover in the formation of a players' association, is still in National Hockey League hot water. But Detroit Coach Sid Abel is tickled about his comeback.

Lindsay says he gained his reinstatement after a two-hour suspension under protest. He says he'll make an appeal that will be taken up by the league board of governors.

Lindsay drew $75 worth of automatic fines for 10-minute and-game misconduct penalties last Saturday. He refused to pay. NHL president Clarence Campbell suspended him until he paid, retracted his statements, acknowledged NHL authority and integrity and apologized.

"The only important thing in the Lindsay case is that he challenged the authority of the league," Campbell said Thursday night.

"There is a rule in the bylaws which says you can't participate in public criticism of the league officials. He (Lindsay) also written into each player's contract.

"This is the first time I know of a challenge to the league authority which has been so emphatically made.

'PLAIN NONSENSE'

"Here's a case of a man who repudiates the authority of the league and on the other hand makes an appeal on the basis of the same authority. That's just plain nonsense."

Campbell was asked what assurance the player has of fair treatment from the league.

"None," Campbell replied, "except the reasonableness and integrity of the man who makes the decision."

Meanwhile, Lindsay at the age of 30 has "amazed me," says coach Abel of the veteran winger making a return to the NHL after a four-year retirement.

"He skates as well as ever, maybe a step or two slower," Abel said. "I just hope he keeps going. I hope he scores 20 goals.

"He skates end-to-end rushes as well as anyone. It's hard to believe a man can play this game at his age now when the game is all speed and hustle. We put a bonus in his contract last two or three weeks ago.

"He has nine goals already. "The big thing is the way he has helped tremendously because of the effect he's had on the kids. He has worked with two different sets of young forwards. One centre has more goals than ever in his career and Lindsay is responsible for it."

Moira SS Outhoops Brighton HS

By BARRY CAMPBELL, DAVID BRAMMER

All three Moira basketball teams journeyed to Brighton last night and came up with a clean sweep.

In the senior game Moira opened up a ten-point lead at end of the first quarter in a game that started out as a good defensive battle. However Moira dominated the second quarter and built up a 37-18 lead at the half. In the third quarter Moira completely controlled play and at one point led by twenty-seven points. However in the last quarter the play was fairly even with the final score being Moira 62, Brighton 38.

Carmen Milligan netted 16 points for Moira. Other scorers for Moira were Bob Lecki and Rick Graham with 11 points and George Tych with 9.

In the junior game the first half was fairly closely played with Moira leading all the way but not able to build up a significant lead. However in the second half Moira quickly established a twelve-point lead and hung on for the rest of the game to score the final score 54-37 for Moira. Robert Watson carried the juniors to victory with 21 points. Also acting for Moira were Dave McLean with 11 points and Dave Beresford with 6.

In the bantam game Moira dominated the game considerably with Brighton trying desperately. But the bantam Trojans held and won the game 55-44. High scorer for Moira was Ted Beresford with 18 points. Other scorers for Moira were Bruce Larue with 11 points, David Loder with 6 and Richard Moffatt with 4.

Scottish Curlers Defeated

VANCOUVER (CP)—A group of 24 touring Scots opened competition for the Strathcona Cup here Thursday with six resounding losses at the hands of British Columbia curlers.

It was the first of 30 cup matches the Scots will play across the country. Aggregate scores in the first match was 88-45.

British Soccer

Little Clubs Eye First Division Giants

LONDON (Reuters) — The magic of the Football Association Cup puts a sparkle on the drab English winter scene Saturday when the giants of the English League's first and second divisions clash with the the survivors of earlier rounds in the third round of the competition.

For the little clubs, amateurs and third and fourth division sides, there is the hope of reaching the final at Wembley Stadium next May.

They must first battle for a hacky draw bringing them up against a famous first - division side and the dread spectre of a giant - killing performance to bring them a fleeing moment of fame.

The draw has given a number of them just the chance they might have for.

Arsenal, a world name in soccer, and a proud first division club, must leave palatial Highbury and travel north to Darlington, where fourth-division amateurs usually draw crowds of 3,000.

COST ONLY £9,000

But Saturday's 23,000 spectators will cram into the tiny Feethams Ground to see whether a team that cost only £3,000 ($9,000) to muster can topple mighty Arsenal, whose three defenders, Don Howe, Frank McLintock and Ian Ure alone cost a total of £185,000.

Tottenham Hotspur takes trip to the seaside, visiting the west country holiday resort of Torquay in another fourth versus first- division clash. Spurs have not won an F.A. Cup match since they captured the trophy for the second consecutive season in 1962.

Preston North End, beaten finalists last year, returns to London to meet Barnet, the only amateur club left in the competition. Home - team supporters hope Barnet's sloping ground will help level the odds in its favor.

Manchester United, currently 13-2 favorites to win the title and also strongly tipped for the first-division championship, entertain fourth-division Chester, whose only consolation is likely to be its share of the gate from an anticipated crowd of 50,000.

The closest match of the day may be on Merseyside, where Everton meets Sheffield Wednesday for only the third time since the Second World War. Wednesday won the two previous clashes but they were both in sheffield this time it may be Everton's turn.

SELECT SCHOOLBOY

Plymouth Argyle's selection of six-foot, 12-stone schoolboy Reynolds for its game with Derby County reads like a fairytale dream. Richard is only 16 and has never played in first class or competitive football.

Chelsea, currently second in the first division, should outpaper beat Northampton Town. But the Midlanders, challenging strongly for promotion from the second division, have lost only one of their last 21 league games.

West Ham: the cup holder, entertain Birmingham City, a fourth from the bottom of the first division. But Birming-

The Faloney Story

Now It Can Be Told

EDMONTON (CP)—A prem- and Prince Hal Patterson. But ing newspaper deadline was a factor in the undoing of a 1960 football trade involving Bernie Faloney and Sam Etcheverry, two of Canada's top quarterbacks, says Edson Hewitt of the Montreal Journal.

Hewitt, now The Journal's legislative reporter but in 1960 a sports writer with the Hamilton Spectator, told of details behind the scenes that resulted in Etcheverry being sent to the Alouettes.

Etcheverry's departure left the Eastern Football Conference Alouettes without a seasoned quarterback until a trade this week finally brought Faloney into the Alouettes camp from Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"Faloney might have joined the Als in 1960 if it hadn't been for me and my big, fat typewriter," Hewitt said Thursday in a hyrised story.

Hewitt writes:

"Jake Gaudaur, general-manager of Tiger-Cats, phoned and told me to meet him at Malton Airport for a trip to Montreal.

"When we were finally settled on the plane, Jake told me the story. He was trading Bernie Faloney and lineman Don Fellbaum for the fabulous pair of Sam (The Rifle) Etcheverry it wasn't that easy. Jake thought he had it all sewed up and then Etcheverry walked out on the Alouettes, Hamilton reported Faloney but traded Paquette for Patterson.

"It was terribly hush, hush.

"Ted Workman, Alouette owner, was not to know that Jake brought me along. The deal wasn't signed or sealed. But . . . I cheated . . . just a bit. I phoned the boys and told him what was in the wind and how sure I was the deal would go through.

"That night, special pages were made up. Profiles of all the players were written.

Space was reserved on page one."

But Gaudaur and Workman didn't complete the trade that night and negotiations were set to resume the next morning, Howitt writes.

"My deadline was 9:30 a.m. At 9:15 there was only one thing left, Ted and Jake had talked on the phone since 8:30. Ted insisted that Etcheverry must be notified personally and he was out of town.

"I whispered to Jake: 'No. It's gotta break now.'

"Jake insisted that the trade be completed. Ted . . . agreed. Jake hung up and I grabbed the phone and called the Spectator."

When Etcheverry walked out on the Alouettes, Hamilton reham's position belies its recent rejuvenated form. The teams met twice at Christmas, each winning at home. Birmingham's boss at West Ham was its only defeat in its last seven league games.

No Regrets Says Champion

EDMONTON (CP)—Her first career as a record - packed career remains one of the fondest memories for Canada's former Canadian speedskating champion, who retired Thursday after a quarter - century of active competition.

Mrs. Ryan, 33, and mother of three, said:

"I have no regrets. Being a speedskater gave me many thrills and enabled me to see the world.

"I really didn't skate seriously until 1954, the year I won my first Canadian title in the junior girls' mass start. I was 13 at the time."

point in her career held every Canadian women's speedskating record.

She now is an 'instructor with the city parks and recreation department here and will instruct speedskating classes at various community centres.

Last year, prior to the Olympics, Mrs. Ryan set international records for Canada in the 500, 1,500 and 3,000-metre distances at a meet in Davos, Switzerland.

Currently she holds Canadian marks for all metres, the 220 and 440-yard sprints and the half, three-quarter, one-mile and two-mile runs.

Her best showing in the Olympics was a ninth - place finish in the 1,500 metres. She met twice at Christmas, each winning at home. Birmingham's boss at West Ham was its only defeat in its last seven league games.

Manitoba Bids to Save Declining White-Tails

By IRA DRYSDALE

WINNIPE G(CP)—In bush on the fringe of the Prairies a hunter tramped two days, halfway to his knees in snow and chilled to the bone by the cold.

He saw two deer. A fat doe and a fawn loped along broadside to him about 25 yards away. It was an easy shot, but he turned the rifle aside.

He is part of the cost of a conservation measure aimed at giving the white-tails a chance to recoup in southern Manitoba.

Provincial game regulations for the two-week November deer season prohibited killing does, fawns or spikehorn (yearling) bucks in an area roughly south of an east - west line through Dauphin. It takes in most of the province's deer-hunting territory.

The season for bucks only—that is, bucks with branched or forked horns—did mean some illegal deer were shot.

And there were some objections to the restriction. But, says game administrator Joe Robertson, most sportsmen accepted the argument that this was one way to increase the herd, and that it was better than prohibiting hunting altogether.

Robertson adds that illegal killing of doe and fawn didn't appear to be serious and the restriction was only one winter "with more does and more fawns than we would under an any-deer season."

PROMISES MORE CURBS

Robertson says hunters might well have themselves for more such control regulations. As population and hunting increases, pressure to conserve wildlife would undoubtedly also increase.

For many years buck-only seasons were the rule in Manitoba, but from 1951 to 1964 any deer was legal game throughout most of the southern part of the province. Now the herd has dwindled.

"We have reached the point where the number of animals is not up to the carrying capacity of the range over large areas," says Rosamunde Marlatt, chief game biologist, writes in Wildlife Crusader, monthly magazine of the Manitoba Federation of Game and Fish Associations.

"In recent years this measures as late seasons and short seasons have been tried but they did not produce a sufficient increase in size of basic herds.

"The deer season, of course, could be closed and this may have to be done in the years ahead, but we believe some form of deer hunting should be provided every year if at all possible.

"After all, a man's quota of prime deer hanging years in small enough without removing some of them by regulations which are unnecessarily restrictive."

Newfie Banks on Herring To Make Up Poor Year

By JAMES R. HUSSEY
Canadian Press Correspondent

HARBOR BUFFETT, Nfld. (CP)—Hundreds of Newfoundland fishermen are looking to the skies these days for a sign of herring. Flocks of seagulls wheeling in the sky off south coast fishing settlements are taken as an indication of herring in the sea.

This year the winter employment and fish industry provides is of particular interest to the fishermen of Placentia Bay for they are counting on it since They hope to make up not only for last winter's blank but for the scrubby poor cod fishery of the last spring and summer.

This branch of the industry represents the fishermen's one chance of breaking even or of actually making a profitable voyage, providing the already-thin fish arrive in sufficient numbers.

This happened only two seasons ago when some Placentia Bay fishermen made as high as $4,000 single-handed from herring alone. The season usually lasts from mid-December to March.

Although the importance of the herring fishery to the economy of Placentia Bay has diminished somewhat in recent years, it is still of vital importance to many fishermen. The processing firm of W. W. Wareham and Sons and Harbor Buffett and other Placentia Bay packers and exporters also hope the bay will yield a good catch this season as there is a fairly strong market for the fish in the Caribbean and elsewhere.

AIM AT REVIVAL

Meanwhile, in Fortune Bay, where herring disappeared for a number of years an attempt is being made to revive the fishery.

British Columbia Packers Limited, which operates a fresh fish processing plant at Harbor Breton, has based a special herring seine boat there to seek out the offshore shoals of the valuable fish.

The new herring boat Lavalle, 100 feet long and 31 tons, uses a nylon herring seine to catch the fish. The seine, 300 fathoms long and 50 fathoms deep, is towed by two smaller boats operating from the mother ship. The herring are transferred to the mother ship by means of a vacuum and pump. They are converted into meal and oil at processing plants.

The Lavalle, which was brought to Harbor Breton from Vancouver, a distance of 7,500 miles via the Panama Canal, has already proven her worth in Newfoundland waters. Experimental trips the vessel has brought back as high as 100 tons of herring at a single haul.

Herring has long been an important fish in Newfoundland-era. American fishermen once bought them to be used as bait for catching codfish and the harvesting and sale of the bait

Jean Arthur Again Working After Absence of 11 Years

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Nothing much has changed about Jean Arthur. She still has the same blonde beauty, the same smoky voice. And she's still skittish about publicity.

The great star of sophisticated comedies of the 1930s and 1940s is back before the cameras after an 11-year absence. Her last appearance was in the western movie Shane, and her return finds her out west again in television's Gunsmoke.

Miss Arthur appeared for her first scenes wearing blue jeans that displayed her trim figure to advantage. The record books show her to be 56, but that is hard to believe.

Between takes she huddled with the director or scampered to her dressing room. But a reporter stopped her, and welcomed her back to town.

"Thank you, but you're breaking the rules in talking to me," she said, half in jest. "Don't you know that CBS is giving a press conference or reception next week? And all of the fellows talk to me, only four people will show up at the party and we'll be stuck with all that food and booze."

PAUSES TO REFLECT

But she paused for a moment to reflect on the experience of working in television.

"They shoot so fast, she remarked. "Goodness, we're far from one scene to another. I think its wonderful. I enjoy doing it and getting on to the next scene."

I mentioned that it wasn't like working with George Stevens, who has been known to shoot 23 takes of one scene. "Yes, but he's so wonderful," she replied, and she inquired about his new film, The Greatest Story Ever Told.

She was happy to hear there were good reports about it, but added: "Gee, I wish he hadn't make some comedies again. He made such good ones." Among them were Talk of the Town and The More the Merrier, in which Miss Arthur starred.

"WHERE LOVE HAS GONE" Tessee Drama from "The Carpetbaggers" Author, Harold Robbins.

Noted author Harold Robbins, who wrote the best-seller "The Carpetbaggers," has created another sensational success with his equally controversial novel, "Where Love Has Gone," which has been adapted to the screen by John Michael Hayes for a Joseph E. Levine-Paramount co-production.

Co-starring two brilliant Academy Award winning actresses, Susan Hayward and Bette Davis, "Where Love Has Gone" opens yesterday at the Belle Theatre.

A stirring drama, equally explosive as its predecessor, "The Carpetbagger," the theme of "Where Love Has Gone" is likewise designed to create considerable stir for it deals with a teenager's murder of her mother's paramour, as well as the sordid details which trigger the act of violence; the result of being the daughter of such a couple and the ensuing complications which result from the machinations of a domineering mother-in-law.

A Paramount release, "Where Love Has Gone," includes in its brilliant cast, Joey Heatherton, as the confused teenager, Michael Connors, portraying her father, a World War II hero and Congressional Medal of Honor winner, as well as co-stars Susan Hayward, the gay divorcee, going from one male conquest to another, and Bette Davis in the role of her social register mother, who rules with an iron will.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Most buyers assume that if something should go wrong and they are unable to make settlement, the fault of their liability is their deposit.

This is not always true, it deepens upon the agreement of sale. Our correspondent, to his sorrow, is now aware of this.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am trapped and need your advice. Two months ago I signed an agreement of sale. I paid a $1,000 deposit on an $18,000 house. Settlement was set for 60 days.

Last month I had a misunderstanding with my boss. I resigned, and accepted another job in a distant city. When I told this to my agent, he informed me that the seller not only refused to return my deposit but insisted that I pay the balance of $17,000 or he would institute legal action.

Needless to say, I am angry over losing the $1,000 deposit but I am furious over the idea that I may be trapped for the balance of the purchase price one kidding me or is the agent right? — Mr. H. W.

ANSWER: You are trapped! There is little help I can give you. Your unfortunate situation may be an object lesson for others.

In many, if not most, agreement of sale there is a clause which in effect states, "should the purchaser default or fail to make settlement, the sum or sums paid on account of the purchase price may either be retained by the seller as liquidated damages or on account of the purchase price, as the seller may elect."

Translated into simple language it means that the seller can decide whether he will surrender the deposit and call the deal off or force you to pay the balance of the funds due and take the house.

The best advice I can give you is to engage a competent realtor and hope he can resell the house quickly without any loss.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I must have picked a comedian for a real estate broker and want to get rid of him. We listed our house for $25,000. The next day he ran a big display ad in our local newspaper reading "This House Is Not Worth $25,000 But Is A Terrific Buy at $22,000."

You never saw such a crowd of people tramping through the house but, of course, nobody offered us $25,000 after that ad. Would you deal with such a screwball? — Mr. W. C.

ANSWER: Not only would I deal with that kind of "screwball," but when I get the house I hope I am fortunate to choose a broker with as much imagination. The large crowd that responded to the advertisement is proof of his genius.

You are protected, for your listing agreement specifies $25,000. You are not obligated to accept a lower price. However, having a greater knowledge of market values, the broker's estimate of $22,000 is probably correct. Your broker is a "g e m" — I would join him, not fight him.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: When getting ready to sell a house, is it advisable to improve it. Our house is in good condition but parts of it are old-fashioned. Would we make out better financially spending money for a new bath, kitchen, breaking through partitions, etc., or offer it in the market as a well-lived in house 40 years old. — Mrs. M. R.

ANSWER: Some of my colleagues in the home improvement field may disagree, but it has been my experience you will end up with a much greater net sum if you put your house on the market without making the improvements.

Two market factors are responsible. Your concept of an improvement may be considered a detriment by many potential buyers. In addition, save in rare cases, an owner does not get back dollar for dollar money spent in improvements above the basic structure.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am planning to completely redecorate my home and install the exterior. Each paint salesman naturally boosts his own brand. I am now really confused. Is there any unbiased source from which I can get information. — Mrs. F. E. C.

L. E. C.

ANSWER: The National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association, Inc., 1500 Rhode Island Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C., publishes a wide variety of free literature about choosing and using paint for almost any kind of exterior and interior surface.

When writing for information you can specify your particular problem or can ask for pamphlets relating to your problem. This service is free.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with writers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Opposition Parties in India Mount Drive to Remove Relics of British Colonialism

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — Opposition political parties in India have mounted a bitter campaign to have removed all "relics of British colonialism."

The relics consist of statues of British monarchs and viceroys, cenotaphs commemorating the valor of British soldiers during the military conquest of India and paintings scorning the walls of government buildings in many Indian provincial capitals.

Spearheading the campaign is the anti-Commonwealth United Socialist Party. It has also the support of the Communist party and the right-wing Jana Sangh, a Hindu party.

United Socialist Leader Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia said recently: "It must be our sacred aim to eliminate all vestiges of British rule. It is a shame that such vestiges should still be tolerated 17 years after the British left the country."

The anti-British campaigners are also successfully exploiting regional cultural feelings.

They have just persuaded the provincial government in Mysore state to demolish a mock taph erected 173 years ago to celebrate the heroism of a British colonel and his men during the siege of Bangalore city.

REPLACE CENOTAPH

In place of the cenotaph the provincial auth orities have raised a statue of Kempe Gowda, a nobleman who founded Bangalore.

Socialists recently led a big demonstration in Delhi in front of the statue of Lord Irwin opposite Parliament House in which a former British viceroy, Lord Irwin ruled India at a time when Indo British feelings were particularly bitter and a great Indian nationalist, Sardar Bhagat Singh, was executed for nationalist activities.

The demonstrators attacked the Irwin statue with crowbars and stones and blackened it with tar. The Indian government now has carried away the statue to "safe custody" in a corner of the exhibition grounds in the capital.

Following sustained Socialist and Communist agitation, the Bombay municipal corporation has decided to remove to the local museum the statue of Queen Victoria in the city's business district. For many years the statue has remained with a chopped off nose—the act of a nationalist extremist in the last days of British rule.

The statue of King George V opposite the Gateway of India in Bombay has been removed and in its place the provincial government has erected a huge equestrian statue of Shivaji Maharaj, a Hindu warrior who fought the pre-British Muslim emperors of India.

Many influential Indians including leaders of the ruling Congress Party and newspaper columnists feel that the Socialist campaign against British relics is degenerating into "reckless vandalism," as the Times of India put it.

DIPLOMATIC REVIVAL

Sri Prakasa, a former governor of Bombay and a leader of the ruling party, has described the removal of the King George V statue from Bombay's Gateway of India as "not only thoughtless but sacrilegious."

Under pressure from men such as Prakasa, the Indian government has decided that statues of former British men and women will be removed from their present locations.

An angry reader writes in the Times of India: "This is all shocking . . . Do these dumb statues frighten us so much? Have we become such a frail and still a member of the Commonwealth? We must try to strong then sacrifice with Britain and not weaken them."

But, says Dr. Lohia, "This concern for things British betrays a sick mentality. So long as British statues dominate our cities we cannot call ourselves free men."

Architect of a Nation Born 150 Years Ago

It's the Anniversary of John A.

This year marks the 150th anniversary of the birth of Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister. The political career of the Old Chieftain is traced in this article by a Canadian Press reporter.

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—One hundred years ago, when John A. Macdonald was approaching the height of his achievement, he was also nearing the depths of concern over the founding of the new federal state—Canada.

In his 50th year, at convivial conferences in Charlottetown and at hard bargaining sessions in Quebec, he had hammered out the framework of a new nation.

In his 51st year, some of the parts of the new country started to fall off before the cement was set.

But despite the difficulties his place in history was assured. For in his lifetime, and on the foundation he had been instrumental in building, the young state was to spread over half a continent.

The birth 150 years ago of Canada's chief architect and first prime minister is to be celebrated on the 11 in Kingston, Ont., at a combined civic and state banquet.

It will bring together today's leaders of the diverse political and racial elements of Canada to honor the man who brought their predecessors together in Confederation in 1867.

FORCEFUL MOTHER

John A. Macdonald was born in Glasgow, Jan. 11, 1815, of a family of Sutherlandshire crofters thrown off the land by the Highland clearances. When the boy was five the family emigrated. Arriving by ship at Montreal, they took three weeks to make the trip of less than 200 miles to Kingston, such were the conditions of Canada in 1820.

They settled in what was already a thriving community, at times the capital of the colony, comparatively rich for the day in cultural activities.

Macdonald's father became a non-too-prosperous merchant, failing in a number of enterprises. His mother was a forceful woman and, as has been the case with a number of Canadian political leaders—notably, W. L. Mackenzie King—the centre of family ambition as well as affection.

The young Macdonald's schooling was meagre, not beyond fifth grade. But he became an omnivorous reader of history and biography. He apprenticed in law, and established a practice in Kingston where he also made his first foray into politics as an alderman.

Other influences moulded the boy and the young man for his career as young politician, old party chieftain and statesman of Canada — doing family chores, roughhousing in the street, counselling clients among pioneer farmers, and, as an alderman, involving himself in the life of Kingston.

STRONG BRITISH TIES

The war of 1812-14 with the United States was still vividly remembered. Kingston was principally a transportation hub for Canadians moving east and west, and a garrison town. The British tie was a real thing, and the British way of life—including its way of government—something to be copied in North America.

The Upper Canada Rebellion of 1837, led by William Lyon Mackenzie against the Family Compact government of the day, occurred when Macdonald was 22. He took up a rifle and trained with the Kingston garrison. There was more to him than the gay young man-about-town, already too familiar with saloon life.

Seven years after the rebellion he was first elected to the legislature for the city of Kingston, and three years later taken into the cabinet as receiver-general. The rebellion had repercussions on his political life.

While in Opposition between 1848 and 1854, Macdonald strengthened his advocacy of the British tie, which was crystalized in his last election campaign nearly 50 years later with the words "A British subject I was born: a British subject I will die."

UNION WAS WEAK

In his first election campaign he set the theme for his fundamental political belief: "The prosperity of Canada depends on its permanent connection with the mother country, and . . . I shall resist to the utmost any attempt from whatever quarter it may come which may tend to weaken that union."

Back in office in 1854, as attorney - general for Canada West, Macdonald was the leader of conservative forces in what now is Ontario. When the veteran leader of conservative forces in what today is Quebec, Col. E. P. Taché, retired in 1857 Macdonald became what in fact was prime minister of the united Canadas though his official office continued to be that of attorney - general Canada West.

The 1840 union of Upper and Lower Canada wasn't working out. The need to carry a majority of MLAs from both, but unequal, halves of the country proved impractical both politically and in law.

In addition to seeing a succession of governments formed, defeated, re-formed and defeated again, Macdonald had bitter and deep-seated opposition in the loudest voice of the Reform movement, George Brown, publisher of the Toronto Globe.

The year 1864, the centennial of which has just closed, was the year of great concessions and change, and the year that saw the basis laid for what Canada is today.

BURIED RIVALRIES

Brown and Macdonald, through intermediaries, agreed to meet and to bury their rivalries in an attempt to overcome the stalemate in government processes. They also agreed to seek a wider union of all the British colonies in North America—Upper and Lower Canada with Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, though the latter colony was little thought of in the process.

Brown and Macdonald, and other delegates from Upper and Lower Canada, went to Charlottetown in September, 1864, to meet the leaders of the three Maritime provinces who had gathered reluctantly, to discuss a Maritime union.

With eloquent speeches, quantities of good food and a copious supply of wines and liquors, the Charlottetown conference decided to set aside the idea of Maritime union while exploring the wider union of all British North America. The conference adjourned to Quebec.

There, on Oct. 10, 1864, the fathers of Confederation met and agreed to the first of the 72 Quebec Resolutions "The best interests and present and future prosperity of British North America will be promoted by a Federal Union under the Crown of Great Britain provided such a union can be effected on principles just to the several Provinces."

P.E.I. STAYED OUT

In that resolution, with its important proviso, the bargain was sealed. But it soon became unstuck in several of its parts. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick voted themselves out, and back in again. Prince Edward Island stayed out until 1873, Newfoundland did not throw in its lot until 1949.

Adoption of the Quebec Resolutions is regarded by historians as the high-water mark in Macdonald's life and achievements. Prof. Donald Creighton, author of a two-volume biography of Macdonald, has said that among all the politicians and statesmen of that day, Macdonald alone could have got that resolution through the conference.

When the Quebec Resolutions were written into the British North America Act in London in 1866, and enacted by the British Parliament in 1867, Macdonald became prime minister of the new Dominion of Canada—a Dominion which he wanted to call a kingdom.

Putting together a country as well as a government was a long process in which Dominion Day, July 1, 1867, was merely a ceremonial occasion.

Macdonald's private correspondence with governors-general, some of which only now, nearly 100 years later, is becoming public, tells of his concerns with Canadian independence and British imperialism, the threat of American domination, the Fenian raids, the risings of the Metis under Louis Riel in the Red River country, and political problems in every part of the new Dominion.

PROMISED RAILWAY

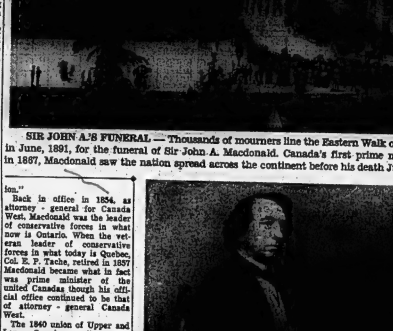
Manitoba was carved out of the northwest in 1870. British Columbia joined the new Dominion in 1871 on a promise that Canada would build a railway across the continent.

It was the financing of the railway—and of the Conservative party—that brought about the resignation of Macdonald's government in 1873, and brought the Liberals to power for the first time under Scottish-born premier, Alexander Mackenzie.

Defeated at the polls and discredited by scandal in which he personally and the Conservative party were involved, Macdonald set out to rebuild the party and the leader—something done by only one other prime minister of Canada, W. L. Mackenzie King.

Macdonald's vision of an independent, stable nation found its way into the National Policy, which he preached as the country's only salvation while the Liberals preached free trade. The protection of Canadian industry by tariffs was its core. And Macdonald won a sweeping victory in 1878

Work was started again two years later on the railway to the Pacific, and completed in 1885. This, according to Macdonald's biographers, he himself counted his greatest achievement.



'MYTH MAKER'

When he returned to office at the age of 63, Macdonald was, as Prof. Creighton titled his second volume, The Old Chieftain. In 1891, in his last election campaign and the one that brought on the stroke which killed him, the Conservative slogan was "The Old Man, the Old Flag, and the Old Policy." Seventy-five per cent to 80 per cent book on the prime ministers of Canada, titled his first chapter on Macdonald The Myth Maker. Few men in Canadian politics have contributed as many yarns and slogans.

"You would rather have John A. drunk than George Brown sober," Macdonald once told an election rally.

"A man 'un to look at, but a rare 'un to go," he told a farmer, likening himself to an old, decrepit horse still able to travel.

"I will say this for that old scoundrel John A. Macdonald, that if he once gave you his word, you could rely on it," said Sir Richard Cartwright, a Conservative who left the party after 1877 and became a Liberal minister of finance.

THE OLD CHIEFTAIN' — The 150th anniversary of the birth of Sir John A. Macdonald will be celebrated Jan. 11 in Kingston, Ont., the city in which his family settled after immigrating from Scotland in 1820. A combined civic and state banquet is to honor the memory of the architect of Confederation who became the Dominion of Canada's first prime minister. (CP Photo)

Japan, Once a Rice Eater, Cultivated Carefully by U.S. As a Good Wheat Market

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—A hard-sell United States campaign to hold and expand its big Japanese wheat market is going on right inside the bakery ovens.

The U.S. wheat industry and the agriculture department have teamed up to teach Japanese bakers how to produce the best bread from a flour formula containing half American hard winter wheat and half hard spring grains.

Japan is the best U.S. customer, buying a record 73,500,000 bushels in the year ended last June 30.

The 11-course training program being given for Japanese bakers indicates the tough competition for the Japanese market, including Canadian grain.

ANGRY AT CANADA

It also helps explain the anger which last year greeted the Canadian Wheat Board's decision to sell at a fixed price over several months to Japan—in effect helping peg the price and tying up a chunk of the Japanese market when wheat prices were on the rise.

Japan, once a rice eater, has been cultivated carefully by the U.S. as a good and expanding wheat market, with a rising standard of living and a big population.

The U.S. initially got a foothold through wheat give-aways but sales faltered around 1950 when Japan began to buy her wheat.

Canadian sales to Japan began to rise and have been running higher than 40,000,000 bushels annually.

Last year, in an attempt to match the high quality of the Canadian grading system which is a world trademark for excellence, the U.S. revamped its own standards. Its new standards reduce the amount of foreign material—weed seeds and so on—that can be mixed with the wheat.

NO CLEAR PATTERN

Sales so far under the new standards don't show any clear pattern, agriculture officials say.

But they express optimism about the baking instructions given through the All Japan Bakers Association. It is expected that most of the large Japanese bakers will have participated before the end of the year.

The American emphasis on hard winter wheat for mixing with hard spring underlines the fact that the U.S. has both to sell and whereas the bulk of Canada's wheat for export is hard spring wheat.

The U.S. is also continuing to work hard on advertising generic Japanese uses of wheat flour other than bread—promoting cake mixes, dry noodles, crackers, even sandwiches through department-store demonstrations, bakery seminars and research projects.

Britain And U.S. Trying To Cool Gold Gamblers

U.S. Treasury Warns Speculators in Danger

LONDON (AP)—The British and U.S. treasuries have made counter-moves against speculators scrambling for gold and putting pressure on the staggering pound sterling.

Financial circles here said today the vast world-wide gamble in gold appeared to be fizzling out under pressure from London and Washington. The U.S. treasury warned that speculators were liable to burn their fingers.

The gold rush put new strains on the Atlantic alliance, as some financial writers blamed President Charles de Gaulle's government for not correcting misconceptions about French plans to weigh $150,000,000 in U.S. dollars into gold.

Market operators reported that the London gold market had its heaviest dealings Friday since the peak of the Cuba crisis in October, 1962.

The Paris gold market, too, had to cope with a wild scramble. The treasury said Thursday's turnover was up 300 per cent on the average day's dealings.

The heavy and sustained private demand—pushed the London price of gold up by four cents to close with an unusually wide margin at $35.17 to $35.20 an ounce.

The four-cent jump in price reflected the acute buying pressure in the market. It took the price close to the upper limit of the "gentleman's agreement" at which the pool operates.

The gold pool is a vast stock of gold held by the Bank of England, on behalf of an international syndicate of foreign governments, with which it attempts to regulate the price of the metal.

Despite further advance in the gold price above $35.20 woulds theoretically—put the dollar at a discount compared with the free market price of gold. So this is the price at which the central banks must try to peg the price.

The U.S. treasury warned Friday night that speculators would "inevitably and on the losing side." It said the entire U.S. gold stock was available to support the dollar in international transactions. The "inevitable price of $35 (an ounce)."

The treasury said that the London gold market was in firm control and that the market price was allowed to fluctuate merely in order to make speculation more costly.

French planes, summoned earlier this week, to switch some dollar holdings into gold, reported none of completed devaluation. This renewed pressure on sterling, less than seven months after a $3,000,000,000 rescue operation by 11 nations to support the British currency.

Part of the gold rush started when private individuals switched their paper money into the precious metal. Others nervous of holding English pounds, switched them into dollars.

Today's Chuckle

Now that winter has arrived, watch that frosty skid stuff.

Gold Stocks Tumble

TORONTO (CP)—Speculators watched the gold index on the Toronto Stock Exchange, which they had pushed up in a day and a half of trading, fall more than 10 points in three hours Friday.

The fall came after the United States treasury department warned speculators hoping for a price rise in gold that they would "inevitably end on the losing side."

Analysts here could not remember so fast a fall in gold stocks.

An index of 12 major gold producers, set up in November, 1963, had its greatest decline, dipping 10.08 points in three hours to close at 175.89.

This followed an announcement by the treasury department Thursday that action would be needed regarding the requirement that U.S. reserves be backed 25 per cent in gold.

According to U.S. banking law, there must be 25 cents in gold reserves for every dollar in circulation and held in bank reserves.

DEFLATES INVESTORS

The statement at noon Friday shot down investors hoping for a big profit by saying that the present system governing the price of gold would not be changed.

Gold sells currently for $35 (U.S.) an ounce. During hectic buying Thursday and Friday, kilo bars here were selling for about 50 cents over this amount.

One Toronto analyst explained Friday's drop in the price of gold stocks this way:

"Speculators came into the market for golds, hoping the U.S. would raise the price. So they pushed golds' prices ahead far beyond what they're worth on their normal performance.

"The U.S. treasury statement (Friday) apparently kills any hope of a price increase, so there was nothing to keep the gold stocks up any more."

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Temperatures are expected to drop steadily today and tonight over all regions reaching near 35 degrees below zero in central regions and near 5 above in the south.

As a result a cold wave warning has been issued for all regions. Snowsqualls in the Algoma, Lake Huron and Southern Georgian Bay regions will be accompanied by heavy drifting due to the gale force winds crossing the Great Lakes. Sunday will also be cold as it will be entrenched over Ontario with temperatures remaining below zero in the south and reaching between 10 and 15 degrees above in the south.

Many Flights Cancelled as Fog Blankets Most of Southern Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Fog blanketed most of southern Ontario Friday, forcing the cancellation of about 100 commercial airline flights and causing hazardous driving conditions and accidents.

Cold air that covered the Prairies for several weeks began to move east and south early Friday and combined with a warm flow of air from the Gulf of Mexico to cause fog, drizzle and cloudy skies.

Air Canada, which operates 120 flights in and out of Toronto daily, estimated that about 6,000 passengers were affected by the cancellations. During the afternoon, the airline took passengers by bus to London, Ont., to catch flights to Western Canada.

Morning, evening rush-hour traffic in Toronto was slowed to a crawl, with a series of minor accidents reported. On the multi-lane Highway 401, accidents were reported at the rate of one every five minutes between 7 and 8:30 a.m.

In the Hamilton area, Vera Lynn Jurgenson, 12, was killed by a truck in fog as she ran from a school bus towards her mother.

Temperatures rose with the arrival of the fog and at least two records for Jan. 8 were set in Ontario. Windsor reported a high of 58 degrees, nine degrees higher than the previous record. Timmins reached 34 degrees in the early afternoon. Its previous high for the date was 32 degrees set last year.

As the cold heavy mass of air from the West continues to move in the fog is expected to lift. Snowflurries are likely and temperatures are expected to drop to about 25 or 30 this afternoon.

Restore Power to Civilians

By PETER ARNETT

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese armed forces agreed today to hand back to the civilian government the power they grabbed in a purge on Dec. 20.

A five - point communique turned legislative powers to the chief of state, Phan Khac Suu. It did not agree to reinstate the High National Council, which was dissolved in the purge.

Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Khanh, commander-in-chief of the armed forces, signed the communique with Suu, Premier Tran Van Huong and two deputy prime ministers.

The civilian government will be charged with "organizing a national assembly probably with a direct vote in the cities and an indirect vote in the countryside," the communique said.

It added that the seven members of the High National Council arrested in the purge will be released immediately.

The action appeared to have ended, at least for the present, South Viet Nam's three-week-old political crisis.

ISN'T IDEAL

But a U.S. embassy spokesman said the agreement did not represent "everything we think ideal," but comes close enough to make it possible for the American mission to deal with the new government.

Renewed talks on increased American aid, suspended since Dec. 20, were expected soon.

While the political maneuvering took place in Saigon, the Communists attacked a company of Vietnamese soldiers 110 miles southwest of Saigon, killing an American officer.

In the city of Hue, 400 miles to the north, a Viet Cong mortar crew tried to knock out a Voice of America station transmitting broadcasts to North Viet Nam but did not succeed.

Buddhist leaders in several communities fanned strikes and demonstrations against the Huong government.

ACCUSED CAT BURGLAR RETURNS — Allan Kuhn, on left, one of three playboy aquatic acrobats accused of stealing the priceless Star of India sapphire from the New York Museum of Natural History, is escorted by detective after arrival at New York from Miami. Precious Gems Kept Month In Bus Terminal Locker

NEW YORK (AP)—The priceless Star of India sapphire and eight other precious gems were kept safe for 25 cents a day in a Miami bus terminal locker for almost a month.

This amazing twist of the $410,000 theft of 24 jewels from the American Museum of Natural History here Oct. 29 came to light with a climactic break in the bizarre case Friday.

The gems were flown here from Miami, along with Allan Dale Kuhn, 26, one of the three Florida beach boys accused of executing the master robbery.

Kuhn had led New York detectives to the famed sapphire and other jewels in a deal touched with mystery and intrigue. He apparently was bargaining for leniency for himself and his two companions, Jack (Murph the Surf) Murphy, 27, and Roger Clark, 29.

The gems were recovered in the public locker, encased in a rotting, waterlogged chamois bag. They still were wet, indicating the glittering loot had lain some time beneath the sea. The defendants are experienced swimmers and divers.

It was reported that the locker had been used everyday since Dec. 12.

Since Tuesday night, Kuhn had been trying through telephone calls to bring about the recovery of the jewels. Detectives were near him at all times. Then at 3 a.m. Friday, a mysterious telephone call came at a Miami hotel.

Detective Richard Maline heard the caller say: "The jewels are in a locker in the bus terminal at Northeast Fourth Street."

The key was picked up and the jewels soon were on the way back to New York.

Producers Hit Cheese Policy

By ALEX MORIN

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government's campaign against second grade cheese just isn't going over with the cheese maker.

After listening patiently to defences of the government's stand, the annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers Marketing Board ended its two-day meeting by proposing that the innovations of last year be cancelled.

Steps also were initiated aimed at fighting passage of petition of Quebec cheese producers who are taking an increasing share of the domestic cheese market and making inroads into exports to Britain.

The meeting adopted a resolution seeking approval from

Hopes Strike Will Combat Starvation

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Waters, 37, a Sudbury insurance salesman, said on Thursday what he hopes will be a week-long liquid diet in a bid to interest Canadians in raising money to combat starvation as a 1967 centennial project.

"It would be a wonderful thing if on July 1, 1967, a symbolic cheque in the amount of 'X' millions of dollars could be held aloft as Canada's centennial contribution to the world's hungry," he said in an interview.

Mr. Walters, a native of St. Thomas, said he has received complimentary telegrams from friends after a $2,000,000 rescue operation by 11 nations to support the British currency.

Part of the gold pool started when private individuals switched their paper money into the precious metal. Others, nervous of holding English pounds, switched them into dollars.

amount of money is needed to help those under developed countries combat starvation effectively.

"I felt that while churches and other groups are making noble efforts to help the world's hungry, individual Canadians haven't done much."

Mr. Walters, who said he weighs about 150 pounds, plans to drink water and milk until Thursday evening when he will have a regular breakfast.

He told his wife he was content to Toronto to try to find a sponsor for his diet and when she learned he really meant to embark on a fast in a downtown hotel, "she became very concerned." However, he said, his wife has known since last summer that he planned to do it.

"Canadians have a responsibility to help the billions of hungry people in the world," he said. "It's only because of God's providence that we live in Canada and not beside a rice paddy."

A devout Roman Catholic who served two years as lay administrator of the diocese of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Mr. Waters said "humanitarian interests" rather than "Christian principles" had led him to try the fast.

"I think an excellent Canadian centennial project individuals might take up is one in which they would go on a temporary diet and donate a dollar for each pound they lose to the anti-hunger organization of their choice."

In addition to periodic stomach rumblings, Mr. Waters's main complaints are that he's lonely and bored.

"I wish I had a paint-by-numbers kit and a few more people to talk to," he said. "I haven't much money so I guess I'll stick pretty close to my room until next Tuesday."

While he didn't have a physical checkup before beginning his diet, Mr. Waters said he isn't afraid of starvation.

"I've always had good health, which is a lot more than most of the world can say."

Maintain Plane Ignored Demand It Identify Self

Left Trenton on Jan 6, Was on Way to Sinai

TEL AVIV — An RCAF transport plane, which departed Trenton, Ont., Wednesday, for Gaza was fired on by an Israeli fighter Friday night.

The plane was a Hercules, Transport Command's newest giant workhorse, and a spokesman at Trenton base said "there may well have been" Trenton aircrew in the crew.

The Hercules, based with 435 squadron at Namao, near Edmonton was under the command of Flight Lieutenant Dudley McWilliams.

Names of his aircrew were not available at Trenton.

A Trenton spokesman said the aircraft left there January 6. From there it flew to Namao thence to Europe.

An Israeli military announcement said the Hercules carrying supplies to Canada's contingent in the United Nations forces on the Gaza strip — ignored repeated demands for identification.

The military announcement said: When the fighter reported the Canadian aircraft was unarmed, its pilot was ordered not to shoot it down.

The announcement said the intruder was sighted at 7 p.m. Friday over Israeli territory between Gaza and Ashkelon.

The intruder's pilot ignored a request for identification carried over the international communications channel from Lydda Airport, the announcement added.

The four - engined Canadian plane flew north to the Ashkelon area and later swerved westwards to sea when the interceptor gave signals demanding identification, the announcement said.

"When the intruder did not reply and failed to identify itself our fighter gave him some warning bursts taking care not to hit the former."

A later check with Nicosia, airport showed that the intruder was a Canadian plane on its way from Italy to El Arish in northern Sinai, an Israeli spokesman said.

The United Nations representative here was asked to find out why the plane did not identify itself.

Macdonald, Cartier Likely New Name for Highway 401

TORONTO (CP) — Highway 401, the multi-lane expressway which will span southern Ontario, will be renamed the Macdonald-Cartier highway, it was learned Friday.

A government official said Premier Robarts of Ontario will announce the change Monday at a dinner marking the 150th anniversary of the birth of Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister. The remaining will honor Sir Georges Etienne Cartier, the Quebec leader in Confederation.

At the same time, Mr. Robarts is expected to announce a joint federal - provincial pro-

Young Canadians Concerned

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Young Canadians are showing such discouragement with federal politics that their leaders are concerned about the next generation of Canada's law-makers.

The presidents of the university and young peoples' organizations in both the Liberal and the Progressive Conservative party were interviewed by The Canadian Press on the attitudes to politics of young people in the light of the marathon flag debate and the allegations of bribery and coercion attempted by ministerial aides.

With a single exception—top port of the new flag by univer sity Liberals—they condemned, in varying degrees the activities of their political elders.

Walter Gesellchen, 20, national president of the Young Progressive Conservatives, said in Halifax that across the country he has found young persons of all parties "extremely disturbed" by performances of MPs in the Commons.

"It has always been difficult to get Canadian young people interested in politics, because a politician was thought of as a second - class citizen — someone who could not be trusted.

"The latest happenings have done nothing to dispel that and have compounded the difficulty in getting young people interested in politics."

In Montreal, Michel Robert, president of the Young Liberal Federation, said his members have expressed "a certain desire for deep reform."

What happens in Ottawa in the next six months "will determine what will happen to the new federal Liberal organization being built in Quebec by younger party members, Mr. Robert added.

Pilot Walks, Crawls Twelve Miles With Broken Ankle, to Save Man

THE PAS, Man. (CP) — A pilot, walking and crawling with a broken ankle, reached civilization Friday in time to save one of two passengers in his crashed plane. The other passenger was dead.

Lyle Gibson, 31, of The Pas crossed 12 miles of remote snow - covered country in temperatures that dipped to 30 below to 30 miles-an-hour winds to reach a spillway station near the hydro community of Grand Rapids, 250 miles north of Winnipeg.

There a young Indian and companion found Gibson, who broke his ankle when his plane crashed Thursday, on the floor next to an electric heater.

Gibson said the plane's location was passed quickly to search parties, who found one Manitoba Telephone System employee alive but severely frost-bitten and another dead.

Gibson and Fred Wark, 32, of The Pas, underwent treatment in hospital here and were in good condition. In Grand Rapids, RCMP were reported to be making arrangements to move the body of Don Snider, 55, home to The Pas.

Jack Lamb, one of six brothers who operate Lamb Airways in this northwestern Manitoba town, said Gibson was flying a Lamb plane with telephone employees aboard towards Grand Rapids early Thursday.

Over Cedar Lake, or more than halfway along the 94-mile wilderness route, Gibson reported by radio everything was fine. That was the last heard from him.

Lamb said Gibson flew into a "white out"—a condition existing when snow hase made no horizon can be seen—over Cross

Moving to Owen Sound in 1937, she transferred her interests to the Board and Women's groups of Westside United Church, and during the war years she gave much of her time as a volunteer supervisor in the Red Cross sewing rooms.

Returning to Peterborough eight years ago, Mrs. Geary rejoined St. James United Church of which she was an original member when it was formed in 1908. Until her illness she continued to be active in the groups to which she belonged, and particularly in the making of quilts with her weekly sewing group. Her keen interest and capable leadership in all phases of Christian Education work had been recognized with life membership awards in the United Church Women's Association, Women's Missionary Society and the Women's Christian Temperance Union. She was also a member of the Golden Mile Club.

Besides her husband, she was predeceased by one brother, Lionel of Peterborough, Wesley of Owen Sound and Ernest of Lethbridge, Alta. Surviving is one brother, Bert of Peterborough and four grandchildren.

Macdonald Plaque Was Made in City

The blue and gold plaque commemorating Sir John A. Macdonald and scheduled to be unveiled Monday in Glasgow, Scotland, was made in Belleville by Aluminum Star Products.

Given a blue background and gold lettering, the 36 by 30-inch plaque will stand in the parish church where Sir John A. was born 150 years ago.

To create the plaque, a model was made of wood, placed in a plywood box, and the box then filled with a special, chemically treated sand.

The box was covered, turned over, the wooden model removed, and the imprint in the sand filled with hot aluminum. A second blanket of prepared sand was then placed over the back of the casting.

When the metal cooled, the now aluminum plaque was removed, polished, painted and coated with a lacquer type finish.

The Golden Years
Aged Widow Made Wise Choice By Striking Out on Her Own

By THOMAS COLLINS

"My husband died nearly six years ago. I was then 65 years old. After expenses were met, I had $6,500 and a pension of $65 a month . . .

Here was the crossroads of a woman's life. She could sit and whimper, as some do. She could throw herself on her children or other relatives, as many do. Or she could strike out for a new life, as few have the courage to do.

The widow quoted above decided to strike out.

"I first went to live with my son and his wife," she says. "But I had no wish to be semi-dependent on them, or on anybody else. I thought of a job. But as you know, it is almost impossible for a woman of 65 who has never worked outside her home to find employment in business. I turned to the one thing that held some promise for me — a position as a housekeeper . . .

Such a position, she says, could mean nothing but distress to her social conscience daughter - in - law. So she moved out of the home, and out of town, going to a city almost 1,000 miles away. She had one connection with her past, and her husband had lived there years ago when he was attached to a regiment stationed there. She had liked it. With this slim thread, with her $4,500 and her $65 pension she reached for a new life.

HAS EARNED ENOUGH

"In the five years that have passed since," she continues, "I have been working as a companion - housekeeper. If I decide to retire at 72, which is only a few months from now, I will have earned in my own right a pension of $72 a month. I will have increased my $4,500 to better than $15,000, which I have safely invested. With my pension added to these I will have a lifetime income of $183 a month. Which is enough."

The widow says she is working now for $40 a week, plus room and board. Since the people she works for would normally be well-to-do, there are fringe benefits. There is frequently maid service in the house, giving her time to read and study, to play the piano. She owns a car — a legacy from a recently deceased employer.

"I am happy, and I am independent," she says. "As for my son and his family, I visit them. It's much better this way."

There are many opportunities for older widows to do what this widow did. The opportunities lie mainly with rich people . . . older widows left alone who do not want to leave their lovely homes and are looking for refined companionship; older couples who want to shed the responsibility of running a home and servants; younger couples with small children who want to travel or lead an active life outside their homes.

CHANGES NECESSARY

Widows setting out to capitalize on such a position — as housekeeper, companion, housekeeper - companion, or whatever — would first have to overcome what pride stood in the way. A widow who had walked tall as the wife of a business or professional man would have to go through the humiliation of agreeing to accept what is, in fact, a position as a domestic. But it might be better than the alternatives open to her. And it might come to be a life she moved to another city to try it.

She could find such positions by placing a want ad in the paper; by registering with an employment agency; by talking to friends who might be in touch with wealthy people.

As a rule an older widow who becomes a housekeeper - companion in a wealthy home would expect to be on more or less formal terms with her employer, and to spend her hours upstairs and in the back rooms rather than in the living rooms. But it is not always thus. Some women in these positions have become dear friends to the woman they serve, have been given a secure role in the woman's personal and social life, and companions have travelled with their employer to the glamor spots of the world.

Scouter Ronald Bailey conducted the ceremony and the Rev. Henry G. Fungs officiated as chaplain. After a welcome to the guests by Scouter Bailey, Assistant Scoutmaster Hamilton Scott outlined the origin of the Queen's Scout award.

Following the parade with Queen's Scout Stephen Middleton, Belleville, Scout Douglas Donald, Bancroft and the combined Troops of the 1st and 2nd Bancroft groups.

Following the reaffirmation of his promise and laws, Scout Scott was presented with his badge by his Scouter, with his Queen's Scout ring by Lloyd Price, secretary-treasurer of the 2nd Bancroft Group Committee, his plaque by Cecil McAlpine, vice-president of the Madawaska Boy Scout Council and with his scroll by M.W. McAlpine, reeve of the village.

Area May Have Satellite TV Station

BANCROFT — Bernie Shapiro, chairman of the Bancroft and District Chamber of Commerce, has announced that if approved by the board of broadcast governors, CHEK-TV, Peterborough, will establish a satellite station about a mile and one-half east of Bancroft. An option has been taken on the property and the station is submitting a brief to the board shortly.

This action by the television station will certainly provide excellent reception to most of the residents living in areas where reception at the present time is very poor or non-existent. It is expected that if the application is approved the station will be operating within three months.

LAVENDER FLU

Your grandfather probably knew this cure. Flowers of lavender quilted in a hat were supposed to ward off "sinister" noses and head colds. Pleasant treatment—but certainly not a sure cure. Today, thanks to medical science, we have numerous effective vaccines . . . against flu, whooping cough and other respiratory diseases . . . to immunize and protect us from the discomforts of infections. So, why suffer needlessly. Ask your physician about them. Let him prescribe the medication that is most effective for your needs. Then come to us for prescription service.

THE GREATEST MODERN MOVEMENT
Toward Improved Health

More than one-third of our nation's people voluntarily and freely pay for medical or hospital care as always through cooperative insurance plans. This is probably the greatest voluntary movement toward improved health and welfare in the history of the world.

Every phase of this activity is laudable. The cooperation of industry and its employees, and the foresight of breadwinners to invest money in their families' health in advance of actual need, are evidence of progress. Active participation of the medical profession is evidence of its stature.

The desire for improved health, and the newly found personal pride and dignity of the individual are universal; and you may depend upon us, as upon your physician, in the achievement of these objectives for your family.

"Can't Handle Liquor"

Discrimination Bans Eskimos From Bars

By STUART LAKE

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP)—It has been three years since the House of Commons heard charges of discrimination against a Canadian company for prohibiting employees from fraternizing with Indians and Eskimos.

The company was merely following government policy laid down in 1955-56 for contractors working on construction of the DEW line across the Far North, a policy the government dropped in 1963.

But discrimination still exists in the North—and nowhere is it more apparent than in this Baffin Island community of 1,300 persons, most of them Eskimos.

The handful of private clubs here bar Eskimos from membership. Whites are allowed to bring natives to the club as guests but are not encouraged to do so.

"They can't handle their liquor," one spokesman for the clubs said. "They used to be a friendly, trustworthy people but now. . . ."

The community is divided into two residential areas—one for whites, the other for Eskimos.

When the Americans operated a Strategic Air Command base here, Eskimos weren't allowed within three miles of it. Most non-whites saw the inside of the sprawling $8,000,000 building for the first time last year when the building was taken over by Canada.

URGED TO BUY

The problem is one of the most vexing facing Commissioner B. G. Sivertz and the nine men who make up the governing body of the territories.

They are convinced that one step forward would be to change the government housing policy of providing houses for civil servants living in the North.

Public servants now are being encouraged to vacate their Crown-owned homes and buy their own. Since the Crown owns the entire town it is advantageously low rents and carry a subsidy on services, few civil servants have made the move.

One thing seems certain—if there are to be mixed neighborhoods, it will have to be whites moving among the natives. Few Indians or Eskimos could ever afford to buy homes among the white districts of such communities as Inuvik or Fort Smith.

In these centres the monthly cost of sanitation, heating and electricity alone is greater than any other barrier.

One white resident of the serviced area of Inuvik says he believes the natives are not interested or the least concerned about such comforts as flush toilets, water rushing from a tap or well-lit residences.

But it's hard to believe they prefer having their drinking water delivered by barrel and using plastic bags for toilets.

Cold-Wave Warning Issued To Ont. Regions

TORONTO (CP)—A cold-wave warning was issued for all Ontario regions today by the weather office, with temperatures expected to plunge tonight as low as 35 below zero in the north and to five above zero for southern points.

The severe drop — temperatures reached as high as 50 at Windsor Friday—will mean a saving of more than 70 degrees for some points. White River, for instance, at a high of 37 above zero Friday, will get 35 below tonight.

As the temperatures dropped, the thick fog which covered central Ontario Friday lifted. Normal flying conditions were forecast for today after about 180 commercial airline flights in and out of Toronto were cancelled between 7 a.m. and midnight Friday.

Early morning temperatures in Toronto today were still in the 50s following the mild spell which accompanied the fog. But the mercury tumbled down before 9 a.m. Snow was expected during the afternoon.

Final Hurdle In Auto Deal Nearly Cleared

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — The final hurdle toward a Canadian-American deal for free trade in new cars and parts is understood to have been virtually cleared, and a decision close to the government said Friday the arrangement is "pretty well sewn up."

The only remaining snag—prior to formal governmental agreement—is getting a firm commitment from General Motors to fulfil the conditions attached to the proposed agreement. This is understood to be close to completion following talks here between Industry Minister Drury and President E. M. Walker of General Motors of Canada. Officials expect a formal GM agreement early next week.

The main condition of the free trade arrangement is that the auto industry agrees to increase the Canadian share of its North American output. This would prevent the U.S. parent firms from flooding the Canadian market with lower - priced American cars at the expense of their subsidiaries in this country.

The free trade agreement will not result in any immediate major reduction in the price of cars in Canada, although officials say it will ultimately lead to similar prices in both countries. U.S. car prices now are substantially below those in Canada.

The officials say the plan could be a major shot in the arm to the Canadian industry, which now will have access to a huge new market.

The higher price of autos in Canada is due chiefly to higher production costs.

The United Automobile Workers had asked the Canadian government to withhold formal agreement on the plan until it could be assured that jobs would be protected in the Canadian industry. The government's attitude is that this question should be settled between union and management.

With all the major points on the verge of being cleared away it was thought likely that Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson would initiate the agreement when they meet in Washington Jan. 15.

Alberta Govt. Moves to Aid Stricken Cattle

EDMONTON (CP)—The Alberta government and private citizens moved this week to help livestock and game through the grimmest winter since 1906, when 50 per cent of southern Alberta's livestock perished.

Conservation attempts started as forecasts gave hope of moderation in the weather.

At Alberta and Saskatchewan rounded out a month of almost constant 20-below zero weather, estimates of cattle losses ranged up to 1,000 head in southern Alberta.

The pheasant population, particularly in southern Alberta, was estimated to have been cut drastically from 30 to 80 per cent in some areas.

Saskatchewan conservation officials asked farmers to spread feed for upland game birds but the Saskatchewan government has so far taken no specific action to remedy the situation.

Cattle were dying of starvation and exposure, particularly in the normally snow-free shortgrass country of southern Alberta and southwestern Saskatchewan. Wildlife officials reported seeing hundreds of pheasants and some Hungarian partridge either suffocated in snow-covered bush or numb and starved along highways.

The latest count, close to 200 antelope had been killed by trains in Alberta and Saskatchewan as they ventured on to railway tracks searching for food.

the government for the word "Ontario" to accompany the "Canada" stamp on Canadian cheese exports. The British market has traditionally been exclusively Ontario territory although 3,500,000 lbs. of Quebec cheese entered last year. Ontario exports of 20,000,000 pounds satisfied only half the U.K. demand.

The resolution was passed in as many days of the government's quality incentives was made by Lucien Lamoureux, MP for the cheese-producing constituency of Stormont.

He said the 1964 change in subsidy to 3.5 cents a pound from quality cheese instead of 20 cents a hundredweight on cheese milk had accomplished the end of bettering quality.

The resolution passed unanimously by the 300 delegates at the end of the convention and that the government return to the subsidy payment of milk received by cheese factories produced and that the export subsidy return to three cents.

Byron Hall of Belleville, Ont., a district representative for Dundas County, said cheese production for the year would have been higher had it not been for the drop in subsidy.

Despite the dissatisfaction with the subsidy changes the delegates gave an indication that winter production will rise sharply and possibly satisfy most of the domestic market.

How About a Centennial Auditorium

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce thinks this city needs a larger public auditorium than any now available.

Most citizens will agree.

The Chamber believes that the ideal way to provide it would be to incorporate it in the new proposed high school in West Belleville.

Present plans call for the school to have an auditorium with fixed seats, after the style of that in the Belleville Collegiate, rather than a combined auditorium and gymnasium, like those at Quinte and Moira schools.

The new school's auditorium, however, will seat only 800 people, less than the number which can be accommodated at the BCI.

The Chamber of Commerce wants the auditorium enlarged. This makes sense. It would obviously be the cheapest way to provide the city with an auditorium of adequate size.

But the Bay of Quinte High School Board makes sense, too, when it objects that it is not its business fill such needs.

Somehow, too, we doubt the wisdom of paying an additional $25,000 or so to provide an auditorium whose total capacity would be only two or three hundred above that of the present BCI auditorium.

If we are going to build a public auditorium, should we not keep probable future needs in mind? It would seem to us that its seating capacity ought to be nearer 1,500 than 1,200.

Belleville has made preliminary application for a centennial Federal grant for the development of Zwick's Island, although details have not been worked out. The Federal Government has granted a lengthy extension, until Aug. 1 of this year, for the filing of centennial applications for grants. A public auditorium would appear to be a worthwhile centennial project, which ought to win Federal approval. Might it not be advisable to reconsider the selection of the Zwick's Island project and to study the possibility of erecting a public auditorium which would serve the city for years to come, either as part of the new West Hill secondary school or, if deemed advisable because of the school's location or some other factor, at another site?

Perhaps, if we hurry, it would be feasible to combine these projects. But certainly for a project of this size to be sufficiently advanced in planning by the first of August, immediate decisions would be required.

Unless the auditorium is made a centennial project, can we afford to provide a really adequate public auditorium, even in conjunction with the new school?

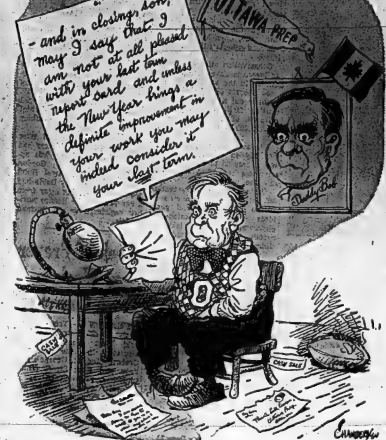
Either the auditorium we could afford would not be large enough to meet all our needs for years ahead, should we undertake a project which would meet only present needs?

These are questions which should be answered by persons with special knowledge, of the demand for larger facilities, of construction costs and of the possibility of combining government grants of various kinds.

All Should Be Members

Concern is being expressed over the effects of Indonesia's withdrawal from the United Nations.

Some see this as the handwriting on the wall. If Sukarno is permitted to walk off in a huff over the UN decision to seat Malaysia on the Security Council, there will be a precedent which other nations can follow if they do not get their own way.



It is surprising, though, that those who now view such a development with alarm include nations which made it likely.

If nations are to be prevented from withdrawing from the UN, then it would be logical to require that all nations should become members. Instead, some nations which sought membership have been refused it.

The UN constitutional requirement that member nations should be "peace-loving" has long since been proven impractical. What is needed is pressure to require all states to be members; the more war-like they are, the greater the urgency that they should be placed under the restraints, slight though they be, which UN membership imposes.

Seen from the moon, the earth would be magnificent indeed. Its light would be much more brilliant than full moonlight at home, partly because the earth would appear considerably larger in the lunar sky and partly because it is a better reflector of sunlight. Its albedo, or reflecting power, has been estimated as almost 40 per cent, which compares very favorably with the 7 per cent of the moon. — Patrick Moore speaking on The Earth Seen from Space'.

These Minority Foster Parents Can Act Pretty Tough

To Your Good Health
Children Suffer Arthritis As Well as Grownups

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: For several months my 3-year-old girl has cried because of her legs hurting. My neighbor says it is caused by growing pains. But in the last two months she has been crying during the day as well as at night. She also wakes up at night crying, and a heating pad is all that helps her. The pain is in her knees. Could this be growing pains? — Mrs. L.O.

"Growing pains" is a term used to explain any sort of pain in a child which is not easily identified as something else.

It does not hurt anybody to say, if there is pain, it means that something is wrong.

So now let's divide the pains of children into two separate groups: the accidental pains which don't need any attention; and the serious pains which do need attention.

Children who spend all day running, playing, climbing trees and the millions-and-one other things that active children do, can become overtired. At the end of the day their muscles, (especially in the legs) may rebel. The muscles go into spasm (cramps of a sort) as these youngsters begin to relax.

Sooner or later such children learn not to overtax their muscles. They don't drive themselves to the point of cramps. And that's the end of the so called "growing pains."

But this three-year-olds, it's different. These little girls don't have the good sense to sit down and rest when they begin to get tired. Oh, occasionally children of this age become too tense and too tired, and have an occasional muscle cramp shortly after they have been tucked in bed.

But they don't wake up later in the night crying and they don't cry in the daytime from such cramps.

The aching knees could be arthritis. Arthritis of a certain type (rheumatoid) can attack children as well as adults. Or there could be one of the various bone diseases. There may be a defect in the feet; possibly a calcium deficiency; or there may be a congenital defect which ought to be treated. Lots of things.

So here is my answer:

1 There is no such thing as "growing pains."

2 Children who are too active can have muscle cramps, and the cure is to see that they have a nap (or should we say a "rest period" in the afternoon?) to relieve the strain.

3 But when children cry, day and night, with a pain, something is wrong.

The chances are that it can be corrected, but the child should be taken to a doctor for examination.

There's an old saying, "The best way to duck a job is to do it."

It could be made to read, "The best way to cure a medical trouble is to admit that it is trouble."

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible to have asthma without positive allergies? — B. P. H.

Yes, it a possible, especially in older people.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 10-year-old daughter has dandruff. How can I get rid of it? — Mrs. T.

Dandruff at that age suggests a skin disease. Consult; dermatologist (skin specialist) rather than waste time trying to correct the problem on a hit-or-miss basis.

• • •

Much heart trouble is preventable. Write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Say 6 Meals A Day Best

Sarnia Observer

Not being hampered by too much fat, we are inclined to skip over all of the information about dieting. Yet dieting is a popular conversation piece in almost any company. Women are dieting because they want to keep a girlish figure. Men are dieting because they are conscious that overweight might cause complications to their general well being. But people still go through the routine of three sizable meals each day.

Now some scientists are of the opinion that probably people should content themselves with six light meals per day rather than gorging themselves with a balanced breakfast, a lusty lunch and a king-size dinner, plus an occasional evening snack.

So the problem of when and how much to eat goes on and on. The nutrition experts have been trying out experiments on rats and so far the results point to healthier rats when fed six times a day rather than three times.

We don't know the normal eating habits of rats, since we are not that fond of rodents of any type. But if the experiments are extended to humans it could change a whole range of habits and would put the coffee break to shame.

Imagine what would happen to union contracts for instance, if there had to be clauses designating snack times during the normal work day. School routines would have to be adjusted also and housewives would no sooner get one set of dishes washed than it would be time to prepare another meal.

What six meals per day would do to the average grocery bill also defies imagination. Most housebolders know that eating, while necessary, is also expensive and who would determine whether six snacks were better than a good-sized slice of roast beef with pie a la mode as a chaser?

Moreover, the diet proponents would have to go out of business and there would be a dearth of topic to discuss when other conversation lagged.

The scientists may have their experiments but at or less people are going to go right on having their three meals a day with in-between coffee breaks, chocolate bars, cookies and all other things which put on poundage.

To brighten the corners of his home and also add to the spirit of the Christmas spirit in the street, a William Street resident had decorations hanging on asset overgrown tree of the front of his home with coloured Christmas tree electric light fixtures. When lighted at night the two trees added much of the Yuletide spirit to that section of the city.

However someone stripped the bulb fixtures from the overgrown on Christmas night. Police who were called to found footprints in the snow about the trees, but there was no sign of the person who made the coloured bulbs. With present priorities on Christmas decorations of this nature, it is impossible to replace the bulbs.
